(Lubin-Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THE appeal of this picture lies in the leading female character who suffers from the law's injustice or its miscarriage of justice. Nina, a factory girl, steals from her employer to save the life of her little brother. She is caught and the factory owner offers to discontinue prosecution if she will but pay the price.

The price refused she serves a term of three years in jail and comes out hardened toward the world. Her chance for revenge comes when she secures a job as secretary to the factory owner's son, who is serving in the capacity of campaign manager for his father. The son fixes the accounts and the girl gets the evidence, taking it to the opposition party.

As a result the son lands in jail and the girl is avenged of the man who never gave her a chance. Helen Wolcott as Nina gives a most appealing performance. She has a varied series of expressions, each one of them of unusual significance and her performance is always the center of the action.

The picture takes the side of the underdog from start to finish and succeeds in bringing the spectator up to the realization of the injustice of the law, even though it be fulfilling its duty.

Edward Sloman has again scored a success with his directorial ability. The action moves swiftly, his scenes are well arranged and for spectacular effects he has staged a realistic cabaret setting.

The supporting cast includes such favorites as L. C. Shumway, George Routh, Mercedes Diaz, Adelaide Bronti, William J. Spencer and Milton Flynn.

ILLINOIS EXHIBITORS MAKE APPLICATION FOR MEMBERSHIP IN THE NATIONAL BODY

Chicago, Jan. 15.

AT the last regular meeting of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of Illinois, held Friday, January 7, the state organization formally made application for admission to the Moving Picture Exhibitors League of America and an application for a charter was filed.

This move will completely harmonize the exhibitor's interests throughout the state. The local organization is now in complete accord with the larger federation, from which it once seceded.

At this meeting officers pro tempore were elected to serve until the time of the state convention, which will be held Tuesday, March 14, in Chicago. G. M. Luttrell of Jacksonville, Illinois, was elected president of the Illinois State Branch, No. 2, Moving Picture Exhibitors League of America.

Other officers elected for this branch were, Julius A. Alcock of Chicago, vice-president; William J. Sweeney of Chicago, state treasurer; and Sidney Smith of Chicago, state secretary. The nomination and election of officers was unanimous.

"FRUITS OF DESIRE"

(Brady-World Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

ROBERT WARWICK is featured in this latest of World Films and his personality which combines the manly and the romantic is the outstanding merit of the five reels. As Mark Truitt, the ambitious man who by sheer force of will, hard work and an appreciative employer rises until he becomes a power in the manufacturing world, Warwick constantly excites admiration.

"Fruits of Desire" also offers something in the way of novelty in its educational series of scenes photographed in a large steel mill. They are interspersed very generously among the scenes depicting dramatic action and are some of the most interesting bits the writer has seen.

The picture is based on the story, "The Ambition of Mark Truitt" and is one of those dramas that turns out to be rather episodic due to the different characters introduced in various stages of the story.

Its construction is somewhat fragmentary at times because several of the episodes introduced could have been avoided and more attention paid to the complete delineation of the central characters.

Perhaps the scenario writer preferred to follow closely the plan of action laid out in the novel, and if that be the case "The Ambition of Mark Truitt" was hardly the desirable article for screen production.

SUCCESS THAT SPELLS DISASTER TO OTHERS

Oscar Eagle, the director, has secured wonderful atmosphere for "Fruits of Desire." The scenes in the steel mills already mentioned are excellent, and on the other hand his exteriors showing the huge factory works and the dirty little street, Rose Alley are most realistic.

The story tells how Mark Truitt rises in the financial world from a laborer to a business power. Because he so promised he marries his old love in his home town. With wealth she becomes a shallow butterfly and they are separated.

Truitt then turns his attention toward Kazia, a girl with whose father he lived when a laborer. Her brother, physically and mentally imperfect, makes an attempt on his life and also plans to destroy his mills with a bomb but he is defeated by way of a strong climax and the end finds the two lovers happy.

Madeline Travers as Kazia, Dorothy Fairchild as Truitt's first wife and Robert Cummings as the manager of the mills fill the other principal roles, while Alice Francis, Ralph Delmore, D. J. Flanigan, James Mack, Adolphe Lestina, Philip Masi, George Ross, Harry Weir, Ezra Walck, Adolph Parina, Julia Stuart, Phyllis Haseltine and Mildred Havens complete the cast.

The camera man has not succeeded very well with his exteriors.

"THE FOURTH ESTATE"

(Fox Film—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

DIRECTOR FRANK POWELL has made Joseph Medill Patterson's stage play into a picture which captures the spectator's interest, both by its setting and by its plot.

It is a story of newspaper life, and the offices and mechanical departments of the Chicago Herald furnish the backgrounds. True newspaper atmosphere is thus gained. The melodramatic "bunk" usually found in photoplays which employ newspaper color is refreshingly absent.

Ruth Blair and Clifford Bruce are the leads, and their acting is uniformly good. Victor Benoit gives an impersonation of a reporter, and conducts himself as a reporter would, which is about the highest praise we know how to give. Alfred Hickman as Judge Bartelmy, whose evil designs on Mrs. Noland (Miss Blair), a part of his general scheme of crookedness, are frustrated, is excellent. And Samuel Ryan, in the role of Bartelmy's henchman, does a fine bit of character work. Aline Bartlett is the other principal in a cast which has realized well the opportunities offered.

THE JUDGE GETS HIS DUES

The ever-fascinating workings of a newspaper plant are shown in some detail, particularly near the end of the play. The story which seals Bartelmy's fate is written, set up on a linotype machine, proofs are pulled, the type is placed in the form, the form is shot to the stereotypers, the plate is cast and turned over to the pressmen. Then the big presses are shown at work, and the completed paper is carried to the circulation department, which passes out copies to the newsboys.

We narrate all these items of newspaper routine, which happen day in and day out in big plants, for the purpose of showing that the picture has genuine realism in it. It is the kind of realism that ought to find its way to the screen more often.

The story itself possesses nearly all the elements vital to a screen story, and it has been skilfully managed. The characterization is well defined, suspense is built up gradually, and the climax is dramatic.

In some of the scenes the photography is noticeably dark, but we imagine this is due to the difficulties of lighting properly a big newspaper office. Anyhow, the screen needs good stories more than it needs perfect photography. Almost any picture nowadays is excellent as to photography. Few present excellent stories. "The Fourth Estate" is one of the few.

"BECAUSE HE LOVED HER"

(Keystone-Triangle—Two Parts)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"BECAUSE HE LOVED HER" serves as the funny and thrilling medium by which Sam Bernard is introduced to Triangle patrons. Bernard is a good comedian and is responsible for a neat sum of laughs, and moreover his name is valuable, but there is much more than Bernard and his name in the comedy. It is typically Keystonian which expresses a lot.

As far as we can determine the two-reelers, produced by Mack Sennett and his lieutenants prove successful because of the following plan of action; first eccentric business and much of it, and secondly a long succession of hair-raising stunts, done in a comedy way.

Each thriller is outdone by the one preceding it, so naturally the last ones leave the spectator in a nervous state of excitement. Mack Sennett, however, will never merely stop at one stunt. His slogan is "More and more."

The business, or the most illuminating features of it, in "Because He Loved Her" consists in shooting fish when they jump in the frying pan, and getting out of the way of popping frankfurters. The restaurant is the scene of action and the chef and the proprietor are rivals for the hand of the cashier.

The chef gets peeved and puts the contents of a bottle marked "poison" in the proprietor's pie. The sister of the cashier takes the pie home and then follows the chase in which the sensational is introduced. After all it is discovered that the poison was whiskey.

Bernard is given excellent support. There is Mae Busch as the cashier who looks delightful and there is Harry McCoy as a cook who majors in backward falls. Glen Lavender is the proprietor, while in the midst of two scenes appear Ford Sterling and Charlie Murray.

"FIRING THE BUTLER; OR, THE BUTLER'S FIRE"

(L-Ko-Universal—Two Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

SLAPSTICK as defined a year or so ago, and applied to comedies in which real slapstick, bricks, pies, fruit and other fodder supplied appropriate ammunition for the comedian's catapult arm has been misused of late. The real slapstick affairs have almost wholly given way to the comedy in which horse play and "business" is perpetrated.

Consequently the picture in hand is popularly known as a slapstick comedy to distinguish it from its halfbrother that moves about as a "parlor" comedy, but "Firing the Butler; or, the Butler's Fire" is void of bricks, hen fruit and miscellaneous products of the country fields. It is "business" comedy from start to just before the close when a fire scene is introduced, adding the spectacular touch.

In the great majority of scenes the "business" falls to one Dave Morris, whom many will remember as a Biograph and Keystone player. He is ridicuously laughable in these two reels.

A ludicrous makeup, eccentric clothes, and original tricks aid him to a praiseworthy extent. As a butler he is mistaken for a father-in-law by pretty Gertrude Selby and so the elaborated plot can be easily imagined, but the laughs can not.

Morris carries a huge carpet about with him and when hungry extracts from the middle of it a yard loaf of bread, sliced lengthwise and containing varieties of ham from the Virginia kind to just plain delicatessen stuff. Salt is in his vest pocket, and the appetite lies in his stomach; and there you are, and there's a lot more that we vouch for but tremble at describing.

The finicky would prefer it cut to a flash, but that's the only fault. Reggie Morris is the husband while Fatty Voss as usual has his humorous little bit as the effeminate job-hunter. He finally finds one as a trim parlor maid and he gets a laugh.

Mr. Lehrmann has produced a real winner in this.

"THE BAIT"

(Horsley-Mutual Masterpicture—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

A TOUCH of allegory has been used to start off this story, but the opening scenes are merged quickly and smoothly into the theme of the story, and before one realizes it, he is in the midst of a whirling melodrama. "Whirling" is right; for the action is fast; and the high lights keep up a constant flash.

This means that, although the picture does not portray a generally familiar phase of life, it is entertaining, and should have a wide appeal. There is enough of novelty, enough of sympathy, and enough of beautiful photography to entitle it to a fair rank among feature pictures, and Director Bowman may take a little just pride in his production.

Margot is used by her father, and supposed husband, Tom, as the "bait" in a low saloon and crooked gambling resort in a mining and ranch town. One of the victims in a gambling game protests, and a pistol fight follows. Margot's father is seriously wounded, and he believes he has killed Tom.

They wander for a time, then the the father is injured by a fall; he is rescued by a trapper and with Margot is taken to the trapper's cabin, where the father dies; before death he confides to Margot that she was never really married to Tom.

Six months later Margot is married to the trapper, and is supremely happy. Then Tom and his gang appear in the interests of a rival fur company, and begin to work up dissatisfaction among the men. The trapper goes to a neighboring town to get money with which to quiet the men, and in his absence Tom finds Margot.

Alarmed at the prospect of her happiness being ruined, she hides him, and after her husband has returned, Tom steals the money he has brought; the trappers accuse the husband, and later Tom steals the "rainy day" fund which they had saved up.

Driven to desperation, Margot lures Tom out to the big animal trap, in which a puma has already been captured, and he falls in and is killed. Margot then confesses her record as "The Bait," and tells of Tom's theft; his body is searched, and the missing money found.

The trapper receives Margot back to his arms, and all ends happily. Betty Hart gives a convincing portrayal of Margot, as does William Clifford of Bruce, the trapper. Others in the cast are Oliver C. Allen, Frederick Montague, Edward Alexander, Marvel Spencer and others.

BOSTON OPERATORS, LOCAL NO. 182, RE-ELECT HEAD AND SECRETARIES

AT its January 5 meeting ,the Boston Moving Picture Machine operators Protective Union, Local No. 182, elected the following officers for 1916:

President James F. Burke (re-elected); vice-president, "Nat" May; financial secretary, Prescott J. Young (re-elected); recording-corresponding secretary, Maurice Rothenburg (re-elected); treasurer, John H. Fullick; business representative, William Frank; trustees, Fred Seabrook, Martin Sullivan.

"PEGGY"

(Triangle-Kay-Bee—Five Parts)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

BILLIE BURKE is here at last and "Peggy" quite naturally is chiefly Billie Burke. We must confess at feeling a little disappointed when scene after scene unfolded itself and no vestige of plot appeared.

We were not restless by any means, for these phases of the picture gave Billie Burke a fine series of opportunities to effect comically fetching mannerisms, but we wondered when something definite was going to happen.

And happen it did with a flash, a subtitle transformed the entire situation, changed the picture from comedy to drama and so there was no cause for worry after all. "Peggy" then gives plenty of variety, its contrasts are strong, and Peggy herself, is always the pert, attractive, pretty and lively Billie Burke.

The picture continues to a close with its characters moving in a dramatic story. C. Gardner Sullivan has, as is his usual wont, paid great attention to the delineation of his characters. Acts they perform determine their calibre to a noticeable degree.

Sullivan has likewise taken advantage of his one big situation and played it up to its fullest possible limit. He mixes human interest touches among the various stages of the heavy denouement, prolonging it as long as he is able to without losing the interest. Very happily he does not overwork it.

Miss Burke, as we remarked before, is the greater part of "Peggy." Thomas H. Ince who personally directed the picture has seen to it that she appears to the greatest advantage possible.

Miss Burke's head is shown from every angle. There are close-ups, which display her full face, profile, back and intermediate views in something of a monopolistic way. There is a certain fascination about each one of these individual pictures.

PEGGY MASQUERADES AS A MAN

The role of Peggy is modeled especially for the vivacity of the star. "What do I care for conventionality?" is what Peggy might say if the celluloid could convey words to its audience. Her entrance to the staid, old Scotch village for instance is uproarious.

Scotch villages on Sunday don't like automobiles, especially when driven by a young girl who considers sixty-one miles an hour slow. Every inhabitant of the village is duly shocked, and this by no means excludes different species of live stock. Bits like this make "Peggy" unusually funny.

Peggy is introduced, drenching her guardian's guests by directing a water fountain on them, and from there on until installed in Scotland she is capricious.

Then the drama comes, when it is discovered that the son of her uncle has allowed his feelings to walk away with his better judgment in point of loving a certain girl. Her father demands justice and Peggy forces her cousin to see the light. This is the situation that is prolonged in such a powerful way.

Peggy's own love affair is carried on with the minister of the town who loves her first and last. He has to be a little more broad-minded before winning Peggy and his transformation adds more delightful humor to the tale.

William H. Thompson defines the character of the old Scotchman to a most effective degree. His scenes with Peggy are fraught with much humor due to the striking contrasts of the two characters. William Desmond does what little he has to do as the minister very well and Charles Ray as the erring youth is wonderfully expressive. Nona Thomas, Gertrude Claire and Truly Shattuck furnish the support.

PEGGY PREACHES A SERMON

The settings of the picture are quite ideal. A whole village street scene has been arranged adding materially to the realism. The various types introduced are fine, we have in mind particularly those introduced in the Scotch inn where on a stormy night Peggy masquerades as a man. The subtitles are considerably well and appropriately decorated with art work, while the photography coming from Inceville needs no mention.

"Peggy" will beyond the shadow of a doubt win thousands more admirers for Billie Burke. She is utterly captivating and plays charmingly. And "Peggy" is, mostly because of Billie Burke, a charming picture.

"THOU SHALT NOT COVET"

(Selig-V-L-S-E—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY 2nd

THE story of this release enables Tyrone Power to present a very impressive contrast in acting. In the first half of the picture, his character is a conventional, drawing room type, and in the latter part of the drama, he is the cave-man barbarian he interprets so well. Kathlyn Williams has a chance to present her forte, too, in her encounters with leopards and other jungle beasts. Some of these scenes are exciting and really dangerous. The most spectacular feature of the picture is the shipwreck, in which more than a thousand extra people take part. This scene is one of the best of its kind ever produced.

The plot, inspite of its occasional ramblings, is strong and nearly always convincing. The semi-tragic ending is logical, and if the long arm of coincidence is strained a bit now and then, the resulting effectiveness justifies it.

The whole picture is a pictorial representation of the story a man is writing in his diary. The subtitles are his entries in the diary. Many years before, he was unhappy with his vixen wife, and began to love his neighbor's wife. When his neighbor was called to Africa on business, he felt his unlawful love overpowering him, and he took a ship for Egypt.

In Cairo he saw the woman he loved; she was there to meet her husband. All three were on board a vessel that was wrecked. With his neighbor's wife in his arms, he reached the shore—apparently the sole survivors. The shock deranged the woman's mind, and she thought the man was her husband. They were happy for a time, until the woman was attacked by a leopard, and regained her reason. Her husband, who was not drowned, appeared, and a passing ship picked up the re-united couple. The lonely man who loved his neighbor's wife made his way to the interior of the country to pass his blasted life.

Guy Oliver and Eugenie Besserer are in the support. Colin Campbell was the director.

"WILD OATS"

(Kleine-Edison—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

NO one can complain of lack of action or melodramatic intensity in this picture. Nor will they find themselves amid unfamiliar surroundings, or associating with characters strange to them. The picture is a melodramatic cut off the usual piece of cloth, and offers nothing new or original, either in plot or handling.

Nevertheless, it is well done. The direction and acting are all good, and the story is clearly expressed. The production is handled in a thoroughly workmanlike manner, and nothing is allowed to go unexplained.

There is an aged architect, with Jessie his daughter, Roy his dissolute son, and Carew, his heroic and faithful secretary. Carew loves Jessie, and she returns his affection, but the architect thinks her too young to marry, and Carew's visits to the house cease.

Roy, the son, falls into the clutches of Madison, a rival architect, and under the spell of Cleo, Madison's mistress. He becomes involved in gambling debts, and is led to steal bids and plans from his father's office, and his mother's jewels from the safe at home; the plans he turns over to his father's rival, the jewels he gives to the woman, but she, realizing what they are, gives them back and makes Roy return them.

The discovery of the theft is too much for the architect; he is seized by an attack of heart failure and dies. Carew, who has visited the house for a clandestine meeting with Jessie, is suspected and arrested.

Then Roy comes to the front; he confesses his part in the theft and renounces Cleo and all the past life, and by some means avoids arrest after confession. Cleo has fallen in love with him, but she realizes that further association would keep him on the downward path, and indulges in a little renunciation herself.

A MATTER OF I. O. U.

The scenes are all laid in business offices and homes. There are comparatively few exteriors. The sets are well adapted to the portrayal of the strata of life represented in the story, and the camera work is exceptionally efficient.

In the cast are Malcolm Duncan, Alma Hanlon, William Anker, Herbert Hayes, Frank Belcher, Ruby Hoffman, and others.

"AS A WOMAN SOWS"

(Gaumont-Mutual Masterpicture—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

LOVE, business and politics are mixed in practically equal quantities. The result is entitled to be considered a drama of modern life, and it has a great deal of real dramatic merit. Moreover, it handles problems which, if not familiar to everybody, will be generally understood, and of general interest.

The theme is not new, it is the old one of a wife who feels herself neglected by her husband who gives too much time to his business.

In this case, the husband is in politics; he devotes his time to the pursuit, not only for his own sake, but with the sincere intention of advancing his wife, socially and materially. He is successful, and becomes the mayor of his town.

Then two women, who have anything except the wife's interests at heart, persuade her that the husband's neglect is studied, and is the result of cooling love. They induce her to try the time-tried remedy of rousing his jealousy. This she does by a desperate flirtation.

So successful is she in rousing her husband's jealousy, that she soon finds herself deprived of husband, home, and her little son. Too late she finds that she cannot turn to another man for protection, or anything substantial.

She has been his plaything, and she further learns that she has been misled by her women "friends." Her husband's love had not cooled, but he was simply engrossed on the big case of his life, which meant everything to both of them. This she learns too late.

There is in the story a rather solid preachment for the type of women represented; that is, the woman of narrow vision and petty ideas, who sees nothing beyond the immediate action. This type is well acted by Gertrude Robinson; she has given the part a great deal of sincerity. Opposite her is Alexander Gaden, who is dignified and serious as the young husband.

The settings and locations are all in excellent keeping with the action. The play, which is by C. A. Nelson, is well constructed, and the direction of William F. Haddock capable throughout.

"LORD LOVELAND DISCOVERS AMERICA"

(American-Mutual Masterpicture DeLuxe—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY 2nd

IF you ever tried to trace a picture onto a piece of transparent paper, you probably discovered that you neglected to trace some of the lines, and that while the copy looked all right when covering the picture, yet the paper, when removed, looked more unfinished than the original. The writer uses this laborious metaphor in an attempt to explain the lack of unity and continuity in many screen adaptations of novels and spoken dramas—faults that crop out in some degree in this picture. In packing all the salient points of a three hundred page story into five reels, quick and varied action is obtained, but sometimes at the expense of instant intelligibility.

Lest the foregoing sound like a formidable indictment of this particular feature, be it said that this screen version of the Williamsons' novel makes a very good picture.

Arthur Maude, who takes the part of Lord Loveland, is not only a sterling actor, but being a native Englishman, he can lend peculiar conviction to the thoroughly British role he assumes. The supporting cast is very strong, including in it Constance Crawley, William Carrol, Charles Newton, and Nell Franzen.

Lord Loveland decides to recoup his family fortunes by marrying an American heiress. He goes to America, and then follow his interesting experiences.

CENSORSHIP

A simple method of killing proposed legislation which threatens the life of the industry

DAVID HORSLEY was the first independent producer and manufacturer of motion pictures in America.

His productions have been released in turn on the Universal, General and Mutual programs. He is absolutely the only manufacturer whose pictures have been so honored.

During all the years that Mr. Horsley has been producing for the three greatest programs in the world, he has never issued an "immoral, inhuman or indecent" photoplay—or one that has been even faintly suggestive.

His productions have been invariably clean and wholesome—and yet great money makers from the very start—an undeniable proof that decency is profitable.

Down in Washington the House Committee has been conducting a hearing on a bill providing for Federal Censorship of motion pictures—an obnoxious measure, which, becoming a law, would have a ruinous effect upon manufacturers and, through them, upon exhibitors.

Being desirous of learning, first hand, whether the general run of motion pictures was as bad as the sponsors of the bill declared, a highly influential legislator visited a Washington picture theatre last Wednesday. The feature of the day was a David Horsley (Mutual) in which the famous Bostock Animals appeared.

After the performance the legislator made this enthusiastic statement:—

"I never saw a better or more interesting picture. The acting of the animals astonished me, so that I got not only the thrill and suspense of a fine drama, but a gratifying bit of instruction as well. If this picture is a sample of the kind now in general distribution I can see no excuse at all for Federal or any other kind of censorship!"

As a matter of fact, nearly all present day pictures are clean and, in varying degrees, instructive. David Horsley's Cub Comedies, featuring George Ovey, are founded upon clean wholesome fun. They are now selling at an average of 73 copies per week! Crane Wilbur, who appears in a David Horsley 5-Reel Mutual Masterpicture, De Luxe Edition, has a world-wide reputation for dignity and refinement, and a rare histrionic gift. His plays are universally popular.

We believe it to be but a matter of a very short time indeed when all the productions of all the manufacturers will be, for sake of self preservation and progress, as clean and wholesome as the David Horsley Productions; then all forms of Censorship will be as ridiculous as unnecessary.

In the meantime, let the Exhibitors unite in supporting only the manufacturers who unselfishly and unswervingly stick to clean pictures.

And remember that if you are to continue in business your own interests will best be served, censorship or no censorship, by running clean pictures.

David Horsley Productions are big money makers because they are clean, technically high class and always tell an interesting story.

CENSORSHIP IS UNNECESSARY

"THE UNWRITTEN LAW"

(California Motion Picture Corporation—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

THIS picturization of Edwin Milton Royle's stage play affords Beatriz Michelena opportunities for strenuous emotional acting which she realizes well, presenting an impersonation which is convincing in itself.

In externals—that is, in photography, lighting, and sets—"The Unwritten Law" is thoroughly acceptable. Fade-ins and close-ups are managed with skill. Many of the interiors are rich; the atmosphere of low life into which the action is carried is gained successfully; the court room scene, as far as the set goes, is excellent; when extras were needed, the director picked good types, and there are other evidences of careful and intelligent direction.

The story, which moves very slowly chiefly because of the repetition of scenes, concerns the downfall of John Wilson, through the political perfidy of Larry McCarthy, who is determined to win Kate Wilson away from her husband.

Wilson becomes a drunkard, finally deserting his wife and child. McCarthy comes to the rescue, pays the bills after Mrs. Wilson and her child have been injured in a fire, and promises to marry the mother.

When he is about to break this promise by going away with his mistress, Mrs. Wilson kills him. Wilson, appearing on the scene just after the murder, takes the blame. He is finally cleared when his wife, her memory restored by hypnotism, rushes into the courtroom, takes the stand, and explains all.

As is perfectly evident, the big scene is the court room scene. Here Miss Michelena does her best work. It must be said, however, that the manifest opportunities for dramatic suspense in this scene have not been realized in the highest degree.

There is a lack of continuity, which was noticeable also in the earlier footage. We should say that this is probably due to insufficient care in editing. Nevertheless, the court room scene is interesting, because Miss Michelena makes it so.

The cast is good. Second honors go to Andrew Robson, who rendered the character of Larry McCarthy in a finished fashion. William Pike is entirely satisfactory as John Wilson, and Irene Outtrim is good as McCarthy's mistress.

Other members of the cast are: Matt Snyder, Frank Hollins, Clarence Arper, Baby Felice Rix, and Nina Herbert. Capt. Leslie Peacocke made the scenario. President Beyfuss, of the California Corporation, personally supervised the production.

RAILROAD COMPANY OFFERS LAND TO MANUFACTURERS NEAR SAN FRANCISCO

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 10.

RECENT reports that motion picture producers were considering locations outside of Southern California, have led to the submission to the manufacturers of two offers of territory close to San Francisco.

Walter Arnstein, president of the Oakland, Antioch and Eastern Railways, announced, after a conference with land owners, that an offer conveying in fee simple and with absolute title more than 250 acres of the most valuable holdings in Alameda and Contra Costa counties, would be made to the moving picture men as soon as satisfactory details concerning their term of residence could be arranged.

Arnstein said he and his associates would guarantee the offer of fifty acres at Pinehurst, one of the "show places" along the railway of the Oakland, Antioch and Eastern Company, between Oakland and Sacramento.

William R. McStay, general agent of the Mount Tamalpais and Muir Woods Railroad Company, has left for Los Angeles to lay an offer from that corporation before the motion picture magnates. H. Buckingham, general manager of the company, announced that the film companies could have all the land they wished for studio purposes on the slopes of Mount Tamalpais.

Robert Newton Lynch, president of the Chamber of Commerce; Guy T. Wayman, president of the San Francisco Realty Board; and McStay had a conference here before McStay left for Los Angeles. Wayman will follow McStay to the South to see the Universal, New York, Selig, Lubin, Kalem—in fact all the film companies—in reference to the concessions offered on Tamalpais.

FOUR WEEKS AHEAD OF PRODUCTION GIVES PROCTOR CHANCE TO MAKE SCENARIOS FOR GAUMONT PERFECT

SINCE proper attention cannot be given scenarios that must be rushed to the directors, the Gaumont company has arranged its work so that the scenario department will always be a month ahead of the demands of its Mutual Masterpicture directors.

"We have things well in hand," said George D. Proctor, scenario editor, "and are now putting the finishing touches to the manuscripts that will not be put in work until this time next month. Working four weeks ahead we can give the utmost individual attention to each manuscript. This final polishing assures the director that he is to have a manuscript that has both continuity and dramatic action.

"I am just completing the picturization of 'The Show-Down,' an unusual story we purchased from Lionel Barrymore and Wright Huntington. Joseph H. Trant has finished and sent to Jacksonville a scenario written in conjunction with Paul M. Bryan, who wrote 'The Idol of the Stage' and 'Lessons in Love' for Gaumont. Captain Leslie T. Peacocke has delivered an unnamed mystery scenario, and 'The Wonderful Desire' has been received from John B. Clymer."

SELIG PREDICTS NATURAL HISTORY INSTRUCTION IN SCHOOLS BY MOTION PICTURES

WILLIAM E. SELIG, president of the Selig Polyscope Company, believes that within the next few years the motion picture camera will have been installed in every school house. Films teaching natural history and science can impress the pupil, and give the future generations a thorough and comprehensive knowledge of arts and sciences.

The method of motion picture instruction can also be made most entertaining, and there will be no more urchins reluctant to start forth when the school-bell rings. Methods of horticulture, the birth of a flower, the haunts and the habits of wild animals, agriculture and many other subjects can be taught as well, if not better, through the medium of motion pictures.

Many of our universities and schools are already utilizing the motion picture camera, and I believe the custom will become universal before many years.

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"An Adventure in the Autumn Woods." (Biograph. Mon., Jan. 24.)—This is another reissue, directed by Griffith, and includes in its cast Lionel Barrymore, Mae Marsh, W. Chrystie Miller, Harry Carey, Walter Miller and Charles H. Mailes.

The old woodsman returns through the woods from the trading post, with a small bag of gold which he has received for his produce. He is held up by robbers, but manages to save the gold, and badly injured, reaches his cabin. His son, taking the gold for precaution goes for a doctor, and his granddaughter meets the thieves, who are still pursuing the aged man.

She overhears them plotting to waylay the son in the forest, and slips out ahead of them. She finds her sweetheart, and the two warn the young man and bring aid, capturing the bandits.

"Stronger Than Woman's Will." (Biograph. Three reels. Wed., Jan. 26.)—This is a strong story of a woman who spurned love for the sake of ambition and a "career." She is beset by numerous suitors, but she tells them of her "destiny" and casts them all off. A strong man, however, loves her, and stands by, watching her work out her "destiny" as an artist

He finds her in danger from some of the very men whose love she has scorned, and steps in in time to save her. She fights against him, recognizing in him the symbol of her own weakness and inability to eope with the forces arrayed against her, and finally capitulates and yields to him.

There are a number of really dramatic moments which are well handled. Vera Sisson, G. Raymond Nye, Charles H. Mailes, W. J. Butler, Madge Kirby and Jack Mulhall compose the east.

"The Strange Case of Mary Page." (Essanay serial.)—The first installment reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"Folly." (Essanay. Two reels. Tues., Jan. 25.)—Not shown for review; the story follows. Robert Morse, a rich widower, finds a baby girl on his doorstep and adopts her. Twenty years later she marries a rich Westerner, and entertains on a lavish scale.

Rand, a society idler, falls in love with her, and invites her and her guardian to his Adirondacks camp. Here he forces his attentions on her, and when Morse tries to interfere, Rand knocks him down. In terror she flees from Rand, and by chance stumbles into the cabin where her husband is vacationing.

He makes short work of the pursuer, and, thoroughly repentant, his wife goes into his arms.

In the cast are Richardson Cotton, Darwin Karr, Ann Kirk, and Randall McAlister.

"The Fable of Flora and Adolph and a Home Gone Wrong." (Essanay. Wed., Jan. 26.)—Not only are the George Ade sub-titles delieiously funny, but the good acting of Charles Stine, Fred Wagner, and Alice Edwards intensifies the humor. Good directing was evident throughout the picture.

When the Modern Solomon in charge of a Divorce Mill had the matrimonial Miss-Fits led in, the first case was that of Flora and Adolph Botts. This pair were evidently as happy as a couple of Panthers.

Flora put a Soft Needle in her voice and rendered the Sob Stuff. She said she had Histrionic Talent, and that her Worse Half was always telling her to Lay Off the Mush. Adolph said that Poetry was his middle name, and that he and a Genius in a Hat Store had composed a Comic Opera. He also said that Flora was Soft under the Turban, and did not like the Stuff. Old Sol called the fight a Draw. Moral: Genius must ever walk alone.

"Destiny." (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., Jan. 29.)—Not shown for review; the story follows. Robert Gray and Richard Waldron are rivals for the hand of Ethel Dixon. She accepts Waldron, but Gray succeeds in getting his rival drunk, and Ethel breaks the engagement.

When Waldron discovers Gray's duplicity, he knocks him senseless, and, thinking him dead, flees. He becomes an outcast, and sinks to the depths. Many years later, an old client of his tells him that Gray was stunned, not killed, and persuades him to go back to his people.

Waldron once more becomes a successful lawyer, and finally he marries Ethel.

In the cast are Bryant Washburn, Ruth Stonehouse, Edmund F. Cobb, and Charles J. Stine.

"Snoop Hounds." (Kalem. Tues., Jan. 25.)—A comedy release in which Bud and Gus appear as rival detectives and each one gets a job tracking exponents of a divorce suit. "Tracking" is used guardedly, as the reel is given over in the majority of scenes to this method of action.

The eomedy of Bud and Gus is of the cut-and-dried variety that always seems to reaeh its audience, while Bud with his laughable physique and popular personality will add much to the value of "Snoop Hounds." Ethel Teare and Jack MacDermott are the other principals.

"The Villain Worshipper." (Kalem. Two reels. Wed., Jan. 26.)—One of the "Stingaree" numbers original in plot but handicapped by too much footage. There is a great portion of padding before the belated elimax arrives, and it is magnified to a tiresome extent by the performance of Director James W. Horne as Oswald, the youth envious of Stingaree.

Horne devotes too much space to himself. However, "The Villain Worshipper" has some suspense, generally in its latter stages while the adventurous and romantic charaeter of Stingaree as created by True Boardman is fascinating when on the screen.

"The Fate of Ameriea." (Kalem. Fri., Jan. 28.)—This instalment of "The Adventures of Marguerite" is based on the story of a foreign spy attempting to glean valuable data in America. The fate of Ameriea is not diselosed in "The Fate of America," it being left to be learned in another chapter.

The reel here in hand has some very good light effect, some trick settings, in the way of sliding doors and other devices and an amount of suspense that well retains the interest.

"Tapped Wires." (Kalem. Sat., Jan. 29.)—The sensational scene in this "Hazard of Helen" hardly registers because it failed to appear as the producer wished it. An automobile is shown going over a forty-foot embankment containing three men.

But the car goes slowly and refuses to turn over and the "men" sit stolidly in their seats. But the rest of "Tapped Wires" is good. There are a number of other scenes tinged with the sensational which have the desired effect. The story is a familiar one but is done with considerable skill.

"The Little Sister of the Poor." (Lubin. Mon., Jan. 17.)—Julian Louis Lamothe has conceived in this a most telling drama, notable for its simplicity and its powerful climax. Melvin Mayo in the production of it has done very well while Francelie Billington and Helen Wolcott the two most prominent members of the cast do exeeptional work. There are several scenes laid in a disorderly house, but the general tone of the production practically overshadows their disagreeableness.

"Tom Martin—a Man." (Selig. Three reels. Mon., Jan. 24.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"Apple Butter." (Selig. Sat., Jan. 29.)—This latest of the Chronicles of Bloom Center has more new comedy situations and more ingenious slapstick stunts than most of the reeent relcases of this series. The scenes showing an old-fashioned eountry fair will bring a reminiscent smile to the faces of most people. The Bloom Center cast does unusually good work.

Johnny West's mother loses the apple-butter contest at the fair, and filial loyalty prompts him to break up the exhibition. He perpetrates a number of laughable pranks, until a confidence man sells him a three carat diamond ring for two dollars. This diamond turns out to be a real sparkler, and the bunco artist, who found it and sold it so cheaply, kicks himself around the lot.

"Selig-Tribune Pictorial," No. 3.—Meyer London, only socialist in Congress; fight between tiger and hyena at Selig jungle zoo, Charles P. Taft signs away Chicago National baseball club; activities of German field hospital corps. Mayor Pricto, Carranza official of Juarez, Mexico; $10,000 sheep dog shows human intelligence in handling large flock of sheep, Jerome, Ariz.; and other general news. The subtitles of this number are printed in three languages, English, Italian and German.

"The Ruse." (Vitagraph Broadway Star Feature. Three reels. Sat., Jan. 29.)—In plot, staging and acting, this is one of the best three reelers we have seen. Ruined by his business rival, Morgan Dallas attempts revenge by using his knowledge that the brother of his rival's wife is a crook.

The husband puts his wife to a test which eventuates in a shooting affray in his home, but everything ends happily. Joseph Kilgour, Harry Morey, Charles Kent and Naomi Childers, the principals, are excellent. Others in the cast are Denton Vane and Helen Pillsbury. Eugene Mullin wrote the story and directed the piece.

"Hearst-Vitagraph Pictorial," No. 2.—Seventh U. S. Cavalry, San Franeiseo Business Men's Racing Assoeiation eonvenes, New Orleans; Carranza's forces take over government from Villa's army; the Swedish schooner Carolina wreeked off coast of Texas; skating in New York; Mr. and Mrs. Walter Estes living the simple life in the Maine woods; Belgian troopers going into action; Canadian cavalry at sabre practice in England; Lucille Todd demonstrates a demountable suit ease carrier in Chicago; automobile race, Los Angeles; President and Mrs. Wilson at Hot Springs, Va.; "Her Busted Romance," a Gloom-Joy cartoon by T. E. Powers.

"Hearst-Vitagraph Pictorial," No. 3.—Strikers in Youngstown, O.; Samuel W. McCall inaugurated to gubernatorial honors, Boston; members of Olympic club hold water carnival, San Francisco; Thessaloniki survivors arrive in New York; a goat farm in Dumbarton, N. H.; latest fashions; trying out new sea-sled at Boston; Harvard track team practices at Cambridge, Mass.; German marine artillery in action; animated cartoon by T. E. Powers.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"Sammy's Dough-Full Romanee." (Vogue. Thurs., Jan. 20.)—Sammy Burns, the acrobat-comedian starring in these one-reel eomedies, in this release cuts loose in a bakery, and the proverbial bull in the china-shop hasn't very much on him. Sammy introduces several new athletic stunts from his seemingly inexhaustible repertoire, as well as some of the favorite old ones.

The plot is not complicated: Sammy is the boss baker for the owner of a pastry shop. He is in love with the proprictor's daughter, and she reciprocates his affection. The old man doesn't approve, and fires Sammy. The latter disguises himself, and is re-employed. He puts Limburger cheese in the bread, so all the patrons of the shop go elsewhere for the "staff of life." With ruin staring him in the face, the shopkeeper is glad to bless the children and recover his lost patronage.

"The Girl of His Dreams." (Cub. Fri., Jan. 21.)—In this comedy, Jerry has a touch of reincarnation. On a poster advertising "Julius Caesar" he sees a Roman maiden who strikingly resembles Gladys; he goes to sleep in a hayloft and dreams he is a Roman emperor, and he and Gladys are having a great time.

His slaves are carrying him to bed, when he wakes to find the slaves are policemen looking for a band of burglars, and have seized upon Jerry as the most suspicious thing in sight. Jerry proves an alibi, then joins the search for the thieves.

He finds them, is attacked and puts up a terrible fight, in which the thieves' den is set on fire, and explodes. But he recovers the loot and then finds it was taken from Gladys' home; this makes him "solid" with Gladys. George Ovey, Jefferson Osborne, Janet Sully, Belle Bennett and Louise Horner head the cast.

"The Man in the Sombrero." (American. Two reels. Tues., Jan. 25.)—The romance in this idyllic love story often verges on the saccharine, but Harold Lockwood and May Allison keep most of the cloying quality out by their very humanness. The ability of Tom Ricketts for selecting appropriate mountain scenery, and in effective directing, is evident throughout.

Jack Betson, leaving for a hunting trip in the mountains, goes to his father's hat factory, and is photographed there in a sombrero, to illustrate a hat advertisement. Alice Van Zant, an heiress, sees the picture in a magazine, and thinks she could fall in love with the original. She does fall for the original when circumstances bring them together, and when Mrs. Van Zant finds out that Betson is not a rough cow-person, but quite eligible, she consents to their marriage.

In the support are Harry Von Meter and William Stowell.

"Some Night." (Beauty, Wed., Jan. 26.)—The word "some" in the title is used in the slang sense, and is quite applicable. The preposterous plot adds to the humor furnished by ultra-speedy action that often verges on the slapstick. Fifty or more girls in dishabille give atmosphere to the boarding school interiors, as well as furnishing a harmlessly unconventional display of pulchritude.

Dick, in love with Gladys, invades the precincts of Miss Boardman's select school for girls, but when Miss Boardman enters the room where they are, he disguises himself as a girl cousin of Gladys'. The principal suggests that the visitor sleep with her, and Dick is worried. By chance, Dick's father arrives at the school to take up his teaching duties. Dick rushes to his room, and Miss Boardman misunderstands. To add to the confusion, a burglar enters the house, and is mistaken by the girls for Dick. Finally Dick captures the thief and is forgiven by everybody.

The cast consists of Carol Holloway, John Sheehan, Bessie Banks, George Ahearn, and Marty Martin.

"The Smugglers of Santa Cruz." (Clipper. Three reels. Fri., Jan. 28.)—The outstanding feature of this picture is the series of exquisite marine views used as settings, and the wonderfully fine photography thereof. The story drags occasionally, and the tragic ending does not seem logically necessary. The members of the "Diamond from the Sky" company who are included in the cast produce the high-grade acting one expects of them.

Langdon, a revenue officer in search of smugglers, falls in love with Verna, daughter of a lighthouse keeper. The mistress of the smuggling gang betrays the rendezvous to Langdon, and he is able to confiscate some of the contraband. After several brushes with the smugglers, Langdon is finally killed by them. Verna commits suicide, so that her spirit may join Langdon's.

The cast is composed of Charlotte Burton, William Russell, Roy Stewart, George Periolat, and Eugenie Forde.

"Lord Loveland Discovers America." (American-Mutual Masterpicture DeLuxe. Five reels. Thurs., Jan. 27.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"Bungling Bill, Burglar." (Vogue. Thurs., Jan. 27.)—Not shown for review.

"A Sanitarium Scramble." (American. Fri., Jan. 28.)—The humor of this comedy-drama is delicate, and usually effective. Juvenile parts are not the best fitted to the abilities of Vivian Rich and Alfred Vosburgh, but they are uniformly good. Others in the cast are Mother Ashton and Hugh Bennett. Reeves Eason directed.

Aunt Penelope can't be a Red Cross nurse herself, but she wants her niece Janice to take up the humane profession. Janice goes to a hospital to get the training, but she is soon dismissed for breaches of discipline. She opens an apartment, and asks all her boy and girl friends to the house-warming. Aunt Penelope inopportunely arrives, but Janice explains that she has opened a private sanitarium, and that the men are patients, and the girls nurses. Her aunt finally discovers the deception, but under circumstances that thoroughly mollify her.

"Walk This Way." (Beauty. Sat., Jan. 30.)—Neva Gerber and the players cast with her are pretty generally called upon to act a serio-comic piece, based on the two adages, "The course of true love ne'er ran smooth," and "Love laughs at lock-smiths." This is one of that sort, and the cast is entirely adequate. If the third saying, "All the world loves a lover," is true, this picture should be popular.

Beside Neva Gerber, there are in the cast, Walter Spencer, Lucille Ward, Robert Klein, and Jack Gains.

Betty loves Harry, but her match-making aunt wants her to marry a gentlemanly floor-walker named Fluff. Betty and Harry clope on a motorcycle, so the aunt has to wed the floor-walker herself.

"He Thought He Went to War." (Vogue. Sun., Jan. 30.)—Not shown for review.

PATHE EXCHANGE INC.

"Pathé News," No. 2. (Pathé)—Mysterious explosion and fire wrecks oil plant at Chicago; shipment of 32,000 live geese leaves Mansfield, Ill., for New York; spring fashions; annual mummers' parade in Philadelphia; striking views from a Russian seaplane in action; Harvard hockey team at practice; state dam at Troy, N. Y., destroyed by dynamite; Skookum River in flood at Centralia, Wash.; $200,000 fire destroys Ocean Park, Cal.; auto races at Los Angeles; Italian liner, armed with 3-inch guns, reaches New York; schoolship Newport reaches New York after 15,000 mile cruise; scenes of recruiting and infantry drill in England; new stamp-making machine in operation at Washington; Harvard students box in snow; Boston society folks at tobogganing and skiing.

"The Red Circle," No. 6. (Balboa. Two reels.)—The plot of this serial appears to grow in interest with added complications. In this episode, entitled "False Colors," the Red Circle, with which June Travis is birth-marked, as the sign of a family of criminals, is used to further the work of a band of real criminals, operating at a fashionable resort.

While June is being sought by spies, whose war plans she has seized, the spies are arrested for annoying women, whom they stop in a search for the red circle. She attends a big ball, at which Alma La Salle, a clever society thief, is working; while June and Lamar are sitting on a divan, they see in a mirror, a woman's hand steal out from a screen of plants, deftly unfasten June's necklace, and remove it.

They are amazed to see a red circle on the hand. The mystery is not explained even when June's old nurse reports the next morning having seen a woman washing a painted red circle from her hand. Lamar locates the woman and trails her back to the city. Ruth Roland, Frank Mayo and Lillian West head the cast.

"Madame X." (Savage. Five reels.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"Animated Weekly," No. 201. (Wed., Jan. 12.)—Harvard's track squad: prosperity parade in Syracuse, N. Y.; alien wireless operator arrested as suspect, Portland, Me.; opening of racing season at New Orleans, La.; derelict blown up off Providence, R. I.; ruins of Chicago's recent $2,000,000 fire; first snowfall in twenty years in California; English recruits leave London for the front; Animal Rescue League operates in Boston, Mass.; gulls feeding in London, Eng.; Ascot speedway opened in Los Angeles, Cal.; Representative James Buchanan recently indicted for conspiracy; view of the U. S. S. Oklahoma; Hy. Mayer's cartoons.

"A Soul Enslaved." (Broadway Universal Feature. Five reels. Mon., Jan. 24.)—Reviewed at length in the issue of Jan. 22.

"Her Steady Carfare." (Nestor. Mon., Jan. 24.)—Betty Compson, irresistible as ever, and Ray Gallagher engage in a subtle love affair in this that is sure to meet with everybody's pleasure. Al Christie concocted it and Horace Davey directed.

"Discontent." (Gold Seal. Two reels. Tues., Jan. 25.)—A character study featuring an unpleasant character and therefore not a very pleasant picture, although in development and production it is good. Doc Crane as the old soldier who is taken out of the veterans' home by his rich nephew, and who by his complaining attitude creates discord in a perfectly happy household gives, as might be expected, a sterling performance, but for all that "Discontent" (very aptly named) does not please.

"Hired, Tired and Fired." (Imp. Tues., Jan. 25.)—A most conventional comedy written and produced by Roy Clements. It is the poor piano mover again, who needs over half a reel to get the music box out and then discovers he has the wrong address. There are a few moments in this, most of them furnished by the excellent comedienne who plays the slavey, but on the whole it is not a very good picture. Victor Potel has the lead.

"Knocks and Opportunities." (L-Ko. Two reels. Wed., Jan. 26.)—This release has a good plot that holds of itself and a lot of humorously effective trick work, while Billie Ritchie's horse-play strikes an unusually funny chord. Louise Orth and Reggie Morris take the other leads. The settings are particularly expansive for comedy while the wedding scenes add a humorous touch of spicy unconventionality.

"Across the Line." (Victor. Wed., Jan. 26.)—Number three of Jacques Jaccard's little stories of real life. The photography is somewhat poor, being too dark in a number of scenes, but the story is well worked out and creates an average amount of interest, although the characters are not over-clearly defined.

"The Red Lie." (Laemmle. Three reels. Thurs., Jan. 27.)—This highly effective detective drama starred in by Rupert Julian was reviewed at length in the issue of November 20, page 81, under the title of "The Ferret."

"Sammie Johnsin—Hunter." (Powers. Split reel. Thurs., Jan. 27.)—A most amusing animated cartoon by P. Sullivan portraying the dreamed adventures of a colored boy who goes hunting. Just the right thing for children and highly amusing for old folks. The pictures are smooth and do not tire the eyes. On the same reel with "Fishing for Lamprey."

"Fishing River Lamprey." (Powers. Split reel. Thurs., Jan. 27.)—The various processes that herring go through from the time they are taken out of rivers in Denmark until they reach our tables are shown in this number, which is a most interesting educational.

"The Inner Soul." (Laemmle. Two reels. Fri., Jan. 28.)—This picture by F. McGrew Willis deals with an impossible story in a rather impossible way, so the ultimate effect created is not convincing although the story's development causes some interest. Constance Johnson, Malcolm Blevins, Jack Livingston and Ray Hanford have the principal parts. Leon Kent directed.

"Nan Good-For-Nothing." (Big U. Fri., Jan. 28.)—An English picture of the London Film company's, featuring vivacious Edna Flugrath in a role excellently suited to her attractive personality. The story is slight but its human interest qualities keep up the interest at all times.

"Flivvers in the Dance of the Shivvers." (Nestor. Fri., Jan. 28.)—That English comedian, Charles Evans, is seen again as a female dancer who assays all manner of national and classic dances on the vaudeville stage with the usual uproarious results. It is very good and keeps the standard of the series up to a high mark.

"A Daughter of Penance." (Bison. Two reels. Sat., Jan. 29.)—Henry Otto directed this and as might be expected the scenes and photographic work are splendid. The locations are a treat to the eye and besides being beautiful they are well chosen and throw the story in a most appropriate setting.

The story, by Charles Saxby, is romantic and mysterious, furnishing just the right proportions of each ingredient to produce a most satisfying effect. The leads are handled by Edna Maison, Douglas Gerrard, Majorie Lake and Phyllis Daniels.

"Uncle Sam at Work." No. 6. (Powers. Sat., Jan. 29.)—This number shows the work of the Departments of Agriculture, Forrestry and Reclamation, including scenes of logging, fire fighting and road building. Although the photography is rather hazy, and the reel edited in rather a slipshod way, the individual scenes are most interesting.

"Mrs. Green's Mistake." (Joker. Sat., Jan. 29.)—This number of Allen Curtis relies for the greater part of its humor on the story and the entangled situations rather than the cast, which for a time neglects its eccentricities to a certain extent.

It is a good picture and Gales Henry, William Franey, Lillian Peacock and Charles Conklin do effective comedy work.

"His Own Trap." (Rex. Three reels. Sun., Jan. 30.)—This picture is interesting because of its sympathetic theme, which concerns the extravagant wife, the struggling husband and resulting complications, closed by a happy reunion. It is developed nicely most of the way, but towards the close a number of new characters are dragged in somewhat amateurishly.

The photography of the three reels is much better than the eastern studios have turned out for many months. Ben Wilson, Dorothy Phillips, Charles Ogle and Howard Crampton play the leads, Wilson directing besides.

"Cupid at the Polo Game." (L-Ko. Sun., Jan. 30.)—This is by far the best of the L-Kos that we can remember. It has good comedians, original funny business, while the scene of action, the polo field, affords many opportunities for refreshing work. Ray Griffith, Louise Orth and Dan Russell, all real comedians, furnish the fun.

"An Innocent Crook." (Vogue. Mon., Jan. 10.)—In this release Sammy Burns shows that he is not only an acrobat of parts, but also thoroughly up to snuff in the tricks of the slapstick art. Many of his mannerisms are borrowed from other screen fun-makers, while others are quite new and excellently conceived.

The plot is of the familiar, grotesque sort which serves to bring in the asphyxiating mallet and other indispensable tools of the knock-about trade. Burns is, of course, the film's piece de resistance, but the buffoonery contributed by those in the support is quite passable. The subordinate players are James Gibson, Helen Marlborough, Margaret Seaman, and H. Dougherty.

To Film Manufacturers

When you advertise your films in Chicago consider these facts about The Chicago Daily News:

The Daily News has a circulation of over 400,000, of which more than 92% is concentrated in Chicago and its suburbs. There are approximately 450,000 families in Chicago, so it can readily be seen that, disregarding the non-English speaking and the illiterate, The Daily News reaches very nearly every worth-while family in the city. The Daily News sells more papers in Chicago and its suburbs by over 100,000 than any other daily newspaper, and over 80,000 more than any Sunday newspaper. Therefore it is the only newspaper through which you can reach all these worth-while families.

Moreover, The Daily News is doing more than any other Chicago newspaper to induce its readers to see motion pictures. In its news columns every day it publishes reviews of all the new motion picture productions, together with side lights on how the pictures are made and how the stars live.

In addition to this The Daily News is printing a series of half-page display advertisements, calling the attention of its readers to motion pictures and to the directory of motion picture theaters published every day in The Daily News.*

Thus The Daily News not only offers you more readers in Chicago (and at a lower rate per line per reader) than any other Chicago newspaper—but is doing more than any other Chicago newspaper to educate its hundreds of thousands of readers to the pleasure and profit of seeing motion pictures.

Are you taking advantage of this opportunity to increase the sale of your films?

THE CHICAGO DAILY NEWS

Over 400,000 Daily

*We will be pleased to send reprints of a few of these advertisements if you are interested.

INTIMATE VIEWS OF NAPOLEON THE GREAT AND SALLY HIS MATE, STARS OF THE E. & R. JUNGLE FILM COMPANY

"Napoleon the Great"

Napoleon the Great, comedian extraordinary, came to the United States about six years ago. From the first he was considered the brightest of his race that had ever been brought across the waters. His schooling has proven him a prodigy. Professor Richard Garner, the world's most able student of anthropology, late of the Zoological Society of New York, who has spent twenty-three years in the jungles of Africa, says he is the most intelligent ape, and the nearest approach to a human being that has ever been captured and trained.

His Education

Four years ago Napoleon was turned over to Lou R. Bristol, animal trainer, and a few weeks later began a vaudeville tour which has continued ever since. He has played over the Pantages circuit over the West Coast four separate times in as many acts, and over the Sullivan and Considine time which took him as far East as Buffalo, two times. He has made a trip to Australia and other Islands where he played to enormous business.

His Accomplishments

He does his roller skating stunt, rides a bicycle, has good table manners, works on the horizontal bars, is an expert on six-foot stilts and an eight-foot-frame bicycle. He also drives a specially constructed automobile which he can "jaz" and put in working order as well as a taxi chauffeur. He also does a loop the loop stunt on roller skates, and has fallen for the new dances, and is particularly fond of tangoing.

A Benedict

On Christmas day of 1913, Napoleon was publicly married, the wedding taking place on the stage at the Pantages theatre, Los Angeles, in the presence of two thousand people. The beveiled bride was Sally, his mate at the E. & R. Jungle Zoo. He went through with the elaborate wedding ceremony without forgetting the ring or failing to kiss the bride at the conclusion, despite the fact that he was wearing a new evening suit, of which he was very proud, for the first time.

"Sally His Mate"

Sally is of an absolutely different nature from Napoleon, and dislikes company very much. She is a little "homey" woman, busy in her home, a palm leaf hut at the zoo. Sally has a great liking for children, and three years ago, when a baby was born in the household of the caretaker, she became the nurse. Baby was but three days old when Sally first cared for her, and since then the two have been inseparable. The child and Sally have appeared in a number of pictures, Sally always playing the mother part. She is never happier than when wearing an apron and house cap. She is an excellent washerwoman, and keeps her kitchen as neat as a pin.

The habits of Napoleon and Sally are like those of other leading men and women. In the morning they have their cold plunge, and a breakfast of fruit, cereal with cream, eggs, toast or hygienic wafers. The morning is taken up with their school work, both rehearsing their parts for several hours. When out with the boys at a banquet, Napoleon sometimes slips off the water wagon and will order beer or wine, which he is very fond of.

Napoleon and Sally have played in "From Jungle to Trouble," "Uncle's Little Ones," "The Jungle Cure," "What D'ye Think of That?" "Pa's Family Tree," "The Adventures of Sally," "The Jungle Kid" and other laughable comedies now being released on the state rights plan.

OTHER E & R ACTORS

While Napoleon and Sally are the leading players at the E & R Jungle Film studio, Messrs. J. S. Edwards and John Rounan, the owners, known the world over as collectors of rare animals, have a very large variety of rare specimens, every one of which has taken part in the making of motion pictures. The collection includes lions, pumas, tigers, educated leopards, twenty-three varieties of monkeys, including "John D.," the only white monkey in captivity; armadillos, elephants, Cuban tree rats, regal black and royal pythons, Alaskan martens, crown pigeons; the only Brazilian capahara in America; Colby's Vulture; emus and a Tasmanian devil; and "Congo," the West African uncivilized man, who scientists say is a representative of the connecting link between monkeys and human beings.

The Executives

J. S. Edwards, the "E," and John Rounan, the "R," are two of the best known animal show men in the country, having been engaged in the business twenty odd years. During this time they became thoroughly conversant with the likes and dislikes, characteristics and peculiarities of all of their scores of rare specimens, and are today, without a doubt, the most experienced animal trainers engaged in the motion picture industry, and their collection is by far the largest and most valuable of its kind in America.

The company now has several very successful motion picture people on its staff, and are making one reel animal comedies.

What You Get

After you have listened to all the big talk of other manufacturers—after all is said and done—what interests you most when you select a machine is what you get.

We claim—and can prove it—that in the MOTIOGRAPH at $285.00 you get more real value than you can obtain in any other projecting machine on earth at any price.

We could cut down our cost $50.00 and no one but an expert would know it—that doesn't mean it wouldn't be found out later on, for it would be, and "later on" is not a good time to find out things about a machine you buy—the live exhibitor has "found out" the real QUALITY and high class projection obtained from the MOTIOGRAPH—that is why the large number of MOTIOGRAPHS are being sold.

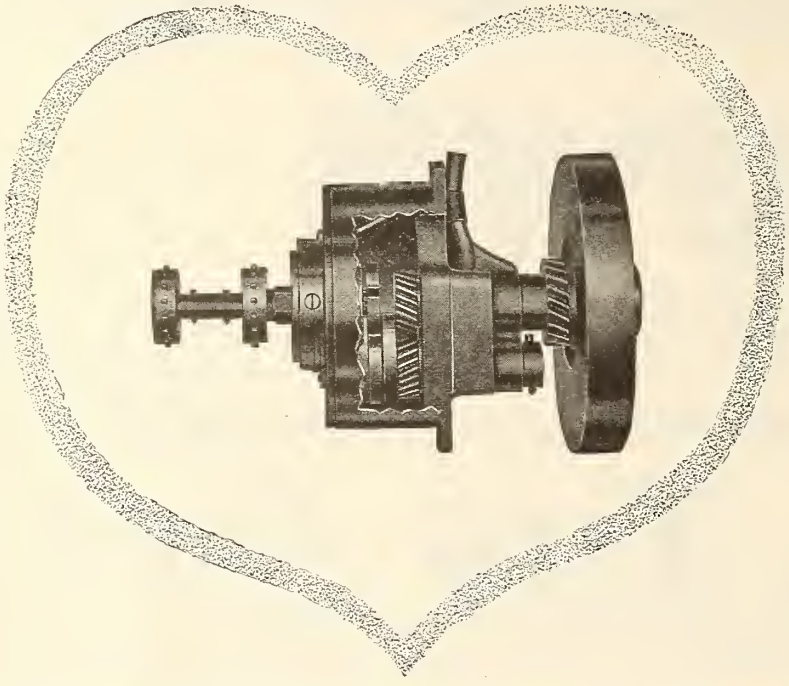
Mechanical Perfection Is Reason for Simpex Popularity



The Heart of the Mechanism Is the Intermittent Movement

SIMPLEX INTERMITTENT GENEVA MOVEMENT STAR AND CAM must not be confused with similar movements of other projectors.

The principle may be similar but the Simplex method of design and accuracy is what gives results.

When you consider that sprocket must be started and stopped 16 times or more each second the strain on the parts employed is apparent.

The circumference of the Simplex Intermittent Sprocket travels ¾ of an inch in 1/64th of a second, or at the rate of 2880 feet per minute. This gives some idea of what it means to bring it to an instant stop.

In the manufacture of the Simplex Intermittent Movement the finest steel is used and the greatest accuracy to the 1/10,000th of an inch is required.

The Star and Sprocket are tested under a magnifying glass for mechanical accuracy and are tested under operating conditions for results on the screen.

The entire intermittent case can be removed from the machine in 30 seconds by taking out 2 screws and loosening 2 others. It can be replaced as quickly.

Motion Picture Projection Simplified

By J. H. Hallberg

50—Realizing the importance of exposing both carbon craters at the same time and understanding that this effect can be produced by certain means, will you please explain why the special transformer referred to accomplishes this result.

Ans.—You have been told that an ordinary rheostat composed of a resistance unit made from nickel-steel or similar wire, is of such nature that its resistance increases if the current flow through the same is materially increased.

In other words, the rheostat easily absorbs and dissipates the power in heat, instead of forcing the power over the shorter arc, when the carbons are brought closer together, so as to lower the voltage across the arc.

A rheostat of large enough capacity to reduce the voltage from 110 to 40 volts, which is the usual voltage maintained for an A. C. arc, will easily absorb and dissipate the few extra volts which will be forced upon the resistance when the carbons are put closer together when you try to focus both of the craters at one and the same time.

The effect on the arc is, under this condition, such that the loss of the extra voltage without a consequent and proportionate increase in amperes prevents proper combustion of the carbons.

Another effect tending to also reduce the brilliancy of the illumination is caused by the watts at the arc dropping with the least change of resistance in the arc, as would happen in case the core should gas more freely than normally, which will disturb the illumination, causing the arc to lose its intensity with consequent loss of light on the screen.

With the transformer, however, which is an electro-magnetic device, the effect upon the arc when the carbons are brought closer together is entirely different. There is no such cushioning or absorbing effect in the properly designed transformer when the carbons are put closer together, as required when it is desired to reduce the arc voltage from 40 to 30 or 33 volts.

As a matter of fact, an arc controlled by a transformer which may pass 50 amperes with 33 volts across the arc, will force the amperes to maybe 55, if the carbons are put closer together, which reduces the arc voltage to 30.

This change, you will understand, does not lower the watts across the arc, because the transformer under that condition forces more amperes through it, so that the loss in volts is compensated for by a proportionate increase in amperes, and as a result the effect is to maintain a nearly constant watt consumption in the arc, which in turn keeps the "magnetic blow-out" effect in perfect working condition, allowing the carbon points to be kept very close together without any tendency of the arc to what you might call "die down" or burn the carbon points with a yellow glow.

51—Explain the action or effect of the "magnetic blow-out" effect on the arc.

Ans.—Fig. 35 illustrates a regulation lamp house with the arc lamp, carbon-holders, carbons and asbestos-covered leads, connected to a transformer such as referred to in questions No. 48 and No. 49.

An analysis of this system, as illustrated in Fig. 35, shows the A. C. line, which in this instance is 110 volts, connected to a set of line fuses which should be of about 30 ampere capacity, with leads to the motion picture machine switch. The other side of the switch is connected to the proper connections on the primary or line side of the transformer.

The secondary or lamp winding on the transformer is made of considerably larger wire with a lower number of turns connected to the flexible asbestos-covered cables feeding the current to the carbon-holders and to the upper and lower carbons placed within the lamp house itself.

Lobby Fixtures Must Harmonize With the Theatre

Manufacture of These Articles, Necessary to the Drawing Power of a Motion Picture House, Has Reached a High State of Perfection—Easels Are Now Made to Order According to Specification Furnished by Exhibitors—Color Effect Is Important

THE average exhibitor probably has not the remotest idea of the work entailed in producing lobby display frames, one sheets, stills and other announcements. Nor has the realization of proper lobby display come to more than ten per cent. of the picture theaters throughout the country.

It is not an uncommon sight even in this so-called "advanced" stage of the motion picture industry to see theaters with their entire fronts plastered with anything from six sheets down.

Often this condition not only exists on the exterior of the house, but the lobby likewise is covered with posters, lending to the house an unhealthy and repulsive atmosphere.

The ten per cent. referred to above have seen the fallacy of this ornamentation and have fitted up their houses with up-to-date, neat and attractive portable frames. The exterior of their houses have not been defaced and their lobbies are kept clean and neat.

Manufacture of Lobby Fixtures in High State of Perfection

The effect on the public is natural and most noticeable, for the patron, for whom every theater in the town is looking, will pass by the untidy and plastered place for the house with the neat and clean exterior.

The making of these up-to-date lobby fixtures has become a science and can no longer be satisfactorily done unless the proprietors of the companies making them have made an exhaustive study of exactly what is needed and have the facilities for turning out special orders, both as to size, shape and color.

Just as the modern theater is a product of scientific study, so with the lobby display, for it must harmonize in every way with the settings of both the lobby and the theater exterior of which they are a part.

Take, for example, a theater where a certain color effect has been worked out. This must be followed in every detail of equipment, which means that the greatest possible care must be taken in ordering the frames, to make sure that the firm from which they are purchased is able to meet the requirements both as to color and design and any other of the minor details which are so necessary in order that the exterior of the house may have the appearance of having been made to order, and not, as is the case with so many, give the appearance of a collection of fittings without any idea as to their relations to one another.

One of the concerns which we would cite as an example of "preparedness" is Menger and Ring, who occupy an entire building, located at 304 West Forty-second street, New York City. This company has gone so deep into the manufacture of lobby display frames that its entire organization is departmentalized.

In addition to the pictures shown in this article, namely, the cabinet makers' department, the fitting department and the shipping department, there is also a cutting department and finishing department, comprising in all a force of approximately sixty-five people.

Specifications Followed Accurately by the Makers

It is easy to understand that with equipment of this kind any specifications may be sent in by the most particular owner or builder with the assurance that when the goods are delivered they will in every way follow the designs and requirements submitted.

The photograph of the showroom will give an idea of the various styles and forms of display frames which are carried as samples. These are in addition to a large number which are shipped daily, where particular specifications have been followed.

Every frame made by this company is "tailor made," that is, according to definite specifications. Certain samples are carried in stock, but these are merely to give an idea to customers who may come into the office.

A mail order business is encouraged, providing the exhibitor will give detailed specifications of exactly what he wants in the way of designs, color and the particular kind of architecture which he wishes followed.

The most popular finishes at the present time are antique, golden brown, mahogany, copper, bronze and verdigris, all made

Operating Electricity — Questions Answered — Repairing Equipment

Edited by J. H. Hallberg

Who Will Answer All Questions You Send in, No Matter How Simple or How Difficult

FIFTY AMPERE INSTEAD OF A THIRTY-FIVE AMPERE TUBE?

R. H. D., Richmond, Ind.—I am using a 35 ampere General Electric rectifier with a 35 ampere tube, M. S. type, 110-120 volt, 60 cycles, 30 amperes D. C. and I have decided to put a 50 ampere tube on this machine, replacing this 35 ampere tube and the city electrician tells me that I cannot do it at all and that I will burn it out and that this machine will not stand a 50 ampere tube.

What do you say about it and is it a wise or unwise idea in trying to use a 50 ampere instead of a 35 ampere tube? What will my results be if I do use this 50 ampere tube?

Ans.—The General Electric Mercury Arc Rectifier is built and sold to deliver 30 amperes D. C. from a 110 or 220 volt A. C. current supply.

The rectifier is provided with a transformer and a reactive coil.

The reactive coil has several adjustments upon it, by arrangement of which the rectifier may be operated on any voltage from 100 to 120 or from 200 to 240 volts. The 30 ampere rectifier is furnished with what is called the 40 ampere size tube.

In other words, due to the fact that a moving picture arc throws a sudden overload on the rectifier when striking the arc instead of using a 30 ampere tube on the 30 ampere rectifier, as is customary for storage battery charging rectifiers, due to this sudden over loading by the arc, a 40 ampere tube is furnished which stands the rush of current better, than the smaller 30 ampere tube would.

The next size rectifier is intended to deliver under the same voltage and other conditions, 40 amperes and on account of the over load at the instant of striking the arc it is furnished with a 50 ampere capacity tube.

The third or larger size is intended to deliver 50 amperes D. C. and is furnished with a tube of more than 50 ampere capacity. If you have a 30 ampere rectifier as you describe, there is no reason why you should not use a 40 or 50 ampere tube with it, providing the holder on the back of the tilting device is large enough to take the larger tube and also providing the shaking magnet is large enough to handle the larger tube at starting.

There would be no advantage to you in using the larger tube excepting it may possibly last a little longer but as the larger tubes cost more money to buy I doubt if it is advisable to use a larger tube on your rectifier than that which has been decided upon by the engineers of the General Electric Company, which for the 30 ampere moving picture rectifier which you have is their standard 40 ampere tube.

PROPER SIZE WIRE FOR ELECTRIC LIGHT PLANT

J. W. S., Binnewater, N. Y.—You state in your catalog, anything we wish to know in regard to trouble with picture machine, to write you or draw plan and you will be glad to answer. I have an electric light plant and I do not think it is connected up right on the proper size wire, as it does not work right. It gives a good light but all of a sudden it goes dark and you have to fix the arc.

I got a burner from you and it is fine. The dynamo is a 65 volt 30 ampere machine and the engine is 4 H. P.

Please draw plan how how I should connect it up properly.

Ans.—You must furnish a copy of the lettering and the figures exactly as they are stamped on the nameplate mounted on your generator.

Also make a rough sketch of just how the generator looks or send the manufacturers' diagram of connection which you should have received with the generator. Upon receipt of this information I will give you further advice.

Your trouble of sudden dull light or sputtering, making it necessary to readjust the arc, calls for a different rheostat in series with the arc than the one you are evidently using. The design and construction of a rheostat for 60 to 65 volt generators is not an easy proposition, therefore, you must use great care in selecting a rheostat as a makeshift will not do.

You do not say if your generator is furnished with a field controller or field rheostat, as it is also called. Please advise what is marked on the same.

When I get the information concerning the make and style generator you have as is stated on the nameplate, I can give you further information.

The size wire to use would be not less than No. 8 and I generally recommend No. 6 wire as the smallest to be used for motion picture arcs as that is the standard of the underwriters.

PICTURES STEADILY PROJECTED WIN PATRONS AND BECOME ADVERTISING ASSET WHEN THEY TELL THEIR FRIENDS

ADVERTISING equipment to the patrons of motion picture theatres is something which is being taken up more and more by the live wire exhibitors.

The superiority in projection of one house over another is due to one of two causes. Either the operator in one knows his business better than the operator in the other houses, or this point combined with better equipment in one house is a guarantee of better pictures than in the others.

These facts are of particular value from the advertising standpoint, and if a patron leaves your house with a knowledge that your light and hence your picture is much steadier than in any other house in town, due perhaps to the use of, we will say a Speedco Arc Controller, it is an immediate advantage to you.

This advice is being given today by the Speed Controller Company to the houses which have already installed their particular equipment and is working out well, for the houses which have made the installation are being talked about by their patrons, and although these patrons do not know exactly what it all means, they nevertheless tell their friends with great show of knowledge exactly why the pictures in such and such a house are better than those in another.

LOBBY DISPLAY MUST HARMONIZE WITH THEATRE

up of solid selected oak which has been dried and seasoned so that durability is absolutely guaranteed.

The ornaments which are used are unbreakable, either being of carved wood which has been specially treated or of pressed wood pulp which is securely fastened to the frame.

An innovation has just been put on the market in the form of a frame twenty-five feet long and fifteen feet high, which exactly fits the side of the lobby.

J. L. Menger, president of the company, and Joseph Ring, secretary and treasurer, are both well known in the trade, having been connected with it since its inception.

FEDERAL ATTRACTION SIGN BOARD CAN BE MADE STEADY BURNING OR GIVEN A FLASHER EFFECT

TO run a successful motion picture house three things are necessary. You must have the show; you must have the place to show it in, and you must have the crowds to show it to. No intelligent man going into the motion picture business would dream of passing his pictures through a machine of the same type that was used when the first picture was flashed on the screen.

No longer do we see the big motion picture houses being made out of converted stores nor is the same method of filling the house being used. It is this latter feature that we would, at the present moment, bring to your attention.

Be your picture the finest obtainable, featuring artists of the highest caliber and be your building erected and equipped in the most attractive and efficient manner possible, unless you use the proper means to let people know where you are and what you are doing, your attendance is going to be slim.

You recall the first means used to advertise motion picture houses was some freak featuring in the front of the entrance. The front of the house, for instance, was built in an unusal design which usually consumed about forty per cent. of space and added in no way to the architectural beauty of the building. This latter was superseded by big glaring canvas signs. At the present time, the theatre owner has designed his building to make use of all available space and in no way detract from the architectural or symmetrical lines of the building.

He has discarded the flaring sign and substituted in its place the far more pleasing and compelling electric sign. In this line it seems that the illustration we show is a very effective and at the same time a neat and sensible one for announcing to the public the attractions to take place.

It is a design manufactured and patented by the Federal Sign System (Electric) Lake and Desplaines streets, Chicago, Ill.

It is what they call a Federal Attraction Board and is as simple in construction as it is efficient. It has a galvanized iron border of lights which can be made either steady burning or with a flasher effect. It has a heavy screen scientifically supported, across which are run two bands for every line of lettering to be used.

One band holds the letters in place; the other provides connection with the electric current that illuminates it. There seems to be not a single superfluous bit of material in its make-up which, of course, plainly shows that its price must be arranged accordingly.

Its efficiency is unquestionable, as the reading matter on the sign can be changed as often as is desired simply by lifting the letters off and placing new ones on. In constructing this sign the Federal Sign System have done so to fill the demand for such an article by high-class theatre owners and seem to be having considerable success in disposing of them.

PERFECT PROJECTION PAYS

Your customers don't come to you and say: "Why don't you use the AMERICAN STANDARD MASTER MODEL MOTION PICTURE MACHINE like Bill Blank up the street does?" They don't know nor care about how the pictures are thrown on the screen, but they do demand that the pictures show up right.

They don't even trouble to insist that you serve them with perfect projection; they never come back and they caution their friends not to patronize you. And what patrons are left to you will in time be persuaded to accompany friends to theatres that show bright, clear, flickerless pictures.

Perfect projection pays! Get it with the AMERICAN STANDARD MASTER MODEL.

COOPER HEWITT LIGHTS INSTALLED

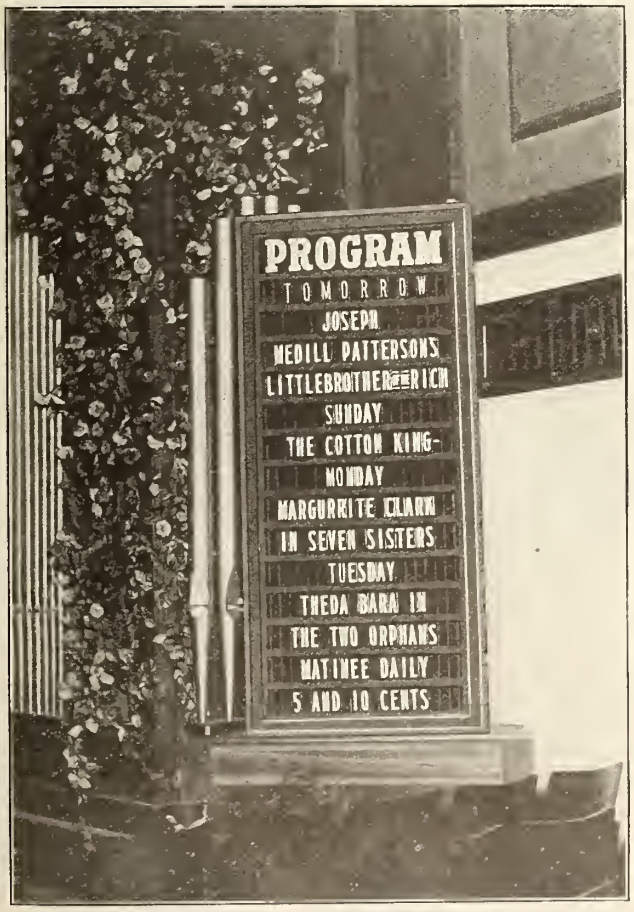
William C. Hubbard, general sales agent of the Cooper Hewitt Electric Company, states that he has signed orders from several other concerns on the coast, but that installations have been delayed owing to the very wet weather conditions.

This has been so bad that it has not been possible to erect a line of poles to carry the current wires from the power houses to the various studios. As soon as these conditions have changed, Mr. Hubbard is planning an extended trip to the coast.

BULLETIN SIGNS NOW INDISPENSABLE TO UP-TO-DATE EXHIBITOR

SINCE an interior bulletin sign of some sort for announcing the program in advance has become an indispensable part of every motion picture theatre it only remains for the management to select that style of sign that will best serve their purpose by displaying in a distinct readable and attractive manner the program for succeeding days.

The sign illustrated here is one of the best interior theatre bulletins now available, and the use of such a sign could not fail to be of material advantage to any moving picture theatre. It is one of the products of the Rawson and Evans Company, Chicago, who also manufacture a very handsome columnar announcer for placing at or near the entrance to theatres.



A SPECIMEN INTERCHANGEABLE SIGN

This sign is of the interchangeable letter variety and has the letters in snow white opal glass on a black background. When illuminated the letters stand out so vividly that the program is impressed on every one. By the use of colored inserts between the two thicknesses of glass in each letter all or any part of the lettering can be made to show in colors such as red, blue or green.

The over all dimensions of this bulletin sign are 43 inches wide, 96 inches high and 6 inches deep. There is space for 266 letters which is more than sufficient for ordinary announcements. The sign is mounted in a 4-inch oak frame, old English finish, and the effect of the sign as a whole is peculiarly neat and dignified.

Kunsky Is Millionaire Owner of Theatre String

Detroit Exhibitor Magnate in Detroit Shows Faith in Industry by Constantly Adding Houses to the Number Controlled by His Company—A $300,000 Theatre, Designed by C. Howard Crane, Is Latest Structure in Course of Erection for Mr. Kunsky

TO have an investment running into the millions in moving picture playhouses, and at the same time have under way the erection of a $300,000 playhouse, is striking proof of what John H. Kunsky, the millionaire owner of eight of Detroit's leading theatres, thinks of the future of the moving picture theatre business.

Mr. Kunsky, a light-haired man of stocky build, forty-three years of age, although looking much younger, was seated in his private office in the pretentious suite occupied by him on the twenty-second floor of the Dime Bank Building, Deroit, when interviewed by a representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS. He laughed when asked how he had come to go into the film business.

"Every time I think of the trip that Mr. Caille and I took to Pittsburgh to see a nickelodeon so as to decide if we wanted to go into the business, it makes me laugh to think of our hesitating to invest a few hundred dollars when now we are taking advantage of every available opportunity to spread out and at a cost that makes that nickelodeon investment look like thirty cents," said Mr. Kunsky.

"However, right from the start Mr. Caille and myself had faith in the business and when we saw Harry Davis in Pittsburgh with a store converted into a little nickel show, busy taking in the nickels as fast as the crowd passed into his place, we decided that we could get the Detroit nickels just in the same way.

"That was ten years ago this fall and I guess there is no business in the world that has shown the wonderful and yet healthy growth that the business has shown since then.

Took What Was Given Them for Showing

"We opened up where my Royale theatre is now and charged a nickel admission and showed one reel which we secured from Miles Brothers or from the Pittsburgh Calcium Light Company. We took just what they gave us, because while they knew little about the film business then, we knew much less. So long as it was a moving picture that was all that was necessary."

Of the theatres owned by John H. Kunsky, the Strand, the Alhambra and the Washington are the finest. Each occupies a structure built especially as a theatre.

The remaining five, the Liberty, Garden, Royale, Empress and Columbia all are in the front rank as picture playhouses, and all are unqualified successes in every way. In fact since the days when he ran the nickelodeon, Mr. Kunsky has not been associated with a failure in the picture house line in Detroit.

The architect's drawing of the Grand theatre, which is being built at Broadway and Witherell streets, shows an exterior of what will be one of the most pretentious theatres in the United States.

It will have a seating capacity of 2,600, which places it next to the Strand in New York.

The building will also contain a large office for Mr. Kunsky's fast growing business, including separate suites for offices for advertising department, another suite for the operating department and still another for the financial headquarters.

C. Howard Crane Is Architect of Majestic

C. Howard Crane, the architect who designed the Majestic, is the architect for the New theatre, and according to Mr. Kunsky, many new and elaborate features found in no other playhouse in the country will be included in the make up of the Grand.

The location at Broadway and Witherell streets is only one block from the new Statler and Tuller hotels in what is conceded to be the big coming business section of Detroit.

"It looks to me," said Mr. Kunsky when asked about the prices, "as though the prices now were about right. They were too low for a good entertainment when the business was new but prices ranging from ten cents to fifty cents appear to me to be about right and will in my estimation remain at these figures for some time to come.

"People enjoy not only good pictures but also good music and pleasant surroundings and all of these things are what the up-to-date picture theatre man is endeavoring to give them. For a small theatre a piano or an organ help wonderfully to make the entertainment pleasant, while in the larger houses, an orchestra seems necessary to complete the entertainment.

"Even where there is a pipe organ an orchestra seems needed, and in fact I have just resumed the use of an orchestra at the Garden theatre after trying to do without it for a time.

"Of course we employ only union musicians and we have no trouble in securing high-class music and at each theatre we try to have the kind of music that pleases that particular sort of clientele.

"At the Royale theatre, on Monroe street, where we show what the Monroe street crowd wants to see, we have blood and thunder and melodrama and exciting pictures of adventures, and the orchestra plays popular airs between pictures.

Orchestra at Alhambra Plays Classical Music

"Out at the Alhambra, where the patronage is largely from the finest residence district in Detroit, we have a specially selected orchestra that plays the very highest class music and a pipe organ that is all that can be desired by the most particular music lover alive."

One of the features of the Kunsky string of theatres that has aroused wide comment in picture circles is the publication each week of the Weekly Film News, devoted to the interests of the John H. Kunsky theatrical enterprises.

Each week this booklet carries on the cover a picture of a popular star to be seen that week at one of the theatres.

of the magazine are attractively arranged and each manager is given so much space for an announcement of what he has to offer the public.

Then there is a condensed program under the name of each theatre of just what can be seen there that week. The booklet contains a small amount of advertising but is mainly devoted to screen news pertaining to the week's current shows.

The Weekly Film News is edited and published from the advertising department maintained in the Kunsky offices.

Mr. Kunsky believes that the long picture is here to stay, but is also of the opinion that short one-reel pictures will also be in demand to fill in with and to complete the evening's performance. He is a great believer in a good comedy to get the audience in a pleasant mood.

Kunsky Worked for High Plane of Pictures in Detroit

Mr. Kunsky has probably done more than any other one man in Detroit to put the moving picture business in this, the seventh city in the United States in size, on the high plane that it now is. He has always done everything possible to give the public clean attractive amusement and at a popular price.

Although not much for vacations for himself he has his business so organized that it moves smoothly in his absence. George W. Trendle, who has been with him for years, taking charge while he is away.

Mr. Kunsky just tips the scales at two-hundred pounds but he neither looks that heavy nor does he look forty-three years old. He is athletic and extremely active, although not nervous, and he considers no detail too small for him to consider, if it is in any way going to effect the policy of the theatres that he owns.

With the new $300,000 Grand theatre ready within one year, to seat 2,600 people he will probably control more high-class amusement places than any other one man outside of New York City.

But he does not propose to stop even here and other locations in Detroit which look promising are being investigated with a view to locating more playhouses.

The growth of Detroit has been phenomenal in the last two years and Mr. Kunsky has been ever on the alert to keep the amusement offerings in line with the rapidly growing population.

AL. U. THORNBURG.

CIRCLE, INDIANAPOLIS, WILL HAVE A $225,000 THEATRE, READY ON MAY 15

THE Monument Realty Company, composed of Indianapolis men, who will build the Circle theatre in the Circle, Indianapolis, at a cost of about $225,000, have taken possession of the site. The property was taken over by A. L. Block, chairman of the realty company's building committee, and it will be operated under a ninety-nine year lease.

Plans and specifications for the new theatre have been placed in the hands of contractors, who will at once begin the preparation of their bids.

A general contract is to be awarded, which will include the wrecking of the old buildings now on the site, and there also will be contracts for the plumbing, lighting and heating, these three systems to be on an elaborate scale.

Mr. Block said the company hopes to make the contracts soon, when the work of wrecking the old structures will be started. The company hopes to have the theatre completed by about May 15.

CALIFORNIA

THE announcement is made that Coffee and Trowbridge will erect a moving picture house with a seating capacity of seven hundred at Martinez.

A. Heimbach has purchased the interests of his partner in the Dinuba theater at Dinuba, and now is the sole owner.

A. Delluchi and E. Fontana have purchased the old Bell theater holdings at Stockton, and will remodel the structure at an estimated cost of at least $15,000.

The Viola theater at Monterey has been closed by J. Murray for an indefinite period.

The Victory theater at San Rafael has been closed by Mr. and Mrs. Riffe.

A new moving picture house has been opened at Alpaugh by Horner and Dowler.

J. E. Blake has opened the Amusu theater at Grass Valley. This house was formerly known as the Idlehour.

Eva Ricks has taken over the Sequoia theater at Eureka, and has changed its name to the Grand.

The Turner and Dahnken Circuit inaugurated the Triangle service at its theater at Berkeley on January 14, and three days later began to run the pictures at the Tivoli theater in San Francisco. Both the Triangle and Paramount service will be shown at the Berkeley house.

The old Globe theater, at Mission and Twenty-second streets, San Francisco, has been ordered torn down by the Board of Public Works. About two years ago the structure was strengthened and plans were made to transform it into a huge moving picture house, but the Board of Public Works condemned the work. A short time ago a storm of unusual severity visited the city and damaged the structure to such an extent that it was ordered torn down.

The Royal Theater Company, of San Francisco, has taken out a building permit for the erection of a moving picture theater at California and Polk streets. It is estimated that the theater, which will be of class A construction, will cost in the neighborhood of $60,000.

CANADA

The Sunnyside theater, Montreal, which lately came under the management of Mr. Harris, of the Mutual Film Company, is to form the first of a chain of theaters under the control of the National Theaters Company. A five-piece orchestra has been added and it is the intention of the company to double the capacity of the house next spring. The house will have at least 1,000 seats.

The Park theater, Verdun, Montreal, has a very able manager in the person of Mr. Dunning. Mr. Dunning has occupied this position for some time now and one of his latest innovations was to instruct the staff in a thorough fire drill, which will greatly assist the audience, should a fire ever evade the many snares laid for it in the Park theater and threaten the patrons.

The house, which has always used Universal service, celebrated its first anniversary on January 4. A Unit orchestra of exceptional merit has been installed and a ladies' and gentlemen's retiring room form part of the comforts provided by Mr. Dunning for his clientele.

The Royal Alexandria theater, in Montreal, is being managed by Leon Slessinger, who will occupy this post for some two or three months. Slessinger Brothers now own this theater, which accounts for Mr. Leon's presence. The results of his vigorous executive powers is already visible in the increase in the patronage of this theater.

ILLINOIS

W. W. Watts, proprietor of the Vaudette motion picture at Springfield, has announced that he will build a $10,000 picture play house at Petersburg, to take the place of the Rex theater recently destroyed by fire. The new theater will seat about 700. Arthur Simon will be manager.

Earl Drone, of the Royal motion picture theater at Pawnee, has installed a Minusa screen.

INDIANA

Clyde and Sidney Wilson, brothers, of Knox, have bought the three motion picture theaters of Rochester. They bought the Paramount theatre from Ray Blausser and the K. G. theatre and K. G. Garden from Roy Shanks, for a consideration said to be more than $7,000. They will take possession of the K. G. theatre and the K. G. Garden on February 7, and the Paramount theatre was turned over January 17.

Clyde Wilson has had several years' experience in motion pictures, having had a house for several years in Argos. The brother is a traveling salesman.

John Palmer has bought a half interest in the Temple theater at Macy from Frank Musselman. The theater will be managed under the name of Sliver and Palmer.

J. E. Whitley, who has been manager of the Colonia theater at Kokomo since it was purchased by Charles Lyons, more than a year ago, has bought the theater from Mr. Lyons. Mr. Whitley will make no changes in the theater.

IOWA

Edward Boyle, proprietor of the Dreamland theater, is remodeling the former Bistram Saloon building, into which he will move about February 1 with a seating capacity of 400. George W. Walker will remain in charge of projection.

The Princess, formerly a ten-cent house, has changed its admission price to five cents; the Strand, belonging to same company, has put in the Triangle program at ten cents.

KANSAS

On January 15 the new Palace theater at Wichita, built by Chambers and Miller, opened.

C. B. Yost, owner of the Pearl theater at Hutchinson, is building a new theater in that city that will seat five hundred. It is expected that it will be opened in the early spring.

KENTUCKY

Fire early in the morning on January 11 caused damage of $80,000 to the Ben Ali theater, Lexington. The blaze was discovered by Ham Brown, advertising manager of the theater, who had apartments on the third floor of the building.

All the stage furnishings, the electrical system and the interior of the house was badly damaged by heat and smoke. The east wall crumbled and fell upon an adjoining building.

The Ben Ali theater was built about three years ago by a stock company headed by the late James B. Haggin and together with its furnishings cost $200,000. According to Manager Berryman, the loss is fully covered by insurance. The Ben Ali was formerly a legitimate house, but was changed to a motion picture theater a few months ago.

MASSACHUSETTS

The towns of Arlington and Belmont are to have two new motion picture theaters. Arlington's will be called the Washington theater and Belmont's the Belmont.

Gentlemen:

Enclosed find our check for the balance due on the two screens which you recently installed in the Duplex Theatre.

We wish to advise you we are more than pleased with our screens and feel that we made a wise decision when we placed Masterlite Screens in our house. At the time we took up the matter of the screens we went over the entire field and examined various other screens finally deciding on the Masterlite, and as stated above, feel that our choice was a wise one.

We have had numerone exhibitors in our house since our opening who have come to see the Duplex, the only one of its kind in the world, and they have invariably asked what screen we were using, inasmuch as our pictures, light and projection in general was better than they had ever seen.

If at any time we can be of service to you, do not hesitate to call upon us.

Youre very truly,

GRAND BOULEVARD THEATRE COMPANY.

H M Payne

General Manager.

We are going to make you a very SPECIAL OFFER, never before heard of from any gold fibre screen manufacturer. We are going to save you from 30 to 40% by selling our screen DIRECT to YOU, and giving you the DEALER'S PROFIT.

We manufacture but ONE GRADE, the best that money and brains can produce.

The letter we are publishing fully demonstrates the quality of our screen. But we are going further, and show you our screen in your theatre, just like the merchant in your local store shows you his goods on his counter.

In writing for sample, kindly mention the size of screen you are using.

Our special price is within reach of all.

Stockholders of the Gillingham and Smith Enterprises, Grand Rapids, at the annual meeting on January 8 elected the following officers for the ensuing year: A. J. Gillingham, of Detroit, president and managing director; H. C. Cornelius, vice-president; W. J. Clark, secretary; Charles H. Seaman, treasurer and general manager; Tom Parker Junkin, assistant manager and press representative. The above corporation operates a chain of eight theaters in Grand Rapids.

George P. Wilbur, formerly manager of the Grand theatre, Columbus, Ohio, has been appointed manager of the Majestic and Marx theaters in Wyandotte, which are controlled by Caille and Guathard.

R. G. McGaw succeeds Harry Irons as manager of the Liberty theater, Detroit. Mr. McGaw for nearly nine years was manager of the Ticket Selling Department of the Temple-Keith vaudeville theatre. He has a very large acquaintance among theatregoers. Mr. Irons resigned on account of his health and will pass the winter in New Orleans.

MISSOURI

The Casino theater, at 1618 Market street, St. Louis, reopened on January 8, after extensive alterations and repairs, which enlarged the house and increased the seating capacity by several hundred.

John Karzin, proprietor of the Casino, operates the Royal also, at 1629 Market street, and the Paradise airdome at Eighteenth and Chestnut streets. Mr. Karzin is president of the McKinley Amusement Company, which runs the Majestic theater on Franklin avenue.

The Webster theater, on Twelfth and Clinton streets, St. Louis, opened for business on January 8, with an all-picture bill and a continuous performance on Sundays from 2 to 10:30 p. m.

The Lewis theater, Independence, was entirely destroyed by fire on January 11. The house was located in a $50,000 building and the insurance amounting to $40,000 will partly cover the damage.

John E. Lewis, owner of the destroyed amusement place, says that he will rebuild immediately. In the meantime the show will be seen in the old Keystone theater.

The brick work on the new motion picture theater that is being erected at Harrisonville has been completed. It is expected to open about March 1.

NEBRASKA

At David City a new community house that cost $20,000 has recently been completed. It includes a motion picture show that seats five hundred. Manager Carlisle King is booking first run Paramount and V-L-S-E features for the theater.

OKLAHOMA

C. W. Finney is the manager of the Liberty theater, Oklahoma City. The place cost $60,000 to build. February 1 is opening day.

G. A. Woods is building a $5,000 theater in Lawton to seat nine hundred.

The Empress theatre at Chickasha will open the middle of February.

PENNSYLVANIA

The name of the Alvin theater at Washington has been changed to The Idle Hour. It is one of the best theaters in the town.

Nat Glasser, for six years manager of the Leader theater, Washington, D. C., has severed his connections with that house to take up similar duties with the Stanley Company of Philadelphia. He is now manager of the Great Northern theater, a Stanley house at Broad street and Erie avenue, in the Quaker City.

TEXAS

W. M. Conroe, of Conroe, has let a contract for a picture house to be built in that city. It will stand on a lot 25 by 98 feet, and will be of brick with a lobby, nine feet deep.

Hugh Hamilton is erecting a $35,000 house at Houston.

Lou Bissinger, late of the Queen, is now manager of the Washington theater, Dallas.

The Aladdin theater, Denison, has been leased by E. A. Kinney from L. M. Ridout.

WISCONSIN

Herman F. Thiel, of Marshfield, contemplates the remodeling of his store on Central avenue and Third street into a photoplay house having a seating capacity of about five hundred. The building is of brick.

Architect H. C. Lotter, of Milwaukee, has taken the figures for the steel work on the new theater to be erected by Otto Meister on Third street, north of Grand avenue.

The building is to be of brick, concrete and steel skeleton, fireproof construction, one story and balcony. The theater when finished will have a capacity of about 1,500 and will cost about $50,000.

Plans are being prepared for the erection of a theater for Otto Bell, proprietor of the Royal theater of Sparta, by Architects Parkinson and Dockendorff, of LaCross. The theater is expected to cost about $25,000 and is to be built on South Water street.

C. W. Rice, manager of the Unique theater in Milwaukee, is planning to build an addition to it that will increase the seating capacity from 250 to 500. The plans have not as yet been completed and work is not expected to start for some time.

It is reported that a site has been offered with free rent for twenty years to the Kenosha Retailers' Association, Kenosha, upon which they contemplate the erection of an auditorium costing about $35,000. It is said that plans will include a projector and theater chairs, so that the hall can be converted into a theater.

MURRAY OPENS PICTURE THEATRE IN MORSE BUILDING, BANGOR, ME.

Bangor, Me., Jan. 13.

ON Monday, January 17, Peter Murray, formerly of the Murray Stock Company will open a moving picture and vaudeville house in the new Morse building on the Kenduskeag embankment of this city.

This theatre will be known as the Morse Winter Garden and will be something entirely new here. Mr. Murray now plans on showing some of the better pictures early in the evening and following this up with a form of cabaret. Dancing will be in order and the numbers will be interspersed with vaudeville numbers and pictures.

The hall, which is the handsomest in the eastern part of Maine, is the latest in the state used for this purpose and is handsomely decorated. It occupies the third floor of this big building, the entrance from the post office mall being by way of a concrete and iron bridge, to the second floor, which is occupied by a bowling alley and pool parlor.

The building was made especially for these purposes and the floors are such as to prevent the sound from the alley, coming up to the picture house.

Tables have been ordered, these to be placed around the outer edge of the floor, leaving the center for dancing. Refreshments will be served during the entertainment. Later in the season the management intends to put in a portable raised floor and conduct a straight moving picture and vaudeville entertainment.

This is the first time such an entertainment has been attempted in this city and its success is looked forward to by many.

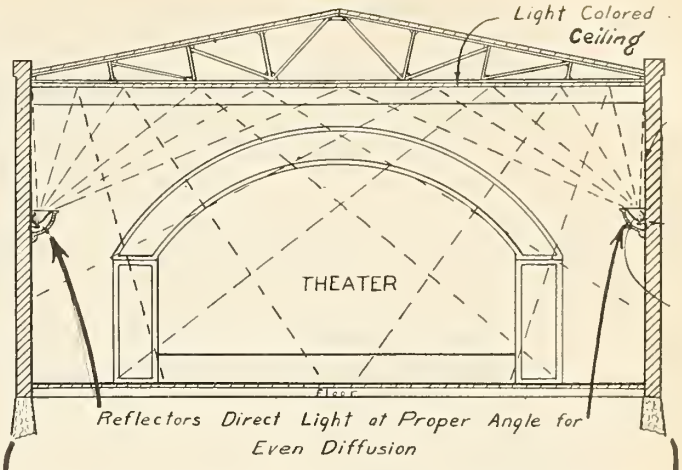
STILL ANOTHER "LEGITIMATE" HOUSE IN NEW ORLEANS BECOMES A PICTURE THEATRE EXCLUSIVELY

NEW ORLEANS is to have another first-class motion picture theatre. A few days ago Ernst Boehringer, representing the Columbia Amusement Company, leased the Greenwall theatre, and it will be known as the Triangle, devoted to the Triangle program.

It is announced that the entire house will be remodeled and renovated. The opening date is January 16. Two late type Simplex machines and a Minusa screen will be installed. Following the policy set by the Crescent, there will be a change of pictures twice a week.

As announced several weeks ago in Motion Picture News, Mr. Boehringer's choice of theatres to show the Triangle program, lay between the Greenwall and a few other downtown theatres. The Greenwall seats 2,200, and is the largest theatre in the city.

Opening of two of the largest theatres in the city in motion pictures, heretofore legitimate, has created a situation unprecedented in New Orleans. A review of motion picture conditions in this territory three months hence will afford an interesting study. Right now the competition is so keen that all exhibitors in the Crescent city have had to take steps to materially strengthen their programs. The New Orleans picture-going public mainly benefits.



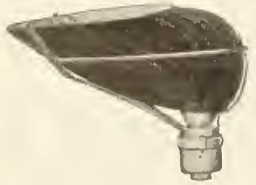
Beautify Your Theatre With Artistic Lighting

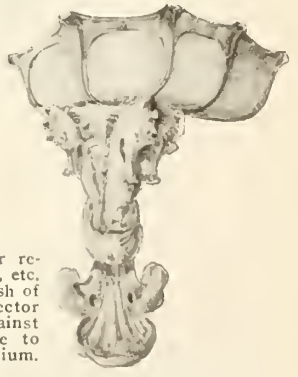
If you met a man who had lighted 2,000 theatres, you would be glad to have his advice about lighting your house, because his advice would be worth dollars to you.

He could tell you how to obtain original effects—the kind that get your house talked about—at no increased cost.

He could tell you about the newest in lighting—how to light during the show so as not to interfere with projection—how to flood the interior with sunlight from hidden lamps—how to make a low-ceilinged house look spacious—how to get away from fixtures hanging from the ceiling.

That man is in our engineering department—and he'll gladly tell you all he has learned in lighting over 2,000 theatres and not charge one penny.





This is an X-Ray silvered-mirror reflector for use in wall-urns, coves, etc. Its peculiar shape avoids any splash of light on the wall above the reflector and the light is thrown out against the ceiling at the proper angle to uniformly light the entire auditorium.

CONCEALED LIGHTING With X-Ray Reflectors

is the new way in theatre lighting. Strikingly beautiful effects are assured, whether the ceiling is high or low and the cost for this original way of lighting is no more than with the common-place method.

Consult our theatre lighting specialist. Write for information about this effective lighting. Fill out the coupon below and let him tell you all about it. The information will be invaluable to you, because it is based on actual experience in lighting over 2,000 theatres. It's free. Fill out the coupon and get it—NOW.

TEMPLE THEATRE, MISHAWAKA, IND., A 500-SEAT HOUSE, OPENS WITH "CAMILLE," WORLD FILM

THE Temple, Main street and Lincoln Highway, Mishawaka's, Ind., new motion picture theatre, opened last week with "Camille" the World Film Corporation's photoplay with Clara Kimball Young, in the leading role.

The new theatre is a great improvement for the business district of Mishawaka, Ind. It is located right at the "four corners" and was formerly the old post office site. O. J. Lambiotte, the manager, is an experienced theatrical man, who has a chain of theatres in Indiana, and who has moved to Mishawaka from Crawfordsville.

The theatre has all the modern advantages of the theatres in the larger cities. It has no steps or inclines either at the entrance or exits. The improvements were made at a cost of $8,000.

The building on which Mr. Lambiotte has a five year lease with permission of long time renewal is 115 feet long on Main street and 24 feet wide facing Lincoln Way. The theatre occupies the ground floor only. An awning has been provided in addition to a canopy for Main street for use in bad weather.

The Main street front is of ornamental stucco with relief ornamentations. Over the walk is a full width canopy lighted with many incandescent bulbs. Over the canopy is a large motion electric sign with the word Temple.

The predominating colors are red and white. The entrance floor is of mosaic tile in black and white with a twelve-inch border. In the tile is set the word Temple.

In the center is the ticket booth with an automatic selling machine. On each side are double entrances and exits with mahogany doors and to the east is the entrance to the balcony and to the Masonic temple.

The interior is finished in mahogany and cream. The ceiling is in cream with beam ceilings. This also applies to the balcony. Plaster relief ornamentation about eighteen inches from the ceiling, including wreath and cupids around the entire auditorium and across the front of the balcony and boxes and richness and beauty. The proscenium is arched with plaster relief decorated in gold leaf. On each side are singers' booths richly decorated and over each large plaster images in gold and brilliant colors.

In front of the screen to the right and left are electric fountains and from the basins emerge artificial fireproof vines which climb up the sides.

The seats are of mahogany and black enameled iron in which is cast the letter "T," gilded. The total seating capacity is five-hundred, including one-hundred seats in the balcony.

In the balcony to the east is located the fireproof machine booth constructed of tile and cement. In it are located two Powers 6-A machines. Also a Martin rotary convertor which transforms the alternating current to a direct current, assuring a clear, steady picture. It also makes less noise and removes flickering. It cost seven hundred dollars.

The orchestra pit is large enough for a good-sized orchestra. For the present the Lambiotte saxaphone orchestra of five pieces will provide music. On special occasions singers and musicians of ability will sing.

R. O. Wilhite, of Crawfordsville, was the general contractor and supervised the construction personally.

The Temple will present the best pictures to be obtained, including Triangle, Fox, and World pictures.

MOLLER ORGAN INSTALLED IN MARCUS LOEW'S AVENUE B THEATRE, NEW YORK CITY

THE Moller Organ Company of Hagerstown, Md., has installed in Marcus Loew's Avenue B theatre, Fifth street and Avenue B, the largest theatre organ now in use in New York City. This organ is the only Four Manual organ now in use in any New York theatre.

In spite of its size it is used in conjunction with an orchestra of twelve instruments. Marcus Loew deserves much credit in affording such high-class entertainment in a section of the city, that boasts as being the most congested in the world.

A refined feature picture program is given with specially adapted musical program and organ recital.

This organ is marvelously constructed, and weighs over six tons. Under the able management of Samuel Kuhn, this theatre has always been a money-getter; but since the installation of the organ the ceiling has been entirely too low.

OPENING OF CRESCENT MARKS NEW ERA IN AMUSEMENT CIRCLES OF NEW ORLEANS

OPENING of the Crescent theatre, New Orleans, as the South's premier picture house, with a seating capacity closely approximating 2,000, was accomplished last week with capacity crowds attending each performance. Never before in the history of the city have fashionable audiences given the stamp of their approval to motion pictures as that evidenced last week.

As an example how a high-class motion picture program will command attention from the theatre-going population of New Orleans, is shown by comparative Sunday night attendance figures at the Crescent and the Tulane theatres.

The Tulane is the Crescent's next door K. and E. theatre. "Everywoman" was the attraction at the legitimate house. Mary Pickford, in "The Foundling," held the boards at the Crescent, and Miss Pickford packed more persons into the screen house than the legitimate attraction did, though of course, under a reduced price scale.

The Crescent is being operated as nearly like the Strand of New York as is possible. W. F. Bosner, of New York, is the manager. The scenic and lighting effects, combined with the Paramount-Crescent orchestra, created unprecedented enthusiasm Sunday night. The New Orleans public at last realizes that it has a genuine motion picture house.

THE AVENUE THEATRE, A STOCK HOUSE, NOW SHOWS TRIANGLE PICTURES EXCLUSIVELY

THE Triangle Theatre Corporation has leased the Avenue theatre, Woodward and Jefferson avenues, Detroit, Mich., from Frank Drew who for a number of years conducted the house as a stock theatre. The Avenue—now the Triangle theatre—has a large seating capacity and makes an ideal motion picture house.

The principal stockholders of the new operating company are P P. Craft and Fred Randall. James Rutherford, formerly press agent and assistant manager of the Miles, has been appointed manager of the Triangle. Ivan Rudisill, of New York City, has been appointed musical director.

The house will play exclusively Triangle films, showing them first in the downtown section of Detroit. The interior has been newly decorated, recarpeted and made in an entirely new house. The orchestra—fifteen pieces—occupies the stage instead of the pit.

Contracts will be let at once for the remodeling of the front and the complete changing of the interior. Considerable money is being spent on all parts of the theatre to make it one of the most beautiful in the Middle West.

Mr. Weiss' long and varied experience both with Wurlitzer, and the Columbia Phonograph Company, makes his services to the Bartola valuable.

SALOONS DISCOURAGED AS PART OF THEATRE PROPERTY

A MAN in Wisconsin states that he figures on erecting a building on a lot approximately a little over 40 feet by 100 feet. It is located directly in the center of his village. The place has a saloon license, which business he desires to conduct downstairs.

He wishes his vestibule in the center and a little store on each side with either office room or a living apartment above the vestibule and stores. He desires about seven hundred seats to be obtained by having an orchestra and a small balcony.

He asks advice for such an arrangement and whether it would also be advisable to have lodge rooms and hall for private dances above the theatre. He desires to realize as much revenue as possible for the size of the town which I interpret from his letter to be 1,400 inhabitants.

This inquiry is like many others received, not only from small towns from all over the country, but even from towns as large as 20,000 inhabitants. Every proposition as has often been said in these columns heretofore, must be studied as a problem of itself.

The editor can but answer such an inquiry in a general manner. The proposition should be taken up from various standpoints. If the land value is great, which certainly cannot be in the instance of a town of 5,000 or less, the owner must seek as large a net income from his property as possibly can be obtained.

He will proceed to study what additional revenues can be secured by additional stores, offices, apartments and lodge rooms, etc. No matter what additional space for renting is applied, a careful consideration must be given as to the proper proportion of net rental from theatre to the net rental of the property with the increased space, as net cost of theatre property is to net cost of theatre property plus the cost of the increased space.

The writer would comment upon separately the value of stores, of saloons, of offices, apartments and of lodge rooms. Stores directly in the thick of the business section of even a small community are likely to bring a good rent, and in such locations only may they be given consideration.

It is doubtful if even then the rental to be obtained for the space devoted to stores, will average up to the value to the theatre. If the theatre has need for this space for only holidays and Saturdays to accommodate an overflow, it can be readily figured that the said space will bring a return rental of greater amount than obtainable from two small stores in small towns.

From that standpoint it appears to me rather essential that the Wisconsin man had better devote his first floor entirely to his theatre. Saloons are a great revenue, at least they used to be before the motion picture craze sobered up the people and brought them into a better mode of living.

The writer cannot see how in any way a saloon proposition should be encouraged in conjunction with any recreation center where women and children are encouraged to attend. In every community there will be found some persons who would object to such close relationship.

Offices and apartments are not likely to bring a return in a theatre property to make up for the necessary additional cost of building construction, unless it be the former in a large city, and then the theatre must be in the heart of the business and office district.

TO YOU, MR. EXHIBITOR

we have the following to announce

A projecting machine will be ready for distribution on or about the first of May, 1916, that will have better features in it than the best and highest priced machine sold today.

The mechanism will be constructed in such a way that you will be able to use it on any make stand or equipment without changing or altering same.

A smaller amount of gears, meaning a smaller amount of expense and trouble for repairing, all gears running in oil all the time, meaning longer life to gears. Main shafts have ball-bearings, meaning an everlasting wear on them with no chance of play or wabbling in course of running. All parts of machine except crank on one side covered, the other side free and open for repairing, threading or removing a part instantly.

Four screws will remove the entire working movement, parts replaced screwed back in position, all this can be done in less than ten minutes. Case hardened, shaft, sprockets, and all parts that can be hardened. Gears made of phosphor bronze ½" thick on facing, helical cut, noiseless, flickerless, durable, all for about $100.00 for the mechanism and about $175.00 to $200.00 for the finest and best complete equipments. You won't pay for name plates, serial numbers or fancy advertising, bear this in mind.

TO YOU, MR. DEALER, we say this. We will not place any strings on our selling you our goods, we will not tell you that we are doing you a favor for letting you sell our goods. We will not let the so called JOBBER undersell you because he can buy at a jobber's price and you must buy at a dealer's price. There will be Jobbers, but they will be restricted from selling to the Exhibitor, they will act as accommodation for the dealer, and will not work against you.

We will permit you to use your own ability, methods, efforts, and will not ruin your business at a time when it suits our convenience; bear this in mind.

Now, Mr. Exhibitor and Dealer, it is up to you. We worked with you for 15 years giving you good merchandise at a lower price, and have prospered, thanks to the unprejudiced and fair-minded. You will wait before you make any change in your equipment; it will more than pay you. We are incorporating for upwards of One Hundred Thousand Dollars. If you have money to invest, let us know. Stock will be for sale.

We are not Bull Slingers; you know that.

Music and the Picture

Edited by Ernst Luz

This department is maintained for the exhibitor's assistance with a view of suggesting proper musical illustrations for current photo plays. MOTION PICTURE NEWS will be pleased to help solve any difficulties the exhibitors may have with their musical programs. All communications should be addressed to the Music and the Picture Department.

Music and Picture Must Blend, Like a Smooth Cocktail

MONDAY morning editions of metropolitan newspapers are usually dull reading in their theatrical news, but the New York Times, on Monday, January 10, carried a very interesting column under the heading "Luxury the Lure of the Movies. Comfortable Theatres with Good Orchestras Have Supplanted Old Nickelodeons."

It reads: "The lure of the movies is a source of wonderment only to those who do not go to see them. Not only have the films made great strides since the nickelodeon days, but their manner of presentation has been revolutionized.

"The ill-smelling storeroom converted into a theatre, with a tin-panny piano and a raucous-voiced soloist for the music, has been supplanted by a palatial playhouse, equipped with a symphony orchestra, vocal and instrumental soloists and a pipe organ.

"Yesterday was not much of a day for promenading and more than the usual number in quest of diversion drifted into the hundreds of picture theatres about town."

After this the writer goes into an extensive criticism of the performance he witnessed in true theatrical style, which I omit here as it has no bearing on this department. After the writer's criticisms, he closes his article, saying:

"There is some question as to the endurance of the public on a straight diet of photo-plays, but the clever blending of the picture and music presents a vista of infinite possibilities."

Article Is Criticism, Not Publicity Matter

The article in question was undoubtedly written by a theatrical critic and has been placed in my files as the first one coming to my notice from one musically disinterested and seeking as he says, "The lure of the movies."

Up to this time it has always been the lot of the musician to speak whatever good could be publicly said of picture music. It has always been my contention, that until the public press saw fit to give unbiased criticisms of picture entertainment, as they have always done with other theatrical attractions, the success of picture music would be slow in assuming its proper place in picture theatre entertainment.

The article in its entirety proves that the writer visited the picture theatre to be entertained, nothing more, and every picture musician should appreciate the fact that the blending of the picture and music appealed to him as the perpetual success of the picture theatre and the means wherewith we can look forward to still greater future possibilities.

The article I speak of was not so called publicity, but criticism, which will be the future life of the picture theatre.

When the picture theatre performance becomes a matter of public criticism in our daily papers, we will see greater strides made in the picture theatre, than have ever been dreamed of.

There are still many who would prefer the electric sign alone for advertising purposes, but these are either afraid that the business will grow beyond their personal capabilities or do not have the industry at large at heart.

Forewarned is forearmed and every musician and exhibitor or theatre manager should have picture music uppermost in his mind and seek for all the information possible. It is safe to say that at the present time no question regarding picture theatre music of practical value to the exhibitor can arise that cannot be properly adjusted.

Intelligence and Ability Necessary for Success

Every musician seems to think he can play pictures or make musical picture set-ups, but until the audience says he can, he simply cannot. Perfected picture music will require greater talent, than any other necessary department to the making of a picture.

Consequently we cannot hope to develop it as was the scenario department, by advertising that education or a great amount of intelligence was unnecessary to write a good script.

On the contrary, the music end will require intelligence and ability, the best that the musical profession can produce and the only way we can hope to obtain these, is by creating lucrative positions. There are never ending opportunities for musicians in the picture field, who have not neglected every other study but music and are willing to take up this work as entirely new, making the necessary musical researches to fit them for bringing to a successful issue the correct and better blending of music and the picture.

Every musician and exhibitor is welcome to use this department for advice or to express his views.

Every theatre owner and manager, as well as every musician, has his own idea as to just how pictures should be played and what is necessary in order to make his house popular from a musical standpoint.

Some realize that their knowledge and experience properly treated and set forth will be of value to others who may not enjoy their success, but they do not know how to make their suggestions of benefit to others.

There are also those who want help and these are perhaps the majority. Yet they do not know where or how to get this assistance.

* * * * *

The Music Department of the "News" is for just this purpose.

We will publish the opinions of any of our readers, or we will answer any of their questions; in fact, we are here for the express purpose of promoting better picture music.

Mr. Luz is an expert. It is because of his knowledge that several houses, which in the past have failed, are now making wonderful successes.

Why not take advantage of his knowledge?

* * * * *

Manufacturers of musical instruments and music accessories are also invited and requested to send in to this department news items, descriptions, etc., of anything new which is being placed upon the market and which will be of interest to motion picture theatre owners.

* * * * *

This department is open to all.

This picture opens, making us believe that we are to see a society drama, but it takes us through the different stages of picturedom, until it finally closes strictly Western. After the first two reels, the action goes fast and furious, requiring special musical attention to give it a proper musical setting.

Unless the proper short numbers, from which segues can be readily made are used in the third reel, you will find it very difficult to play. The set-up that I suggest will be found very simple; care should be taken that when Dr. Andte is suggested the number must be short.

Music Notes.—The melodramatic numbers 11, 12, 14, 15, 16, 18, 19, 20, 23, 25, 31 and 33 are very important. No. 1 should be a very light galop, not played fast and very piano. Has no especial meaning only to create a hurried musical impression.

Nos. 2, 6, 10, 17, 21, 28 and 34 are slow heavy numbers played legato and with picture expression. The romantic or pathetic appeal should be humored as suggested in plot. No. 3 should be a medium slow 6/8 number, not heavy.

Nos. 4, 7 and 26 should be slow dreamy waltzes played very legato. Nos. 5 and 22 should be light 2/4 numbers, not marches. Nos. 24-27 and 29 should be 2/4 western character intermezzos.

Nos. 30 and 32 should be heavy galops played very fast. No. 8 can be an inter-trot. Must not be a medley trot. Nos. 9 and 13 are very important as they illustrate tableaus posed at a reception on screen and are very effective.

After the first two reels the picture becomes very difficult for the organ. The Western character is never satisfactorily obtained on the organ.

All slow heavy numbers can be played very effectively on the organ, however.

FACTORIES OF BARTOLA COMPANY BECOME MECCA FOR VISITORS

SINCE the installation of the new $10,000 Bartola DeLuxe orchestra in the Grand Opera House of Oshkosh, Wisconsin, that town, the home of the Bartola factories, has become a mecca for exhibitors of that section.

Among one of the many parties that Charles C. Pyle, general sales agent of the Bartola company, has taken to see this new instrument was George H. Hines, an exhibitor of South Bend, Indiana.

Mr. Hines has a Bartola Grand in his Auditorium theater, a 1,650 seat house, and is more than enthusiastic over the music this instrument provides for his pictures, so when he learned of the new Bartola DeLuxe, he decided to investigate it before installing a large and expensive pipe organ which he had contemplated purchasing to use in conjunction with his Bartola for organ recitals and special musical recitals.

Mr. Hines was much impressed with the rich organ tones of the new Bartola DeLuxe and the many new orchestral effects which can be obtained from this instrument.

The party which went last Thursday from Chicago to hear this concert and demonstration in Oshkosh included Mr. and Mrs. George H. Hines, Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Pyle, A. J. Ohlsen, the Bartola sales agent for Cleveland; R. J. Danaher, one of the Chicago sales force, and a representative of MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

The party was most hospitably entertained while at Oshkosh by W. G. Maxcy, president of the Bartola Company, and Dan Barton, inventor of the instrument.

Lodge rooms, private dance halls, etc. placed upon a theatre, must of necessity entail a large increase in cost of construction. The revenue obtained from such source is not definite. The revenue will depend upon the demand of such an accommodation and the ability of those who desire to rent to pay a reasonable sum. Experience has generally shown that lodges owning their own buildings have taken a great personal pride in the design and construction of the same, and have taken great care to obtain high efficiency and great economy in the management, and in such instances a fair return is obtained upon the investment.

It is likewise generally shown that where such institutional investment is not made, the members of lodges have shown a contrasting disinterest in the care of other people's property. The furnishings are ruined, the premises are abused, the lodges are wasteful as to gas, water and heat; the cleaning of the premises becomes expensive, and when all is taken into consideration, together with interest on the original investment and depreciation, little or nothing is left from the receipts thus obtained, and it may be therefore fairly well concluded that such accommodations would not be beneficial to the property.

A rather smaller building and a smaller investment on this property of our correspondent is likely to bring him less trouble, less worry, and a better investment than any of the other ideas in his inquiry. The shape of his land, the grade of the property, building ordinances of his town, if any, and those of the state, may demand a peculiar treatment of the proposition.

FARRAR AND KIMBALL

With the Broadway Theatre, New York, bursting with people and a queue a block long waiting to see Geraldine Farrar in "Temptation," the owners, the manager, the musical director and organists, the public—all give the great orchestral organ just completed by the Kimball Company, a large share in the credit for the heavy business.

The Farrar engagement had to be extended for two weeks —the organ engagement is unlimited.

E. R. ANDERSON

FEW men in this world enjoy the distinction of having created something which so greatly benefits the masses as does our Mr. Anderson. He is the "Thomas Edison" in the science he has chosen as his life work. This genius is a modest, unassuming man with a tremendous capacity for solving "Scientific Riddles."

About ten years ago Mr. Anderson's attention became centered on the subject of Motion Picture Screens—in those days screen were made up, for the most part, of bed sheets. After mastering the difficult subject of "Projection" in all its phases he began experimenting, finally perfecting what was universally conceded to be the best screen made. From that time on down to the present day he has exerted every effort to make picture screens as nearly perfect as is possible to make them. Today he is recognized as the originator and perfector of the only REAL SCREEN made—THE MINUSA GOLD FIBRE SCREEN.

Like all good inventions, Mr. Anderson's screen was soon imitated. Several screen makers sprang up who produced something "Just as good," which was nothing more than drill canvas painted over with a kind of gold paint, something which any fourteen-year-old boy could have done. Unfortunately for these "near screen" makers, these imitations "betrayed their guilt" after being in service for a short while, and the exhibitor awakened to the fact that he had paid a "pretty penny" for painted drill canvas.

These imitators caused Mr. Anderson to include in his advertising the slogan, "The ORIGINAL GOLD FIBRE SCREEN—Perfected." The full name of this inimitable screen is the MINUSA GOLD FIBRE SCREEN—"Built by Brains." The significance of the "Built by Brains" slogan is to distinguish it from the drill canvas kind. Mr. Anderson's screen is "Built by Brains," because each and every one is built to suit the requirements of each individual theatre. To make a long story short, the "Anderson Method" made "Minusa Gold Fibre" screen is built to specifications submitted, just as lenses are ground to fit YOUR spectacles.

CHAS. HETZEL

MR. HETZEL is a famous German synthetical chemist, having graduated with bigh honors from the University of Heidelberg at Heidelberg, Germany. He has been associated with us since we organized, and it is largely through his masterful mind and the efficiency he insists on among the chemists in bis laboratory that we bave grown so successful.

Mr. Hetzel is a man who loves his work—one of those men who look as grave as a supreme court judge—always thinking great thoughts. He has much to absorb him. Mr. Hetzel personally supervises the entire screen building process from start to finish, not the slightest detail escapes his keen mind—that is why there is but ONE REAL SCREEN—the "MINUSA." That is what we mean by "Built by Brains."

NAT. I. BROWN

HAVING outlined the history of the "MINUSA GOLD FIBRE SCREEN" from its earliest inception to its finished state of perfection, this article would be wanting did we not acquaint you with the wizard of the Sales Department—Mr. Nat I. Brown.

Mr. Brown is a familiar figure to most distributors of motion theatre equipment, and a great many exhibitors from "Broadway" to the "Gate," and from Canada to Mexico. His fund of knowledge concerning everything connected with the motion picture game, from film producing to getting crowds to the theatre, is recognized and appreciated by all who know him. He is a great big, whole-souled, genial sort of fellow who can start more enthusiasm in a "Dead town" than a "Declaration of War."

WITH SUCH A "TRIO" BACK OF YOU IT IS A SIMPLE MATTER TO MAKE A SUCCESS OF THE GAME—Try it!

THOMAS RICKETTS, DIRECTOR, AMERICAN

THOMAS RICKETTS, director of the special feature company making Mutual Masterpictures for the American Film Manufacturing Company at the Santa Barbara studios, has perhaps filmed more stories of a greater variety, and brought out on the stage and screen more stars than any other producer of today. Mr. Ricketts was born in London, and spent the first years of his life in England.

The first time he came to America he remained but three years, and then returned to his native land where he chose the stage as a profession, playing several years with the best and greatest actors of the day, including Mr. Irving. Returning to America he took up comic opera with Kathrine Lewis, playing at Daly's Fifth Avenue theatre in "The Olivett," in which Mr. Ricketts appeared as the Duke Desiff.

He wrote and produced his own play "Duvar," which opened at the Boston Grand Opera House in 1881. He was at that time frequently referred to as the youngest dramatic star carrying the weight of legitimate drama. Later he accepted a stock engagement at the Tivoli Opera House at San Francisco, where, as a comedian, he played in some of the best known comic operas, including "Girofle-Girofla," "Bells of Corneville," "Quilo," "LaFille de Madame," "Angol," "Madame Cartouche," "The Yeoman of the Gods."

For three years he directed and produced exclusively for stock companies staging standard dramas. Subsequently he went to New York where he finished his stage career as director and producer for Charles Frohman, Klaw and Erlanger, the Shuberts, Fred C. Whitney, Henry Dixie, and the Garrick Theatre Company, and others.

Eight years ago Mr. Ricketts took up his first work in motion pictures. His work was with the Essanay company, where he remained three years. He went to the American to organize the first company, where he produced the first six or seven pictures. Later he became affiliated with the David Horsley Nestor Company, and was sent to the California studio. For a number of months Mr. Ricketts remained with the Universal company, making one, two and three-reel subjects. Two years and a half ago he returned to the American at Santa Barbara shortly after the studio had been opened there, and when the stage was but twenty feet square and the property consisted of four sets of scenery. With the beginning of his engagement a new standard was set for American subjects, credit for which is in a very large measure due to Mr. Ricketts.

During the past year this director has devoted practically all of his time to the making of Mutual Masterpictures.

JOSEPHINE DITT, LEADS AND CHARACTERS, AMERICAN

JOSEPHINE DITT, who has been in pictures for the past seven years playing leads and characters, is a former legitimate stage actress who, during her work on the stage, gained a most enviable reputation by her affiliation with the leading producing organizations of the country, including many engagements with original companies in Chicago and New York.

Miss Ditt's first motion picture experience was with the Essanay company, where she played in light comedies, appearing opposite G. M. Anderson in his first subjects. When the American company was formed Miss Ditt was chosen as leading woman, and played in all of the company's productions during the first year.

JOSEPHINE DITT, LEADS AND CHARACTERS, AMERICAN. JOSEPHINE DITT AS THE WOMAN IN "DAMAGED GOODS."

Later she united with the David Horsley Nestor company where, under the direction of Thomas Ricketts, she played leads in comedies and dramas. Many of these were made without sets, stops or subtitles to which experience Miss Ditt refers as the most strenuous in her career, and all who have a desire to appear in such a subject she stoutly declares should try one.

The titles of two of these sub-titleless dramas are "The Mills of the Gods" and "The Foreign Spy." For a time Miss Ditt played with the Christie Nestor comedies and for Universal companies.

For the past two and a half years Miss Ditt has been affiliated with the American company playing leads or characters in all of the company's early productions. One of her recent releases is that of "Damaged Goods" in which Richard Bennett is featured and Miss Ditt portrays the part of the woman.

By virtue of her long stage and motion picture experience Miss Ditt is so well schooled in acting that she is capable of playing any kind of a part from juvenile to those of aged women and of all types.

Directors have commented on Miss Ditt's ability to throw herself into the spirit of a part, and thereby give a most sincere portrayal of the character. She has been more than ordinarily successful in making her emotions and expressions "register" and this has resulted in an unusual ability to "screen" the scene in which she is the central figure.

This proficiency is largely responsible for her having been cast in such a wide range of characters, to each of which she has applied herself with concentration which excludes everything except the special character in hand.

WM. F. RUSSELL, LEADS, AMERICAN

WILLIAM F. RUSSELL, known as "Big Bill," played his first engagement as a boy actor with Charles Hopper at Wallack's theatre in "Chimmie Fadden" at the age of eight. After this engagement he was taken from the stage to be educated, and graduated from Fordham College. He then returned to the stage, playing with Ethel Barrymore in "Cousin Kate."

He supported such stars as David Higgins, Ezra Kendall, Blanche Bates, Chauncey Olcott, and was leading man with Roselle Knot.

THREE STUDIES OF WILLIAM RUSSELL, STARRED IN AMERICAN MUTUAL MASTERPICTURES.

He played in stock as leading man in St. Joe, Mo., and in Philadelphia was leading man with the Poli stock company. He starred two years as St. Elmo, and has been in vaudeville, appearing in dramatic sketches.

Mr. Russell is an all-around athlete. He graduated from Bernarr McFadden's Physical Culture School, and became a proficient boxer.

Mr. Russell became associated with motion pictures four years ago, attracted by its growth and future, and the many possibilities for out-of-door exercise and acting.

He began with the Biograph Company, then jointed the Thanhouser, remaining there for three years, starring in many films. Subsequently he joined forces with Klaw and Erlanger feature productions, and from there he went to the Famous Players as leading man.

Noted recent releases of his include Jane Cowl in "The Garden of Lies," Florence Reed in "Dancing Girl," and "The Straight Road."

Mr. Russell left the Famous Players company early in 1915 to accept an offer made by S. S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film Manufacturing Company to appear in the heavy part of "The Diamond from the Sky" serial of sixty reels, in which subject there are two male leads. Throughout this long serial he distinguished himself as one of the foremost actors of the films.

Since the finishing of the serial, it has been decided by officers of the American company to star Mr. Russell in Mutual Masterpictures, to be made under the direction of the leading director of the studio.

Mr. Russell is 6 feet 2 inches in height, weighs 203 pounds, has dark brown hair and eyes. His daily exercise consists of bag punching, horseback riding and swimming.

CHARLES EARL BARTLETT, DIRECTOR, AMERICAN

CHARLES EARL BARTLETT, director for the American Company, was born at Minneapolis, Minn., in 1888, and after receiving an education in the public and high schools of Denver, and the Denver University, chose the stage as a profession and has followed it continuously.

His first experience was in stock at the Burbank at Los Angeles, where he remained until 1906. Later he was with the Belasco stock company in the same city for ninety-seven weeks, where he played juvenile leads. With Dick Ferris and Florence Stone he played in stock at the Auditorium at Los Angeles. For three months Mr. Bartlett was a member of a stock company in Denver, and then tried musical comedy. In Chicago he played the title role of the Jew in "The Trust Buster," a Kilroy & Britton attraction. He was starred at Kansas City for a time, and with the Woodward company stock at Denver, and then leading man for one season at the Curtis. Another stock engagement was that of leading man for one season at the Garrick theatre at Salt Lake with James Durkin, William Bernard and other well-known players. At San Diego he was with Land Stephens and George E. Cooper.

Mr. Bartlett's first appearance on the screen was in 1911 in a Universal production, having been the first leading man engaged by this company after its organization. For three years he was featured leading man with the 101 Bison company, and was featured in such subjects as "Kit Carson," "Four-Footed Hero," "The Massacre of the Santa Fe Trail" and "The Fighting Chaplain," all of which he wrote. For one year he was with the Kalem Company at the Glendale studio as leading man, and has since produced for Gaumont, Pathé, Universal, and was with the Sawyer company in New York, where he made five-reel features including "The Smiling Sheriff," "Love's Cross Roads," "The Blue Streak," "The Plaid Coat," "The Buzzard" and many other one and two-reel subjects, including several comedies which were favorably received.

Mr. Bartlett's connection with the American Company began about nine months ago, and he has written and produced a number of subjects for them, including "Out of the Ashes," "Alice of Hudson Bay," "The Silent Trail," "The Water Carrier of San Juan" and many similar productions.

Mr. Bartlett is 6 feet in height, weighs 180 pounds, has light hair and blue eyes, and is a very successful athlete, having played football at college and since taken considerable training. He is good in wrestling, swimming, rowing and all kinds of stunts necessary for pictures.

ARTHUR MAUDE AND CONSTANCE CRAWLEY, AMERICAN

ARTHUR MAUDE, now directing and playing his own leads for the American company at Santa Barbara, is an Englishman, born at Pontefrac, England, 1881. He attended the King Edward School, and was in the banking business for three years in England before his appearance on the stage in 1902, when he was with Irving at the Lyceum, London.

For two years he was with the Ben Greet Players in England, had one season in comedy stock at the Haymarket, and three years with Martin Harveywall.

Coming to America, he played leads and managed the Constance Crawley company, playing Shakespearian repertoire. At the Greek theatre at Berkeley this company established a new record, when more than ten thousand people witnessed one performance.

Mr. Maude accepted an engagement with the Universal in 1913, and with Miss Crawley played Maeterlinck's "Pelleas and Melisande," which was said to be the first classic produced in this country. Following this he played twenty weeks with the P. A. Powers company, which released as Warner's features.

A number of productions during this engagement were also written by Mr. Maude. Following this, eight five-reel subjects were made and released as Kennedy's features. For eight months following this engagement Mr. Maude was with the N Y M P corporation, appearing in a number of the Ince features.

Mr. Maude produced the five-reel feature, "The Blood of Our Brothers," for the Bostock Jungle and Film Company, which will be released on the Mutual program. His engagement with the American company began several months ago, and he is now engaged in the making of feature subjects.

CONSTANCE CRAWLEY

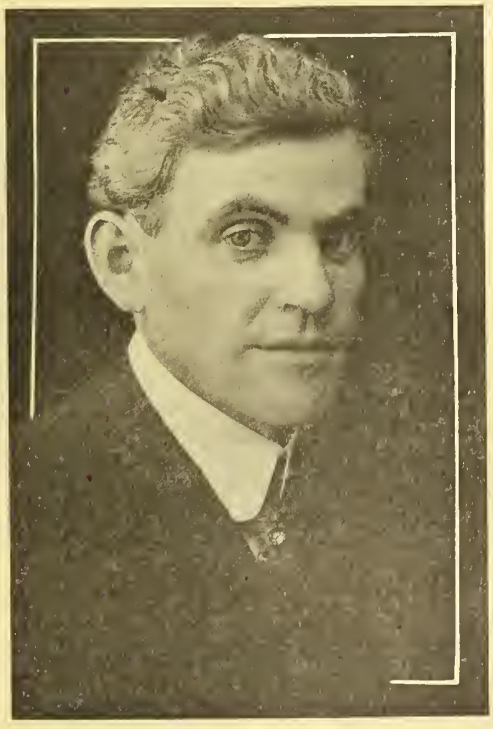
ARTHUR MAUDE

CONSTANCE CRAWLEY, appearing in featured leads for the American Company's productions, was born in London, England, in 1884. She traces her ancestry on her father's side to Sir Walter Raleigh, and on the side of her mother, who was of Polish descent, to the kings and queens of Poland. Miss Crawley is a cousin of Lord Kitchener.

Following her education in London, she traveled extensively on the continent and Africa, and then came to America. Her first stage experience was with Sir Herbert Tree, then she went West with the "Everyman" company under Frohman.

This engagement completed, her own company was organized and Shakespearian repertoire was played. It was at this time that Arthur Maude became manager of the company, and these well-known players have appeared together since that time.

P. G. LYNCH, STUDIO MANAGER, AMERICAN



P. G. LYNCH, studio manager for the American Film Manufacturing Company, Inc., at Santa Barbara, has been engaged in the motion picture industry since 1909, following a business career. He was born in Nevada in 1879, and his first connection with the film industry was the engagement with the Theatre Film Service Company of San Francisco, a branch of the Theatre Film Service Company, of Chicago, where he took charge of the booking department in 1909.

In July of the same year he was appointed manager. One year later Mr. Lynch became identified with the Novelty Motion Picture Company, which later was absorbed by the General Film Company.

Mr. Lynch remained with them until 1913, when he opened an exchange at San Francisco for the Mutual Film Corporation. Three months later he became manager for the American company at the Santa Barbara studios, and has continued in that capacity to this time.

MR. LYNCH has been an important factor in the upbuilding of this organization.

When he became manager it consisted of but one or two companies with a very inadequate studio, and few, if any, facilities for the making of motion pictures.

In the two years he has been there he has seen the present plant built, and the producing staff increased to ten companies with a payroll containing three hundred people.

Mr. Lynch is decidedly popular with all of the American people, and his able management is frequently the subject of favorable comment.

WILLIAM BERTRAM, DIRECTOR, AMERICAN

WILLIAM BERTRAM, producer and director of the American "Buck Parvin" series adapted from the Charles Van Loan stories, is an all-around showman, having taken part in all branches of the business from "prop" boy to owner and manager of a theatre. He was born at Ontario, Canada, in 1880, and after a public school education became a member of a stock company at the Auditorium theatre, Spokane.

For a time he was with Harry Bishop's Liberty and Majestic stock companies in San Francisco and Oakland, and played with Melbourne McDowell and Mrs. Leslie Carter. He sang basso parts for comic opera road companies, and in 1914 was actor and director of his own company.

Mr. Bertram did his first motion picture work for Pathé Western in Indian parts during the year of 1912. In 1913 he appeared in Imp subjects, and later in Bison. He distinguished himself as a portrayer of Indian characters and became known as one of the greatest Indian actors in pictures.

In 1913 he went with the American. Later he became assistant to Director Thomas Ricketts, was transferred to the Henry Otto company, and during the present year has directed.

He first made a three reel subject, and then took up the making of the "Buck Parvin" series. Among the subjects he has filmed are "The Obligation," in two reels; "The Idol," "The High Cost of Flirting," "Man Afraid of His Wardrobe," and others.

Mr. Bertram gives his work close attention, and his success is due to his persistency.

NEVA GERBER, LEADS, AMERICAN

NEVA GERBER, leading woman with the No. 1 "Beauty" company at the American Film studio, is a Chicago girl, who entered pictures without previous legitimate stage experience, and from the very first made good. She was born in 1895, and did her first work in motion pictures in 1912 at the Kalem Glendale studio under the direction of George Melford, appearing in leading parts. Later she was at the Kalem Hollywood studio where she played with Carlyle Blackwell in "The Detective's Sister," in which she appeared in the name part. For a time Miss Gerber was with the Edwin August company, and then played at the Balboa studio for eight months. Two of the best known subjects are "The House Divided" and "Tricks of Fate." Miss Gerber played lead opposite Carlyle Blackwell in the Favorite Players production, "The High Hand."

Early in 1915 she went with the American company where she at once became leading woman for the No. 1 "Beauty" Brand organization, and has since appeared in "Little Chrysanthemum," "Every Heart," "Redemption of the Jasons," "Nobody Home," "Mother's Busy Day," "One to a Minute," "Touring with Tilly," "Anita's Butterfly," "Captured by the Enemy," and others.

Miss Gerber is five feet two inches in height, weighs one hundred and twelve pounds, has light brown hair and brown eyes. She received her education at the Immaculate Heart College, and is an accomplished pianist, and since taking up pictures has become proficient in swimming, riding and other athletics required in pictures.

E. FORREST TAYLOR, LEADS, AMERICAN

E. FORREST TAYLOR, leading man with the American Film Company at Santa Barbara, Cal., was born in Bloomington, Ill., in 1888.

After receiving a good education in the public and high schools he chose the stage for his work, and his record shows a marked success. His first work on the legitimate stage was in stock at Salt Lake.

Mr. Taylor's popularity kept him there for four seasons, when he decided to enter the field with his own company. With his own organization he played repertoire with Clara Kimball Young as his leading woman.

Following this Mr. Taylor had a two years' engagement with Willard Mack playing in Chicago, Duluth, Winnipeg and Salt Lake, one season with Catherine Countis and Brandon Tynan, and a special engagement in which he was featured in "The Deep Purple" on the road in 1913 and 1914.

Since entering pictures with the American Film in 1915, Mr. Taylor has done over twenty-eight thousand feet of film, which is a remarkable record for four months.

Some of his best pictures were "The Man Afraid of His Wardrobe," in which he played the title role for the first of the Van Loan series; "Two Spot Joe," the first of the Mustang series, and "The Idol," both title roles. The last to be completed was "There Is Good in the Worst of Us." Mr. Taylor is six feet in height, weighs one hundred and sixty pounds, has dark brown hair and blue eyes.

FRANK COOLEY, DIRECTOR, AMERICAN

FRANK COOLEY, directing the Mustang Brand for the American Film, has spent the greater portion of his life in theatrical work. From Natchez, Miss., where he was born in 1872, he moved to California and received his education in the public and high schools of Oakland, and later in the University at Berkeley.

When Theodore Roberts and George Beban were playing in stock at the Grand Opera House in San Francisco in 1888, Mr. Cooley decided to cast his lot with them, and has been in theatrical work and pictures ever since, always with the directing end in view.

Alice Kingsbury, Mr. Cooley's mother, was a great influence in his stage career. She had played star parts opposite John McCullough, Tom Keenan and others. When she first went to San Francisco to open an engagement following Edwin Forrest, she was requested to make a three months' engagement after her three weeks' repertoire, supported by Kate Dennan, William Barry and Harry Edwards. Mr. Cooley is more than ready to give his mother credit for her inspiration as a vital factor in his success.

In 1911 he entered pictures with the Universal and later went to Keystone. Mr. Cooley got his chance to direct at the American company with the Beauty Brand, and after directing at Balboa for a short time, returned to direct the Mustang Brand.

Some of his pictures are "Life's Staircase," "Redemption of the Jasons," "There Is Good in the Worst of Us." "Broadcloth and Buckskin," "The Warning," and "The Trail of the Serpent."

ROY STEWART, HEAVIES, AMERICAN

ROY STEWART, with the No. 1 American company at the Santa Barbara studios, was born at San Diego, Cal., in 1884, and educated at the California University, Berkeley. After graduation Mr. Stewart joined a traveling stock company playing West coast cities, and later played at San Francisco, San Diego and Sacramento. For one season he was witb the road company producing "Floradora."

His first motion picture experience was with the American company at National City, Cal. Later he was with the Majestic company at Los Angeles, and played in all productions of the Masterpiece Film Company. his principal part being that of Bud Means in "The Hoosier School Master," supporting Max Figman. Mr. Stewart played leads for the Rolin company, releasing through the Universal, and in "The Diamond from the Sky" he was specially engaged to play the part of Blake, which he did through the entire sixty reels. One of the big punches of this series was the fight scene staged by Mr. Stewart and William Russell. He is now playing in principal subjects made at this studio. For several seasons he held the single scull championship of the West coast, is an amateur boxer of ability, and rides and swims, and performs other athletic acts for the camera. At the studio Mr. Stewart is a favorite, and to see him in bis every moment laughing jolly good fellow manner, one would never suspect he is the cruel hero that he appears to be on the screen.

In real life, as in "reel life," he is adequate to his part.

DIXIE STUART, LEADS, AMERICAN

DIXIE STUART, playing leads, characters and heavies for the American comoany at Santa Barbara, was born at Philadelphia in 1894, and attended Smitb College at Northampton, Mass.

Her first legitimate stage engagement was with Billie Single Clifford in "How a Woman Loves," "How He Loved Her" and others. For two seasons she was with Elfie Fay in "The Belle of Avenue A." This was followed by several seasons in musical comedy, and for some time she was understudy for Rose Melville.

Two years and a half ago Miss Stuart did her first picture work for Essanay. Later she played leads in Robbins Brand, Patbé comedy and dramatic subjects, and for several months was with the Albuquerque company. At the American she has been appearing in Amusu comedies, and played leads in the "I Am a Nut" series, featuring Orral Humphreys.

Miss Stuart is five feet four inches in height, weighs one hundred and twenty-four pounds, is light complexioned, has light hair and blue eyes. She lays claim to doing all kinds of athletic stunts for pictures, including the driving of a Ford.

Among the galaxy of beauties which the charming studios of the American Film Manufacturing Company at Santa Barbara boast, Miss Stuart is one of tbe most winsome, and certainly among the most popular.

Her personal popularity among the members of the American companies is equal to her professional ability.

ARCHER McMACKIN, DIRECTOR, AMERICAN

ARCHER McMACKIN, director of the No. 1 "Beauty" Brand American Company, has to his credit the authorship and production of more than three hundred photoplays, about two hundred of which were written and directed for the Essanay company, and others for Albuquerque, Universal and American.

To Mr. McMackin is also due the credit for the coining of the word "photoplay," now universally used. He was born in Lake City, Iowa, and began his career as a newspaper writer at Chicago.

In 1909 he became affiliated with the Essanay company, where for two years he served as editor-in-chief, and for two years and a half was comic and dramatic director, directing the productions in which Francis X. Bushman, Beverly Bayne and other well known film celebrities appeared.

This was followed by an engagement of nine months with the Albuquerque Company, another with the Keystone, and for a time he was witb the Universal, directing the productions of Joker comedies.

In March, 1914, he was engaged by the American company, and for several months directed the Vivian Rich Beauty Brand.

Since becoming affiliated with the American he bas produced thirty-one subjects, and will soon take up the making of a series featuring John Steppling as Billie Van Deusen, the wealthy bachelor who breaks into society. In his work at the American, Mr. McMackin is ably assisted by Wallace Macdonald and Carl Widen.

JAMES STUART DOUGLASS, DIRECTOR, AMERICAN

JAMES STUART DOUGLASS, director, American company, was born at Point Pleasant, La., in 1890, and has had a wide experience on the legtitimate stage and in pictures.

For three years Mr. Douglass was in Central and Southern America. At fifteen he was a railroad conductor on a Central American railroad.

His first experience on the stage was at the age of seven, when he appeared in stock in Los Angeles. From this he went into vaudeville, where he originated several acts and took part in dramatic playlets.

In 1912 Mr. Douglass became affiliated with the Universal as scenario writer. Some of his early productions were "Mother." taken from the song, "Where Is My Wandering Boy Tonight?" For a time he was assistant to Director Harry Pollard and continued with him until March of this year, going with Mr. Pollard to the American company from the Universal when the original American "Beauty" company was first formed.

Since becoming a director Mr. Douglass has written practically all of his own photoplays in addition to directing their production. Included in his successes are "Alias James Chauffeur," "Mammie Rose," "A Friend in Need," and others. Mr. Douglass attributes much of his success to the schooling under Mr. Pollard, who he thinks is one of the greatest directors.

He holds Margarita Fischer, who was for several years leading woman of the Pollard American company, in very high esteem, and considers "The Miracle of Life," in which she was starred, the greatest four reel subject ever produced.

VIVIAN RICH, LEADS, AMERICAN

VIVIAN RICH, with her dark brown dreamy eyes, her black hair and her general air of refinement, and with her slim girlish figure, is well known to every man, woman or child who visits the picture theatres. She probably receives as many "homey, familiar" letters as anyone in the profession, for her admirers seem to possess a real affection for this clever little actress.

Southern? Of course, but she was educated in Boston and was a bright pupil, too. She went on the stage early, making her professional debut on Broadway in "The Country Girl." Then came the necessary and inevitable stock experience, when, after one or two special engagements, Miss Rich fell to the lure of the pictures, and was for some time with the original Nestor company at Hollywood, where she "caught on" immediately.

The American company, always on the lookout for the right people and with an almost uncanny way of getting them, gathered Vivian Rich in, and for three years now she has been featured in a number of the best films turned out at that home of the beautiful.

It is not easy to define her best channel of work. She is delightful in light comedy, and makes a strong impression in dramatic, and especially somewhat weird roles, and everyone likes to see her in an occasional Western story. She takes many risks, dresses daintily, and with a strong personality she keeps a tight hold on the love of her audiences who never tire of seeing the versatile little actress in any or all of the numerous roles in her repertoire.

ART ACORD, LEADS, AMERICAN

ART ACORD, star in the "Buck Parvin" series being produced at the American studio and released on the Mutual program, is a native of the West, born at Stillwater, Okla., 1890. After attending public schools, Mr. Acord became a cowboy, and later a ranchman.

In 1910 he did his first professional work with the Dick Stanley Wild West Show, and in 1911 was with Buffalo Bill. He rode second to the world's champion at the Pendelton, Oregon, Cheyenne and Salt Lake roundups. in 1912 he won the championship at Klamoth Falls in broncho riding, and several other contests. In 1914 he managed two shows, one at Nelson, B. C., and one at Klamoth Falls.

Mr. Acord did his first motion picture work in 1911 when he was with the Bison company under the direction of Thomas H. Ince. Later he was with the Selig, and Universal, and played in the feature made at Bakersfield entitled "The Heart of California." For the Bosworth company he played the juvenile lead, supporting Fritzi Scheff in "Pretty Mrs. Smith," and in support of Elsie Janis in "Nearly a Lady."

Early in 1911 Mr. Acord met Charles Van Loan, author of the "Buck Parvin" stories. The author and cowboy became close friends, and when the series was contemplated by the American company Mr. Acord was at once selected to play the name part of Parvin.

Mr. Acord does not pretend to be an actor. He says he is a cowboy.

Who should know more about it than he?

CAROL HALLOWAY, LEADS, AMERICAN

THE "Beauty" company, No. 2, of the American Film Manufacturing Company, has a valuable asset in Carol Halloway. Her unusual combination of brown hair and blue eyes, pleasing manner and versatile acting have proved her success on the screen.

Miss Halloway is one of the few who made an immediate success upon entering pictures. Without any "legitimate" stage experience she took up picture work with the Lubin company at Philadelphia, where she played lead in "The Living Fear." At Lasky's studio she played opposite Wallace Eddinger in "A Gentleman of Leisure" and other plays.

Then she left to play the lead with Harold Lockwood in "The Secretary of Frivolous Affairs" and "The Lure of the Mask" at the American. After playing "Waifs" with William Desmond at the New York Motion Picture Corporation and a number of smaller productions, she returned to the American to play leads for the "Beauty" company, No. 2.

Miss Halloway has been kept busy by two directors and has the record of two pictures a week to her credit during the last three months.

Among the best are "The Drummer's Trunk," "Pretences," "To Him Who Waits," "All Is Fair," and she has been featured in the "Billy Van Dusen" series.

All in all, Miss Halloway is a valuable and beloved member of the American Film Manufacturing Company's "Beauty" No. 2 company, which boasts not a little first-class comedy talent.

JOHN STEPPLING, COMEDY LEADS, AMERICAN

THE leading comedian of the American Film Company, John Steppling, was born in Germany. From 1869 to the close of his college career, he spent in Germany, having attended Heidelberg.

The first important engagement in Mr. Steppling's stage career was with Daniel Frohman in stock at the Lyceum theatre in New York City. This led to an engagement with E. H. Sothern in the original "Prisoner of Zenda" production in New York and on tour.

Mr. Steppling's success with Louis James in Shakespearian roles, and leads with Olga Nethersole and a number of K. and E. productions, proves him a very versatile actor. He has played some of the best productions of the legitimate stage both in stock and on tour. Judge Knox in the "Charity Ball" is a part remembered by old time theatre goers. After a season of stock at the New Theatre in New York Mr. Steppling turned to pictures. His success was immediate and has been sustained.

The first picture engagement was with Essanay in 1911, and soon he left for a special engagement with the Famous Players company in New York, playing with Mary Pickford in "The Bishop's Carriage," and "Tess of the D'Urbevilles," Then followed an engagement at the Universal with Al. Christie where Mr. Steppling did some real comedy parts, the best of which was "Ursus Threw the Bull."

At the American he has been under the direction of Archer McMackin, who wrote the part of "Billy Van Dusen" for Mr. Steppling."

J. FARRELL MACDONALD, DIRECTOR, BIOGRAPH

J. FARRELL MACDONALD, Biograph director with a long list of successes to his credit for this brand, together with many released on the Universal and other well-known programs, has had a varied experience which adds much to his store of knowledge beneficial to him in his work in filmdom.

Mr. Macdonald was born at Waterbury, Conn., April 14, 1875, and received his public school education at Toronto, Canada, graduating from the high schools. He then attended Yale University, and following his college career became a civil engineer in the employ of the government.

For two years he remained at this work, making geological surveys. For some time he served as mining engineer, and then took up newspaper work, and was employed on metropolitan dailies in a number of different cities.

Mr. Macdonald's first theatrical experience was with Willis P. Sweatman. He played with the Comstock minstrels; for a number of years he appeared in light opera in all parts of the United States and Europe. While in this work he devoted a portion of his time to the composition of music.

The first picture experience of Mr. Macdonald was under the direction of G. M. Anderson, who at that time was with the Selig Polyscope Company. Following this he was with Biograph for a short time in New York, after which he returned to the legitimate stage.

His next work in pictures was for the Imp company, when he directed as well as played his own leads. For a time he was employed by Pathé Freres as director, and then went to the Universal as producer.

When the Oz company was organized, Mr. Macdonald was employed as director and was in charge of the making of all Oz subjects with the exception of several one-reel comedies. Following this came an engagement with the Tiffany company in which he played the part of Colonel Thorpe with Mrs. Leslie Carter in "The Heart of Maryland." In "Rags" Mr. Macdonald appeared in the part of Ferguson opposite Mary Pickford.

His present engagement with Biograph began in January, 1915, and since that time he has made twenty-one features, the most prominent ones being "Lorna Doone," "Black Sheep," "Captain Fracasse," "Felix Holt, Radical," "The Laurel of Tears," "A Woman Without a Soul," "The Step-mother," "Stronger Than a Woman's Will," "Tides of Retribution" and "Reapers of the Whirlwind." Mr. Macdonald has never regretted the attention that he gave to athletics. He had the distinction of being named as one of the principal members of the Yale eleven. He is more than 6 feet in height and tips the scales near 200.

FRANKLIN RITCHIE, LEADS, BIOGRAPH

FRANKLIN RITCHIE, leading man for the Biograph company, was born in Ritchie, Pa., and educated in New York. Immediately following his school days he took up the theatrical profession and for a number of years was on the legitimate stage, playing under the management of Frohman four years, Belasco two years, and other producers of note.

Among Mr. Ritchie's best known productions on the stage was that of "The Clansman," in the original production of which he played the part of Ben Cameron. He was leading support for Olga Nethersole in "Carmen," and leading man for Rose Coghlan and Wilton Lackaye.

Mr. Ritchie's motion picture experience began in 1913 when he became affiliated with the Biograph producing staff. He first appeared in a number of K. and E. productions which included "Man's Enemy," "Charity Ball," "Pique," "Wages of Sin," and others, all of which were of four reels each. Since these Mr. Ritchie has been playing featured parts in the best subjects issued by this company.

Mr. Ritchie has light brown eyes and black hair, is fair complexioned, lacks but half an inch of being six feet in height, and weighs one hundred and eighty-five pounds.

Mr. Ritchie's work has a directness of appeal, and a clear incision in the expression of character which makes it stand out, even among that of the members of the eminent casts with which he has been identified in the Biograph studios. He has won many friends among screen "fans" and has been commended by the critics and reviewers for his handling of difficult roles in screen dramas.

VERA SISSON, LEADS, BIOGRAPH

VERA SISSON, leading woman with the Biograph company, appearing in two and three reel subjects, was born in Salt Lake City, Utah, in 1895, and received her education in Denver, Colorado.

Without previous theatrical experience, Miss Sisson was given parts at the Universal West Coast studios, and soon became leading woman, playing opposite J. Warren Kerrigan.

She remained with the company for eighteen months, and during that time the principal photoplays in which she appeared were "The Bolted Door," "Little Meg and I," "Weights and Measures," "The Man from Nowhere," and the first six episodes of the "Terrence O'Rourke" series. In all of these Miss Sisson played opposite Mr. Kerrigan.

In June, 1915, Miss Sisson became affiliated with the Biograph Company, and when the producing staff went East she accompanied them, remaining until they returned to the West Coast. Since accepting this engagement she has played in "The Laurel of Tears," a three-reel feature, "The Trail of the Serpent," two reels, and a number of others.

Miss Sisson is but five feet three inches in height, weighs one hundred and nineteen pounds, has light brown hair and eyes, and a very fair complexion.

One of the notable pictures that Miss Sisson appeared in while with the Universal was "The Man from Nowhere." A two reel subject, it held the screen throughout its length without the assistance of a subtitle

J. RAYMOND NYE, LEADS, BIOGRAPH

J. RAYMOND NYE, playing heavy leads for Biograpb, is from Tamaqua, Pa., and was born in 1889. His early training was received in the public and high schools at Wilmington, and at tbe Mercer Military Academy, Mercerville, Pa.

His legitimate stage experience covers a period of about eight years in stock and on the road. His road engagements were principally with tbe Shubert attractions, Klaw and Erlanger, and otbers of note. To this may be added an extensive vaudeville experience. His last stage production before entering pictures was "Tbe Traffic" in which Mr. Nye played the leading part.

In 1912 he became affiliated with tbe old Powers company, playing opposite Arthur Maude and Constance Crawley. After this engagement he went to the Universal, where he played heavy leads with J. Warren Kerrigan. Mr. Nye is now associated with Biograpb, playing beavy leads. His first picture for Biograph was "Lorna Doone," and next the title role in "Felix Holt."

These were followed by "Wives of Men," "The Smuggler's Daughter," "Captain Fracasse," "The Laurel of Tears," "His Wife's Story," "The Chief Inspector," "An Eye for an Eye," and many others of one reel, which are considered good.

He possesses an excellent physique, which stands him well in hand in portraying the heavy parts. His athletic ability enables him to perform any daring or heroic feats which the role may require.

BURTON KING, DIRECTOR, EQUITABLE FILM CORPORATION

BURTON KING, lately manager of production for the K & D Film Company, has been in the show business since he was fifteen years of age, at which time he did an end in a minstrel. Mr. King was born at Cincinnati in 1877. After a short engagement as a minstrel end, and with J. K. Emmett in stock, he returned to the Wells Fargo Express Company, but he liked stage work and tried it again.

He was starred for two seasons in the road company presenting "Strongheart," was with tbe "Graustark" road company, and leading man in "Shot Gun Opera." He played in stock in many of the principal cities, and did his first work in pictures as an actor, and later as director, for the Solax company. After an association with the Lubin company as actor, he became director for the NYMP Corporation under Thomas H. Ince, where for one year he made two and three reel subjects. He was director at the Vitagraph Santa Monica studio, and then became director of the brand Usona. While directing the Usona brand he filmed fifty-nine thousand feet of finished negative in nine months.

Early in 1914 he went with the Universal, where he filmed "Under the Crescent" series, and a number of two and three reel subjects featuring Adele Lane. Recently he left the Universal to film "The Chronicles of Bloom Center" series for the Selig company, and then went with the K & D Film Company, whicb is making big features. Later he left them to join the Famous Players organization in the East, and from there was engaged as director by Equitable.

JULIAN L. LAMOTHE, SCENARIO EDITOR, LUBIN WESTERN

THAT the photoplay industry offers excellent opportunities to young men of talent and originality is emphasized in the career of Julian Louis Lamothe, scenario editor of the Western Lubin Company with studios at Coronado Beach near San Diego, California.

Mr. Lamothe took up scenario writing first while attending Tulane University at New Orleans, thinking probably that he could pay his expenses at college by such work.

From the first he was successful, and during the remainder of the time he was in college he sold many scripts to the leading manufacturers of the country.

He then went to Los Angeles believing that to be the hub of the industry and had no difficulty in securing a position as writer and editor for the Lubin Company, where he has been for the past year.

During the time he has been with the company he has written a number of one, two and three-reel subjects, in fact, he supplied the Lubin studio with all scripts. Some of his best known plays are: "The Red Virgin," "As the Twig Is Bent," "By the Flip of a Coin," "The Taunt," "The Legend of the Poisoned Pool," and "A Night in Old Spain."

Mr. Lamothe courts the intimate acquaintance of all members of the producing staff, believing this aids him in writing parts which they can best interpret for the screen. He is versed in foreign as well as English literature. Mr. Lamothe is a member of a French-American family, born at New Orleans, in 1893.

HELEN GIBSON, LEADS, KALEM GLENDALE STUDIOS

SO far no hazard has been so hazardous that Helen Gibson, the Helen of the Kalem "Hazards of Helen" series, would not attempt, and thus she has become known as the "nerviest girl of motion pictures."

Miss Gibson was born at Cleveland in 1893, and after graduating at the public schools went west with her parents. She learned to ride in a regular western frontier town, and in 1910 won the women's relay race, and the trick riding contest conducted at Miller Brothers 101 Ranch.

Motion picture producers learned of her ability, and she was engaged to play in Bison subjects, where she remained for one year, playing the part of Indian leads in Western subjects. During 1913 she spent most of the time attending round-ups, where at each she entered the contests.

During the season she was successful in winning a number of cbampionships for trick riding, the standing Roman and relay races. Included in the big round-ups she attended were those at Salt Lake City, Pendelton, Oregon, and Boise, Idaho.

Early in 1914 she was engaged by the Kalem company, and is now playing the featured leading part in the "Hazards of Helen" series. Besides being a decided Western girl in out-of-door sports, Miss Gibson is also an accomplished musician in playing as well as singing. In recent episodes of the "Helen" series, she has taken numerous chances, and accomplished tbe making of scenes which had been referred to as impossible.

THE KALEM "HAM" COMEDY COMPANY

ONE of the most interesting companies of players making comedies is that of the Kalem Company, located at a studio in Hollywood, and composed of Lloyd Vernon Hamilton, the "Ham"; Albert E. Duncan, the "Bud" of the Ham comedies, with Ethel Teare as their leading woman, and working under the direction of William Beaudine. M. E. M. Gibsone is business manager of the studio and writes many of the scenarios, besides looking after publicity for this studio and the Glendale Kalem studio.

LLOYD VERNON HAMILTON, the "Ham" of the Ham comedies, is the originator of this series now consisting of more than seventy-five, and is the featured comedian. Mr. Hamilton was born at Oakland, Cal., and is twenty-four. He was educated in Oakland public and high schools, and at fifteen became advance agent for the Frank Cooley shows.

When he was six he stole sheets from the house to make a circus tent in the back yard. His second season was with Elleford stock company touring the Coast, and then he became juvenile lead for James K. Hackett, and for two seasons played in support of this actor in "The Prisoner of Zenda" and "Monsieur Beaucaire." The following years he was in stock, musical comedy and burlesque.

About eighteen months ago he affiliated with the Kalem company as featured comedian, and has been there ever since. In July of last year he met with an accident when his number nineteen shoes—worn only in comedies—caught in the sands when he was making a run down a mountain side, and was laid up.

His hobby is hunting, and he has a very fine collection of guns. He is an excellent swimmer and has several medals for diving. He stands six feet one inch, and weighs two hundred and five pounds.

ALBERT EDWARD DUNCAN, the miniature comedian "Bud" of Kalem Ham comedies, was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., Hallowe'en, 1886.

His career as a professional entertainer began soon after he completed a course at Berkeley Military School at New York, for it was then he became assistant treasurer of the Grand Opera House.

When a juvenile actor was needed in the production of "The Postmaster's Daughter," with Laura Dean, this miniature made his first stage appearance. He secured the name "Bud" in the part of Bud McGinnis in "Playing the Ponies."

One of his best parts was in "A Night in a Music Hall," which he played on U. B. O. time. He was with Kolb and Dill following this.

He played in "Summer Widowers" at the Broadway theatre, and then went into vaudeville with Clarence Kolb in "The Delicatessen Shop," Orpheum time.

This took him to the Coast where he and Lee Moran organized a troupe in which they were the sole players, and together they did vaudeville for two years. Then "Bud" became little Jeff, of Mutt and Jeff, the comedies made by Al E. Christie.

Following this, his first picture engagement, he returned to the legitimate stage, playing in comic opera stock and the All Star musical comedy Review.

Then he tried pictures again only to return to a stock engagement at the Oliver Morosco Burbank theatre in Los Angeles. For a time he played in the Fred Mace Majestic Apollo brand, and then toured the Western Mexican coast in a forty-foot boat.

Upon his return from this trip early in 1914, he joined the Kalem company, and with Lloyd Hamilton has since been appearing in Ham comedies.

ETHEL TEARE, leading woman of the Kalem Ham, is a very pleasing comedienne. Miss Teare is a native of Arizona where she drank of the famous waters of the Hassayampa River, which is said to so affect every one who drinks of it that they are thereafter unable to speak the truth.

She was born at Phoenix, and there received a high school education with special training in music.

She became a vaudeville stage singer and played the best circuits of the West Coast. It was following the second tour over the principal vaudeville circuit that she accepted an engagement with the Kalem company.

Miss Teare is equal to all occasions required by the scenarios for the Ham comedies, appearing in ingenue as well as elderly character parts.

She enjoys the work in comedies despite the many hazards and extreme fast action required at times, but of all prefers the sweetheart parts.

WILLIAM BEAUDINE, well known in both New York and Los Angeles film colonies as the result of his several years' connection with the Biograph company, is director of Ham comedies.

Mr. Beaudine, although a young man, has had five years' experience in the making of pictures. For more than three years he served as assistant to Del Henderson, who directed the making of Biograph comedies, and while in this work played important parts.

He left the Biograph company a year and a half ago, and became assistant director at the Kalem Ham studio, and recently became director.

JAMES W. HORNE, MANAGING DIRECTOR, KALEM GLENDALE STUDIOS

JAMES W. HORNE, managing director of the Kalem Glendale studio, like a very large percentage of photoplay people, is a convert from the legitimate stage, having been actor, producer and manager for a number of years.

Mr. Horne is a native of California, born in San Francisco, where he began his theatrical career at the age of thirteen, playing the Balesco and Mayer stock at the Alcazar, and later was in stock at the Central and Alhambra, in San Francisco.

From there he went to the Columbus theatre in Chicago where he was stage manager, and then on to New York where he was treasurer of the Herald Square theatre.

His last stage work was in the part of Bragdon with the original Cohan and Harris "Brewster's Millions." With the close of this engagement began Mr. Horne's photoplay career.

Going to Los Angeles three years ago, he secured a position as scenario editor when George Melford was Kalem studio manager, and when Mr. Melford resigned he became the manager.

He produced "The Girl Detective" stories, each of two reels, and has just finished "The Mysteries of the Grand Hotel" series, consisting of twelve separate releases, each of two reels. Another of his pictures is "The Barnstormers," a four reel theatrical story, and he has just prepared scenarios for the "Stingaree" series adapted from the stories by Hornung, author of "Raffles."

Following this Mr. Horne is slated to make several Broadway star attractions.

MARIN SAIS, LEADS, KALEM

MARIN SAIS, leading woman, Kalem Feature Company, Glendale studio, has had a remarkable picture career; from an extra girl has climbed to success, and is now featured in productions from this studio. She was born in California; educated at Notre Dame Academy at San Jose. Later she studied music in San Francisco, and became very successful as a singer. For a time she played in stock at the Bay Cities, and then toured the Keith and Proctor circuit in "The Rose of Killarney," a musical sketch. Following an illness and the loss of her voice she turned to pictures, and her first engagement was with the Vitagraph six years ago in "Twelfth Night." Later she became a member of the Bison company, appearing in dramas for six months. Following this she joined the original Kalem company's Santa Monica studio under the direction of P. C. Artigan. She remained there for two years and was then transferred to the Glendale studio under the direction of George Melford. Miss Sais gave very notable performances in "The Last Black House," "The Potter and the Clay"—in which she played parts ranging from a girl to a woman of forty-five—"The Bond Eternal"—and in the Indian Western, "The Death Sign at High Noon."

Miss Sais has been featured in "The Girl Detective" series of two-reel subjects, and the twelve two-reel episodes entitled "The Mysteries of the Grand Hotel." She has just been featured as an English girl in "The Stingaree" series of twenty-four reels. This actress has successfully played every role for which she has been cast. She is now appearing in "Love Pirates."

OLLIE KIRKBY, JUVENILE LEADS, KALEM

OLLIE KIRKBY, of the Kalem Glendale studio stock company, has been most successful in her motion picture career, which began about three years ago.

Miss Kirkby is a Philadelphia girl, where she attended school and later enrolled at Bryn Mawr.

Going to Los Angeles, Miss Kirkby took special training for vaudeville, and after a short tour was selected by the managing director of the Kalem studio at Glendale, where she now plays important parts, the most recent being that in which she shared honors in the lead. Her engagement with the Kalem company was followed by one with the Usona company. Later Miss Kirkby was with the Favorite Players Company and appeared in the three numbers made by Carlyle Blackwell in which he was featured.

When Managing Director James Horne took up the filming of the twelve part series of two reels each, "The Mysteries of the Grand Hotel," Miss Kirkby was engaged and played throughout the twelve numbers. A recent part was that of juvenile lead in "The Mansion of Despair," a four part Broadway feature. This photoplayer, like most women of the profession, dislikes the heavy parts and prefers to appear in heart interest drama or character parts.

Miss Kirkby while in school cultivated a taste for designing. The secret of her elaborate wardrobe is that she now personally designs all her frocks and hats. Miss Kirkby is a good rider, has taken part in a number of water scenes, and photographs extremely well. She is now appearing in "Love Pirates."

FRANK JONASSON, CHARACTERS, KALEM

FRANK JONASSON, playing characters for the Kalem company at the Glendale studio, was born at Salt Lake City, December 14, 1880, and graduated at that city from the public schools, and attended business college. He is five feet ten inches in height, has dark brown hair and eyes, and weighs one hundred and seventy pounds.

Mr. Jonasson played his first engagement in 1900 with a road company, and was later in stock for five years at Salt Lake City, with Marjorie Rambeau, Willard Mack, Branden Taynan and Ada Dwyer. Following this he was in vaudeville on the Orpheum circuit in a one act playlet for one season, and spent a year with the road company producing "The Deep Purple."

He entered upon his motion picture career about a year ago, and accepted an engagement with the Kalem company, and has since remained there. In "The Invisible Power" he appeared as Sargeant Whitney, in "The Derelict" he played the heavy, and in "The Girl Detective" and "The Mysteries of the Grand Hotel" series he also appeared as the heavy and was especially fortunate in his interpretation.

His experience in stock companies is now serving him well, for he is capable of playing any part for which he may be cast by the management.

In a recent subject, "The Prison Stain," he appeared in the leading part, that of Lawyer John Benton.

He has a number of accomplishments, including ball room and fancy dancing, can swim, ride and row; is a fight fan and played ball while in college.

THE MEN WHO HAVE MADE THE JESSE L. LASKY FEATURE PLAY COMPANY

JESSE L. LASKY, president and head of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, though still a young man, is regarded as one of the most important personages in the theatrical world.

Mr. Lasky was born in San Francisco, Cal., thirty-five years ago. He was educated there, but left at the age of twenty-one to go to New York to produce a vaudeville act he had in mind. This act proved so popular that he produced a number of others.

He was the first vaudeville manager to produce large acts of from ten to twenty-five and thirty people with a lavish production. In less than eight years Mr. Lasky was considered the leading vaudeville producer of the country.

On a trip to Paris he viewed the celebrated "Follies Begere," the present cabaret. This feature made such an impression that Mr. Lasky returned to New York and erected a large and handsome theatre and presented the performance with an "All Star Cast" in the same manner as they were presented in Paris.

Instead of seats, the auditorium and balcony was filled with small tables so the audience could watch the stage and dine at the same time. Mr. Lasky was just a year too early with his "Follies Begere." The New York public was not quite ready for the cabaret entertainment and he lost considerably in this venture. Undaunted, he returned to his vaudeville productions.

For a number of years Mr. Lasky and Mr. Cecil B. De Mille had been warm friends, and when Mr. De Mille expressed his desire to produce motion pictures, Mr. Lasky seconded him. A great deal of the success of the Lasky company is credited to Mr. Lasky.

It was his idea of having some prominent theatre star, surrounded by a capable company, that caused the continuous demand of the motion picture public for dramatic favorites. Mr. Lasky's wonderful foresight and knowledge of theatrical conditions has been invaluable for the organization.

CECIL B. DE MILLE, the director-general of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Company, comes from a dramatic family. His father was Henry C. De Mille, former partner of David Belasco, and the author of such famous plays as "The Charity Ball," "The Wife," and others.

Cecil B. De Mille was born in Little Washington, N. C., about thirty-four years ago. He was educated at Columbia University and started his dramatic career at a very early age, appearing in some of his father's productions.

Several times, while still a young man, Mr. De Mille made productions of his own and starred in the principal role. Prior to his debut into the motion picture film, Mr. De Mille was considered one of the ablest theatrical producers and directors in New York City. He is the author of several well-known plays.

Before the organization of the Lasky company Mr. De Mille's knowledge of motion pictures was very slight. He had seen a few feature productions and formed the idea that the motion picture public would be interested in features not too long, by telling an interesting story in a dramatic manner; that motion picture scenarios should be prepared with the same care as a play of the spoken drama, and that it should be presented by artists familiar with dramatic values.

He voiced his opinion to Mr. Lasky and Mr. Goldfish, who agreed with him, and the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company was formed. Its success is now a matter of familiar history.

Mr. De Mille's ideas were greeted with jeers by the motion picture producers, but his slight knowledge of motion pictures was his best asset. The young man went ahead and produced a five-reel photodrama with the same care and art that he would produce a play for New York.

Knowing nothing of photography, he violated all photographic principles, as then set forth, and accomplished what was considered by motion picture producers as the impossible. He began experimenting with light effects, and instead of producing flat photography he was able to get in on the motion picture film effects of paintings.

Every set of each production was built as substantially as though it were intended to last a lifetime, and gradually the public began to appreciate the detail and art of the Lasky productions. One of Mr. De Mille's photographic triumphs was the production of "Carmen," in which Geraldine Farrar made her screen debut.

The Lasky director-general is a tireless worker and constantly endeavors to produce still better pictures. His appearance in the motion picture world has revolutionized directing.

SAMUEL GOLDFISH, who is the treasurer and general manager of the Jesse L. Lasky Company, was born in Germany and came to this country when nine years old.

Before his theatrical undertakings—which are numerous apart from his photodramatic interests—he had admirable training and rare experience in legitimate merchandise undertakings. In fact, he still continues to hold such business connections, apart from his many amusement enterprises.

Mr. Goldfish, though he did not devote his personal time to his theatrical matters, was largely interested with Mr. Jesse L. Lasky in his vaudeville and dramatic productions for some years prior to the forming of the Lasky Feature Play Company and the entrance of the company into the field of photodrama. His association with Mr. Lasky began several years ago, and each year thereafter became more intimate.

The Lasky Feature Play Company was originated by three men—Mr. Lasky, Mr. Goldfish and Mr. Cecil B. De Mille. Mr. Goldfish at once took charge of the executive end of the business and organized it from the start along progressive lines, basing the entire project on thoroughly legitimate and business-like principles.

It is largely to Mr. Goldfish's organizing ability and his financial perspicacity that the company has grown in a brief period to its present large proportions. It is Mr. Goldfish's particular pride that the Lasky Feature Play Company has a reputation for efficiency and reliability which would be a credit to any of the world's foremost high-grade commercial houses and which is doing much to establish new and higher standards for the entire photodramatic industry.

For more than one now accepted and familiar feature of photoplay production the business as a whole is indebted to one or another of this gifted trio, who were men unafraid of small and humble beginnings, who had the courage to practice and exploit ideas in advance of their contemporaries in the new art, and whose signal success has not caused them in the least to waver from their original determination—to make a financial success of pictures produced according to the best and most strictly artistic standards existing.

Mr. Melford and Cameraman Percy Hilbourn making scene of Fanny Ward and Jack Dean

THE past year bas been one of history making in tbe motion picture industry, and especially is this true in respect to the multiple reel subject, most frequently referred to as the feature picture; and of those who have materially aided in the improvement of subjects of this nature, George H. Melford, because of his most remarkable record for the past eleven months, must be referred to as in a class by himself.

In this period of time, which represents his connection with the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company as director, Mr. Melford has made no less than twelve five-reel photoplays for the Paramount program. In each a celebrity of tbe theatrical profession was starred, and of the twelve each is of such quality that it would be a difficult task to find any similar number from any or all programs that have been so favorably criticised by the trade, press and motion picture following.

Mr. Melford began his first work with the Lasky company on November 7, 1914, and his fourteen months' work here is represented by the following twelve notable productions: Mabel Taliaferro, in "Young Romance"; Edith Wynne Matthison, in "The Governor's Lady"; Wallace Eddinger, in "A Gentleman of Leisure"; Theodore Roberts and Lois Meredith, in "The Woman"; Blanche Sweet, in "Stolen Goods"; Ina Claire and Carlyle Blackwell, in "The Puppet Crown"; Laura Hope Crews, in "The Fighting Hope"; Fanny Ward, in "The Marriage of Kitty"; Charlotte Walker, in "Out of Darkness"; Lou-Tellegen, in "The Explorer"; Lou-Tellegen, in "The Unknown"; Edna Goodrich, in "Armstrong's Wife"; Valeska Suratt in "The Immigrant."

Those intimate with Mr. Melford, who have followed his career since he first became a photoplayer ten years ago, attribute his most remarkable success to his interest in the new art from the time he first became a member of the Kalem organization as leading man for the producing company in Florida under the direction of Sid Olcott. Mr. Melford remained with the Kalem organization for nine years, was director in the East for several years, and then placed in charge of the companies sent to California. In California he supervised the building of a new studio near Glendale, north of Los Angeles, and was managing director for four years, supervising during that period all of the productions that were made at this studio. At times there were four companies at work here. During the four years Mr. Melford was managing director at this studio, he devoted practically all of his time to the making of feature productions. At first any two-reel subject was considered a feature, but with the change of the industry he was given the distinction by the Kalem company of making the first big multiple reel photoplay.

One of the first produced by him was "The Boer War" in six reels, and later came "Shannon of the Sixth," a five-reel subject, and another that reflected credit upon the maker was "Invisible Power," of four reels. When these subjects were made there was a doubt in the minds of every manufacturer as to the future of the film. To make a subject of such proportion as "The Boer War" or "Shannon of the Sixth" was at that time considered a big risk, for the number of theatres that could afford to pay rentals for such a gigantic production was thought to be so small that the making of such a spectacular photoplay was considered foolhardy. The action of the Kalem company placing Mr. Melford in charge of producing such a subject bears out the high esteem in which he was held by the officers of that big manufacturing company.

Another distinct honor which came to Mr. Melford was that he was selected by Cecil B. de Mille and Jesse L. Lasky to produce photoplays in which the highest stars of the legitimate stage were to take part.

That Mr. Melford has proven his ability as a director is brought out by the excellency of the subjects made under his direction.

In the making of a photoplay Mr. Melford has a way all his own. Primarily he becomes thoroughly familiar with every detail of the story, and when production begins he is so engrossed in the subject at hand that he unconsciously calls the players by their play name in almost every instance when giving instructions in the making of scenes. From the time the production is taken up until the last scene is filmed he fairly lives the part of each character of the photoplay in acting the parts for the players.

Every legitimate stage star that has taken up work in pictures has found the work quite different in that they play for an audience—the camera—five, seven or nine feet distant, and must give the necessary action in a much smaller space than when playing on the stage. This change to the usual stage celebrity causes confusion, but Mr. Melford has found a remedy for this by explicitly demonstrating to his star just what is wanted; in fact, needed in every scene. In this way he has been able to get the desired result without loss of time, and to the improvement of the photoplay. Mr. Melford was born in Rochester, New York, and educated Magill. Seventeen years ago he did his first professional work on the legitimate stage, where he remained as an actor for several years.

FRANK LLOYD, DIRECTOR, PALLAS PICTURES

FRANK LLOYD is a director. He is one of the bright and shining lights with the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company and the recent Paramount acquisition, Pallas Pictures. He has come to the front in remarkable fashion, and is one of the most substantial successes among the host of men and women who have come over to the screen from the stage.

As such, Frank Lloyd is an interesting example. In the motion picture business, as a rule, the director's prominence in a film ends at the studio. In the theatre the players are all the exhibitor and the public care for.

But Frank Lloyd is one director with a personality so extraordinary and methods of work so individual that they leap the customary barrier and actually register upon the screen. "A Frank Lloyd piece," in consequence, has come to be distinctly a listed security upon the picture market.

Frank Lloyd accordingly is a case, and a very rare case, where the public has voluntarily become inquisitive about the personality of a director without the latter's having had to be pushed by a manufacturer's publicity.

Frank Lloyd calls "The Gentleman from Indiana," the Pallas Picture starring Dustin Farnum, the greatest thing he has ever done. He probably is thinking of some of the remarkable effects he secured in it.

It is no small thing to construct a genuine replica of the main street of a present day Indiana county seat, and people it with circus days, political rallies and torchlight processions.

It is no small thing to stimulate a thunderstorm in a grove of willows at night with such realism that when it is first flashed in the Stygian darkness of the projecting room upon a girl who is merely looking for "flaws" and "digs" the girl screams!

Yet one of the greatest things Frank Lloyd ever did he probably thinks of least of all. One day in "The Gentleman from Indiana" he labored from nine in the morning until nine at night with a series of huge street scenes enlisting hundreds of people under a strain which would have brought an ordinary man to collapse. But when it was all over, the last torch extinguished, the last flare out, Frank Lloyd's voice, so hoarse it was little more than a husky whisper, could be heard through the dark:

"Just a moment before you go! I want to thank you for what you have done for me! I want to thank you—every one!" That's Frank Lloyd!

Mr. Lloyd's unfailing good nature is no small factor in his success as a director. He is tireless in striving for the perfection of his scenes, mechanically as well as in the work of his cast.

LUCIEN LITTLEFIELD, JUVENILE LEADS, LASKY

LUCIEN LITTLEFIELD, juvenile and character leading man of the Lasky studio, has in the past year won for himself fame as a make-up artist. Mr. Littlefield was born in San Antonia, Texas, in 1895, and when less than six years of age was giving circuses in his barn.

It was then he first practiced make-up, using burnt matches and cotton stuck on with New Orleans molasses, and was sent to military school at Staunton, Vt., but he disliked the course and ran away, going to New York, where he secured an engagement with the Imp company in 1911.

Following this he played in the Empire stock company, and then went to the coast.

His first motion picture engagement was with the Lasky company, and he has remained there since that time. About the studio he is joked for his studious manner concerning make-up. In the war drama, "The Warrens of Virginia," he appeared in fourteen different make-ups, and his character part of the Grind in "The Wild Goose Chase" with Marguerite Clark won him much praise from the critics in New York.

He had another excellent part in "The Marriage of Kitty." Mr. Littlefield has appeared in more than two hundred different make-ups as his photograph album will show. He studeis make-up as an art, and practices in this every day.

Mr. Littlefield's face is of the type which "screens" well and he has become popular with a large public.

His training has been such as to fit him for a wide variety of parts, and he has developed ability in screen expression which has added greatly to his popularity.

HORACE B. CARPENTER, LEADS, LASKY

HORACE B. CARPENTER, Lasky, a versatile actor, is successful in character leads. Mr. Carpenter was born at Sank Rapids, Minn., in 1881, and became a newspaper writer and illustrator.

For one season he did concert work, and in 1902 was with Sanford Dodge in repertoire. Later he played in stock with George Fawcett at St. Paul and Minneapolis. He was with Melbourne McDowell, Olga Nethersole, and with the "Doll House" road company. For a time he had his own companies, and later played in stock in Denver, Kansas City, El Paso, Salt Lake City, Portland and Seattle.

His first engagement with Selig was in "The Switzerland Trail." A season in stock followed. He returned to Selig in "The Adventures of Kathlyn" series.

Mr. Carpenter has been with Lasky since its organization. He appeared as Ivanoff with Charles Richman in "The Man from Home"; Gypsy Torpet in "The Goose Girl"; Merkle in "The Country Boy"; Rand in "The Call of the North," with Robert Edeson; the Chancellor in "The Puppet Crown"; Duke DeAlva in "The Ghost Breakers," with H. B. Warner; Pastias in "Carmen" and Pedro in "Marie Rosa," with Geraldine Farrar. In "The Explorers" he appeared as the game hunter; in "Mr. Grex of Monte Carlo" he portrays the Italian minister.

Mr. Carpenter has every qualification for character leads and heavies. He is five feet eleven inches in height and weighs one hundred and eighty pounds. He is proficient in riding, boxing and fencing.

MYRTLE STEDMAN, LEADS, PALLAS PICTURES

Miss Stedman was born in Chicago and received her education in that city. She studied elocution and voice culture, as her parents had outlined for her an operatic career. As early as twelve years of age she showed a taste for the stage and, strangely enough, it was as a dancer that she made her debut with the Whitney Opera company in Chicago. She took the immediate fancy of the public and the management, and was soon both acting and singing.

Miss Stedman spent her teens alternating acting with education and visits to Colorado, where her father was mining. She has never given up her singing, and her voice is always at the service of any deserving charity, and she has given a start in life to many a young girl who could not afford to have singing lessons.

Her last engagement before entering pictures was with the Whitney Opera company once more when she toured in opera and musical comedy for a long time. She also made many appearances on the concert platform.

Her engagement with the Selig Polyscope company covered a period of four years, when she acted with and under Otis Turner, Kathlyn Williams, William Duncan, Tom Mix and many other well-known people.

She came into great prominence when she accepted her present engagement with Bosworth, Inc. She was first selected to play the leads in the Jack London stories under Hobart Bosworth.

Among other good things she has given us may be named her striking performance in "Hypocrites," her part opposite to Cyril Maude in "Peer Gynt," the title part in "Wild Olive" and the female leads in "Odyssey of the North," "Smoke Bellew" and "The Valley of the Moon." She has also supported several famous speaking stage stars, including Elsie Janis and George Fawcett.

Myrtle Stedman is above the average height, is a blonde and has a pair of most expressive blue eyes and a wonderful head of hair. She is regarded as one of the best-dressed women in pictures. Passionately fond of outdoor life, she thoroughly enjoys taking long rides in her automobile, devotes much of her spare time to her garden, and is an expert rider and swimmer. Miss Stedman has a long-time contract with the Pallas and Morosco companies.

FORREST STANLEY, LEADS, MOROSCO

FORREST STANLEY, leading man, the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company, is one of the most popular leading men on the legitimate stage, and has been "loaned" by Oliver Morosco from his famous Burbank theater stock company in Los Angeles to the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company. For the past four seasons he has headed the productions at the Burbank, a theatre upon which the whole country keeps an eye, as it is the producing house for most of Oliver Morosco's plays.

Forrest Stanley, though a young man, has had success as a producer, having operated high-class stock companies with himself as star in Troy, Brooklyn and Lowell, Mass.

At one time he had as many as five road shows out at once. He attracted the attention of New York managers and finally landed on Broadway, where he made a profound impression in support of many of the leading stars.

After leaving one of the large eastern universities, where he had specialized in architecture and mechanical engineering, he entered the building contracting field, and was connected with some of the biggest construction enterprises in New York.

He assisted in the erection of the Prudential Life building, the Astor Hotel and the Produce Exchange.

He was then secured as manager for Thomas Diamond on Thirty-third street, one of the pioneer firms of New York, where he had personal charge of its annual contracts with patrons like the Vanderbilts.

Meanwhile Forrest Stanley was appearing behind the footlights, and his success was such that he decided to abandon a business career and devote himself to the stage. With characteristic thoroughness he turned down attractive offers in important productions to begin at the bottom, and apprenticed himself as scene painter, stage carpenter, electrician and property man for the sake of the experience.

He followed this up with adventures with medicine shows, burlesque and repertoire road shows, where he developed a versatility which eventually made him one of the most valuable leads in the profession. His sensational success at the Burbank theatre has already become one of the traditions of that important house. As leading man for the Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company, Forest Stanley has scored a great personal success in "The Wild Olive," in which he starred with Myrtle Stedman; in "The Rug Maker's Daughter," with Maud Allan, the celebrated dancer; in "Pretty Mrs. Smith," with Fritzi Scheff; in "Jane," with Charlotte Greenwood and Sydney Grant, and others.

COLIN CAMPBELL WITH SELIG POLYSCOPE COMPANY

EDWARD J. PEIL, SELIG ZOO STUDIO

EDWARD J. PEIL, leading man at the Selig Zoo Studio, Los Angeles, California, is a native of Wisconsin, having been born in Racine in 1884. He was educated in the public schools of Racine and at Notre Dame University, South Bend, Indiana, and before beginning his successful stage and screen career was a registered pharmacist. His legitimate stage experience was begun with Modjeska; played on the road with "The Witching Hour" and "Brewsters' Millions," and appeared in the musical comedies, "The Country Girl," "Cingatee" and "Don't Lie to Your Wife." For five years he was leading man in dramatic stock companies both in the East and West.

During his career in motion pictures Mr. Peil has been one year with Pathé, two years with the Lubin company, Philadelphia, where he played leads. Among the films in which he played leading parts are "The Sunken Village," "The Ragged Earl," "The Two Roses," "The Imposter," "Bags of Gold," "Strength of Family Ties," "The Price" and "Just Nobody."

Mr. Peil was a prominent member of Notre Dame football team, and still enjoys outdoor sports, being an enthusiastic baseball fan, and is also fond of tennis. His other inclinations are toward books and home life, where he finds his greatest pleasures.

Mr. Peil brings to the screen a forceful personality and an ability to interpret any part of any variety. His performances in the Selig pictures, with plots centering about the four-footed inhabitants of the jungle zoo, have shown him to be as fearless as he is versatile. With his strong physique he is easily able to carry the part of an athletic hunter.

AL. W. FILSON IS NOW PLAYING CHARACTER LEADS AT THE SELIG WESTERN STUDIO

THERE are theorists who say that a stage training is not essential to success in motion pictures. They are taking a comparatively few exceptions to establish a rule, and ignoring the evident fact that stage experience gives its possessor a solid foundation that counts heavily in the quick and forceful application of histrionic talent.

No case could more clearly illustrate this than the rapid advance in motion picture achievement and in public recognition of Al. W. Filson. This able figure of the big-time vaudeville stage came to the studio with little acclaim, and although that advent is but a little time back, Filson has already taken a place with the notable figures of the screen as the result of his work in "Ghosts," and "Bred in the Bone," each a D. W. Griffith production. "The Truth Wagon," and "The Man with the Iron Heart," a Selig Red Seal play, and other photoplays.

The mobility and strength of Filson's facial lines, as much as his technical knowledge of all the player's arts, have counted heavily in his screen success, which apparently has only just begun. He is now one of the foremost "Type men in the country," and a truly exceptional actor for those exceptional occasions that arise in photodrama creation, where out of the ordinary results are desired, and especially where "punch" is imperative to the success of a pictured situation.

Mr. Filson retired in 1905 at the very zenith of his success in vaudeville, although he had become famous, with his talented wife, as the team of Filson and Errol, in establishing George M. Cohan's "A Tip on the Derby," written, by the way, by Cohan for Filson, who was his intimate friend and professional associate. "A Daughter of Bacchus," "Women vs. Men," and "The Black Cat," are among the tremendous hits of the varieties.

Mr. Filson and his wife tired of travel and yearned for domestic tranquillity. They have found it in "the movies," and Mr. Filson has found a congenial outlet for his big talents. He has refused tempting offers from the vaudeville magnates, and is apparently happy in his contract with the Selig company, which obviously appreciates his value as a character player.

BESSIE EYTON, LEADS, SELIG

BESSIE EYTON, featured leading woman appearing in subjects of the Selig Polyscope Company, although known the world over, has never been beyond the borders of her native state, California. Miss Eyton was born at Santa Barbara, and received an education in the public schools.

Her first and only engagement with a motion picture company began in 1910, a few days following the time that she applied for a position. For several weeks she worked as an "extra" girl, then was assigned parts, and later became leading woman.

Her rise from the extra ranks to that of heading a company was accomplished in less than a year. Her first leading part was in "A Diamond in the Rough," which was produced in 1910.

When Director Colin Campbell produced his masterpiece, "The Spoilers," adapted from the Rex Beach novel, Miss Eyton was selected to play the part of Helen Chester, and that she did this well is borne out by the picture and its great popularity.

Miss Eyton's other favorite subjects are "When His Ship Came In," "The Mother Heart," "Hope," "Master of the Garden" and "Motherhood." Her most recent release was "Jungle Lovers."

Prior to the time of becoming a motion picture actress Miss Eyton was an expert swimmer, was fond of horseback riding, and was exceptionally well trained in all forms of athletics.

Her education in the public schools was supplemented by special training in vocal and instrumental music.

Miss Eyton is a trifle more than 5½ feet tall, has a fair complexion, blue eyes and, to use her own words, red hair. But Miss Eyton has a peculiar shade of red hair, more aptly described as Titian, and she has a wealth of it, too.

Miss Eyton, during her motion picture career, has appeared in many difficult roles, and in each has given performances that added much to her popularity.

She has a very decidedly attractive screen appearance, and this, coupled with her natural talents for this work, have made her extremely popular with the film fans throughout the country.

It is doubtful if there is another motion picture actress who made the rapid rise that Miss Eyton did, and who has been successful in maintaining her position. She has appeared in more than two hundred photoplays.

HARRY MESTAYER, LEADS, SELIG

HARRY MESTAYER, starred in Selig Polyscope Company releases on the V-L-S-E program, is a member of one of the oldest theatrical families in America, his forefathers for several generations having been prominently identified with the theatrical profession.

His father, Charles H. Mestayer, and his uncle, W. A. Mestayer, played with all the greatest stars of the American stage over thirty years ago, and thirty-five years ago were members of the famous John McCullough California theatre stock company at San Francisco, from which organization emanated many of the celebrities of the stage in their day.

Mr. Mestayer's father played with Booth, Barrett, Davenport, Modjeska, Keene and others. Because of this parentage, Mr. Mestayer makes the claim that he was born and reared upon the stage.

Harry Mestayer was born at San Francisco and attended grammar school in New York, and graduated from the Boston Latin High School.

Prior to his school days he played child parts with Maggie Mitchell, and following his education he made his debut in "Mr. Potter of Texas," which was a notable success in New York, and his most recent engagement on the legitimate stage was that of leading man of the Princess players of Holbrook Blinn.

His greatest success was the part of Larry in Paul Armstrong's "Escape," produced by Oliver Morosco, in which he was co-starred with Helen Ware. During his theatrical experience Mr. Mestayer played with E. H. Sothern, James K. Hackett, Margaret Illington, Jack Barrymore, and was leading man in Cohan & Harris' original production of "On Trial."

His first engagement in pictures was for George Kleine's production of "Stop Thief," in which he was starred. Following that engagement he went with the Selig company and has been starred in "The Millionaire Baby," "The House of a Thousand Candles," "I Didn't Raise My Boy to Be a Soldier," as well as "Across the Bridge of Time" and "The Dragnet."

Mr. Mestayer has paid particular attention to athletics. He is a charter member of the Los Angeles Athletic Club, and a member of the New York Athletic, the Olympic Club at San Francisco, and the Lambs and Friars of New York. Riding is this photoplay star's principal sport. He plays hand ball, is a good boxes, and swims and rows.

Mr. Mestayer is an ideal leading man for photoplays inasmuch as he is a very accomplished actor, is of the proper size to play opposite most leading women, and is an athlete of extraordinary training.

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH, DIRECTOR-GENERAL FINE ARTS-TRIANGLE STUDIOS

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH, who created a sensation with his "Birth of a Nation," is a native of Kentucky. He began his career as an actor in a Louisville stock company. Mr. Griffith also studied grand opera and developed a pleasing baritone voice.

He entered motion pictures as a scenario writer and a player in minor parts, but the technical side of the work fascinated him. This was with the Biograph company, and in less than three years from his first entrance into the Biograph studio he was considered the most promising figure among American producers.

His numerous innovations and his dramatic conception soon placed him in the foremost ranks.

Mr. Griffith was the first to use "close-ups" and "cutbacks." His principal work has been done for the Biograph and as supervising director for the Reliance and Majestic, and for the present in the same capacity with the Fine Arts Film company, affiliated with the Triangle program, although devoting a great deal of his attention to his individual productions.

His list of personal feature pictures released under the trademark of "Griffith Features" include "The Single Standard," "Home, Sweet Home," "The Escape," "The Avenging Conscience" and "The Birth of a Nation." Mr. Griffith is an acknowledged master of the three elements that go to make up the photoplay; the handling of players, the working of mechanical effects, and the construction of plot. In each of these divisions he has broken new ground and demonstrated the surety of his constructive genius.

Many of the actors and actresses who are now screen stars were trained by him; his employment of numbers is just as skillful as his work with individuals; and his ability as a technician is demonstrated as much by his lighting effects as by his creation of splendid panoramas.

WM. CHRISTY CABANNE, DIRECTOR, FINE ARTS

WILLIAM CHRISTY CABANNE, director of Fine Arts Films at the Griffith studio, was born at St. Louis, Mo., in 1888, and after a very eventful career made his debut in the theatrical profession in 1898.

Following an education at St. Rose Academy at St. Louis, Mr. Cabanne went to Culver Military Academy at Culver, Indiana. After being there for two years he ran away and enlisted in the navy.

After three months' service, he received an appointment to Annapolis Military Academy. There he was injured in a football accident which rendered him unfit for naval service, but his love for the sea caused him to secure employment on a cattle boat which took him to South America. After remaining there some time he returned to the United States.

His first theatrical appearance was with Laura Nelson Hall in "Salvation Nell" at the Superba theatre at St. Louis. Later he played with Marguerite Clark in "When All the World Is Young," with Wilton Lackaye in "Old Lamps and New," in George Ade's "The College Widow," with Charlotte Walker in "The Inferior Sex," and with Orrin Johnson in "Father Jerome." All of these productions were produced at St. Louis and Chicago.

In 1910 the present producer made a trip to Cuba in company with St. Louis capitalists, where he was captured by rebels and condemned to be shot, but the fact that he was an American and that influence was brought to bear, he with the others secured their release.

After continuing the trip to South America he returned to New York, where he met D. W. Griffith and was engaged by the Biograph company as leading man. A few months later he became a director and has served in that capacity since that time, remaining with the Biograph company until Mr. Griffith went to the Reliance and Majestic.

Some of his greatest productions were "The Great Leap," "The Outlaw's Revenge" and "The Lost House."

Mr. Cabanne directed a number of Mutual Masterpictures, including "The Absentee," in which Robert Edeson was starred; "Enoch Arden," in which the Gish sisters played; and "The Failure," in which John Emerson was featured.

Mr. Cabanne has the distinction of producing the first Fine Arts film released on the Triangle program. This was "The Lamb," in which Douglas Fairbanks was starred. He also produced "The Martyrs of the Alamo" and "Double Trouble," in which Douglas Fairbanks was starred. As producer, Mr. Cabanne has been most successful.

JOHN EMERSON, DIRECTOR, FINE ARTS

JOHN EMERSON, producer of and featured in Fine Arts Films for the Triangle program, is one of the best-known men of the American stage.

He is an Ohioan by birth, and a college graduate. Shortly after finishing he chose the stage as a profession, and later taught literature and elocution in a school of acting in Chicago, during which time he brought his past study of music to good use by conducting a choir in one of the leading churches.

His first public appearance was with Tim Murray. During that brief engagement he came to the conclusion that he did not know enough to be an actor, and went to New York, where he studied for three years, putting on amateur plays and working as super and extra to support himself.

His first New York engagement was as stage manager, which he held for two seasons, then for two seasons he held the same position for Mrs. Fiske and was also understudy in several plays, including "Becky Sharp," "Hedda Gabler" and "Leah Kleschna."

For four years he was with the Shuberts, producing among many others several Clyde Fitch plays, including "The Truth," "Girls," "The Blue Mouse" and "The City." The latter play he finished and produced after Mr. Fitch's death.

For a year he was with Madam Nazimova, producing and playing leading parts in "Doll's House," "Comtesse Coquette" and others. He was then engaged as general stage director for Charles Frohman, producing all of Charles Frohman's plays for John Drew, Ethel Barrymore, Billie Burke, Marie Doro, William H. Crane, Madam Nazimova, John Mason and others.

He also wrote and produced with Mr. Frohman "The Conspiracy," which he produced later as a photoplay with the Famous Players Film Company; also appeared in the title role of "The Bachelor's Romance" for the Famous Players.

Since joining the Griffith forces he has been starred in the Mutual Masterpicture, "The Failure," and has written and produced the film version of "Old Heidelberg," which will shortly be released on the Triangle program.

Since entering the field of the film drama, Mr. Emerson's progress has been extraordinary. He has been engaged by D. W. Griffith as one of his chief directors of the Fine Arts Films, and will also appear in a number of Triangle features. One of his most recent productions is "The Scarlet Band," a spectacular feature written by himself and Robert Baker, his collaborator in writing "The Conspiracy." In this Mr. Emerson enacted the character of Winthrop Clavering.

SARAH TRUAX, LEADS, GRIFFITH FINE ARTS

SARAH TRUAX, known in private life as Mrs. Charles S. Albert, appearing in Fine Arts Films on the Triangle program, was born in Covington, Ky., and educated at the Chicago conservatory.

Following her education she made her debut on the stage with Otis Skinner in "His Grace de Grammont," by Clyde Fitch, which was produced at the Grand Opera House. For three seasons Miss Truax remained with this well-known actor, playing the leading roles in legitimate drama.

This was followed by a number of years with prominent stock companies in Baltimore, Buffalo, Detroit. Pittsburgh, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Spokane, San Francisco, Los Angeles and other cities.

In the original production of "The Eternal City" Miss Truax played a prominent part, and later succeeded Viola Allen in the principal role. In the All-Star production of "The Two Orphans" she appeared as Henrietta.

Following an engagement in "The Spider's Web" she was married to Mr. Albert, a leading attorney of Minneapolis, and for some time was off the stage. She returned to appear in the part of Domini in "The Garden of Allah."

She recently became a member of the stock company for Griffith Fine Arts Films, and her first important part was that of Mrs. Finley in the film version of Sir Gilbert Parker's story, "Jordon Is a Hard Road," in which Frank Campeau is featured. This is her first picture engagement.

Miss Truax was educated for the grand opera stage, and has a beautiful mezzo soprano voice. She enjoys long walks and golf, and is an excellent rider and swimmer.

Besides her metropolitan engagements, Miss Truax has been seen extensively on tour, and has acquired a great reputation among audiences in every corner of the land.

Among the successes in which she has been seen outside of New York are "The Christian," in which she appeared as Glory Quayle; as Irene in "The Prince of India"; as Christie Ludlow in "Rose Valley"; as Harriet Swayne in "The Senator's Vindication"; as Mrs. Anna Hartman in "The Double Life"; in "Man and Superman," Bernard Shaw's great dramatic comedy, and "The Spider's Web."

In "The Outsiders" Miss Truax appeared at the Tremont, Boston, in the fall of 1911. For the following two years she devoted her talents exclusively to stock company work, in which she had tremendous success throughout the Middle West and along the Pacific Coast.

JOSEPH T. BELMONT, LEADS, GRIFFITH FINE ARTS

JOSEPH T. BELMONT, playing character leads in Fine Arts Triangle films, known to the West Coast studios as "Baldy" Belmont, began his professional career with an "Uncle Tom" show at nineteen.

This character actor was born at St. Claire, Mich., in 1878, and received his education at Port Huron, Mich.

This first "Uncle Tom" engagement was in portraying the well-known part of George Hardis, and that his experience since that time has been varied, is brought out by the fact that he has played more than one hundred roles, ranging from Topsy, which he played owing to the illness of the actress who regularly wore the pigtails, to Fagin, the Jew, in "Oliver Twist," or Irish Biddies and Italian heavies.

During his career on the legitimate stage he played in the following productions: Gecko in A. M. Palmer's "Trilby"; Frank Layson in "Old Kentucky"; Nanna Sahib in "The Victorian Cross"; Tondi Tanji in "The Darling of the Gods"; Jose Castro in "The Girl of the Golden West."

The latter two were Belasco productions. Other roles he portrayed were: Honey Wiggins in "The Virginian," Dick the Rat in "Alias Jimmy Valentine," Mat Donovan in "Wildfire," and Link Watkins in "Mary Jane's Pa."

For four seasons Mr. Belmont was with the Empire theatre stock company in Providence, R. I.; with the Poli stock company at New Haven, Conn., and at B. F. Keith's Harlem Opera House, New York City.

Mr. Belmont's first work in pictures was with the Crystal in New York with Pearl White in comedy parts. After six months there he was made director of a comedy company, wrote his own scripts, and played his own leads, which were released under the name of "The Baldy Belmont" series.

His connection with D. W. Griffith dates back to January 17, 1914, in Komic subjects made under the direction of Eddie Dillon. In the filming of "The Birth of a Nation" Mr. Belmont appeared in dramatic parts, and finishing this work was made director. He had charge of the filming of a number of Reliance releases—"The Balance," "The Changling," "The Family Doctor," "For His Pal," "Hidden Crimes," "Buried Treasure," "Son of a Dog," an Indian picture, and "Her Fairy Prince."

Recently Mr. Belmont appeared in support of John Emerson in "The Failure" and in "The Martyrs of the Alamo," both five-reel Triangle subjects. Mr. Belmont has elaborate quarters in the studio lot, with a writing desk, a disappearing bed, electric lights and fan, and the entire interior is enamelel white. This is one of the coziest spots on the lot, and a favorite gathering place for players.

MONROE SALISBURY, LEADS, GRIFFITH FINE ARTS

MONROE SALISBURY, now a member of the Griffith players stock, has had a very successful career on the legitimate stage, where he played leads for some of the most celebrated actresses.

He was born in New York and there received a college education. For three years he was with Mrs. Fiske, leading man with John Drew for one season, and was with Nance O'Neil another season.

For some time he was with Richard Mansfield in "Henry the Fifth," and in Shakesperian repertoire, and two years as leading man with Kathrine Kidder. His last two years on the legitimate stage were with William Farnum in "The Prince of India," in which he played the part of Demedes.

In January, 1914, he made his first appearance before the motion picture camera, playing the heavy part in "The Squaw Man" in support of Dustin Farnum for the Lasky company.

In the Lasky production of "The Goose Girl," featuring Marguerite Clark, he played opposite this actress, and in the Lasky-Belasco release "The Rose of the Rancho," he appeared in the part of Don Louis. With Charles Richman in the Lasky subject "The Man from Home," he played the part of Almeric St. Alban.

Mr. Salisbury has a very commanding appearance, stands six feet in height, weighs one hundred and eighty pounds, and has attractive dark hair and brown eyes.

On the screen Mr. Salisbury has lived up to the reputation for versatility which he acquired on the stage.

GLADYS BROCKWELL, LEADS, GRIFFITH FINE ARTS

GLADYS WADSWORTH BROCKWELL, leading woman of Griffith Fine Arts films stock company, is the daughter of theatrical people, and began her stage career when she was but a baby. Miss Brockwell was born in Brooklyn, N. Y., educated tbere, and her first speaking part was that of a newsboy played at a benefit when she was three and a half years old. At seven she appeared with the Phillips Lyceum stock, Brooklyn in "Lord Fauntleroy," "The Man Without a Country," "East Lynne," and others.

She was educated under private tutors, and for a time attended school in Brooklyn. Miss Brockwell played her first grown-up part in a vaudeville sketch headed by H. B. Haveland. Then followed a number of engagements in stock and one-night stands during which time she worked with Willard Mack as his leading woman. Following this she headed her own company and in the Northwest played in "The Fighting Hope" and "Merely Mary Ann."

Her first engagement in pictures was with Romaine Fielding, with whom she remained for five months. She then went to the New York Motion Picture Corporation, playing the leading part in "The Typhoon" and "On the Night Stage," the latter featuring Robert Edeson and W. S. Hart.

Since becoming a member of the Griffith stock she has appeared with Henry Woodruff in "A Man and His Mate," played lead in "Up From the Depths" with Courtenay Foote, and other parts. She dances well, is an enthusiast for tennis, gorf and swimming.

HOWARD GAYE, LEADS, GRIFFITH FINE ARTS

HOWARD GAYE, who plays straight and character leads in subjects for D. W. Griffith release on the Triangle program, is an Englishman, born in London in 1885. While at Haileyburg College and Pembroke College, Oxford, he determined to become an actor, and later joined Wilson Barrett on a tour of England, during which he appeared in "The Sign of the Cross," "Daughters of Babylon," and Shakesperian repertoire.

His career on the stage of fourteen years ended in July, 1913, when he went to Los Angeles and played with the Kalem company in support of Carlyle Blackwell, where he remained, appearing in society dramas until February, 1914, when he became a member of the Griffith studio stock.

His first part under Mr. Griffith was that of Christ in allegorical scenes of "Home Sweet Home." Since be has appeared as the Earl of Essmere in "Tricotrin," from an adaptation of the Ouida novel in four reels, in connection with which he received cordial commendation.

In "Souls Triumphant" he appeared as the devil, and was Lesseter in the Ralph Lewis and Francelia Billington photoplay, "The Bread Line." In D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation," Mr. Gaye very capably portrayed the part of the Confederate General, Robert E. Lee.

Mr. Gaye stands full six feet in height, weighs one hundred and seventy pounds, is an adept in the manly art as well as in swimming, riding and shooting.

He has blue-gray eyes, dark hair, medium complexion, and photographs remarkably well.

RAYMOND WELLS, LEADS, GRIFFITH FINE ARTS

RAYMOND WELLS is one of the most recent converts from the legitimate stage. His first appearance in pictures was with D. W. Griffith's company in March, 1915, where he is playing heavy leads. Mr. Wells is a native of Illinois, and was born in 1880. He attended Southern State Normal University, Carbondale, Ill.

For fourteen years he was on the legitimate stage playing in stock and numerous road companies. Perhaps his first big part was that of Brewster, the lawyer in "The Third Degree." With Tyrone Power he played the part of Cassius in "Julius Caesar." In "The Poor Little Rich Girl" he appeared in the part of the doctor. He had a long engagement at the Hudson theatre with Viola Dana, and played with the Baker company at Portland, Ore., Goodrich at Manhattan theatre, Poli at Waterbury, Conn., Bainbridge and Wright Huntington at Minneapolis. He was with each of these companies one year as leading or second man.

His first production for Mr. Griffith was with Wallace Reid in "Old Heidelberg," where he played the heavy. He appeared as the detective in "The Sable Lorcha," which features Tully Marshall.

His most recent work was the part of the fop with John Emerson in "The Scarlet Band." All of these subjects are for the Triangle program. Mr. Wells is well qualified for work in pictures. He is six feet in height, weighs one hundred and eighty-six pounds, and has dark hair and complexion, with gray eyes.

He has a reputation as a wrestler, boxer and fencer. He also rides and shoots.

SEENA OWEN, LEADS, FINE ARTS

SEENA OWEN (Signe Auen), leading woman in Fine Arts Films, released on the Triangle program, was born at Spokane, Wash., 1896. There she attended school, and later studied at Copenhagen.

Her first engagement as an actress was with Fred J. Butler at San Francsco, where she played for four weeks. In September, 1914, she went to Los Angeles and became a member of the Kalem company, under the direction of Marshall Neilan. In August, 1915, sbe went to the Griffith studio, where she has remained.

In the few months over a year Miss Owen has advanced from "extra" ranks to that of leading woman and has played a number of very important parts. She appeared in "The Fox Woman," the five reel Mutual Masterpicture, appearing in the name part, and was leading woman in "The Yankee from the West," also released on the same program.

She played important parts in a number of two reel Majestic releases. In the first Fine Arts Triangle release, "The Lamb," Miss Owen played opposite Douglas Fairbanks. In "Penitentes" she played the leading feminine part opposite Orrin Johnson.

Miss Owen has had great difficulty in becoming well known because of her peculiar name, and for this reason has changed it so that the speiling indicates the pronunciation—Seena Owen. This actress is a decided blonde, has blue eyes, and is almost five feet and a half tall. She is very fond of athletics, can ride, swim, shoot, play golf and tennis, and dances well. Her hobby is music and pets, and at the studio her fondness for children is proverbial.

OLGA GREY, LEADS, GRIFFITH FINE ARTS

OLGA GREY, playing leads witb the Fine Arts Films Company, was born in Hungary in 1896. She is a member of an old family, dating back to the Hun invasion of Europe.

She received her education in New York City, and prior to entering motion pictures was a concert pianist.

Miss Grey joined the D. W. Griffith forces in Los Angeles in 1914. A few of the releases in which she appeared, and in which she was featured, that will best be remembered, are: "A Woman of Courage," "A Breatb of Summer," "Tbe Better Man," "A Bold Impersonation," all one and two reel Reliance-Majestic releases on the Mutual program.

In "The Absentee," a five reel Mutual Masterpicture featuring Robert Edeson, she played the part of Justice; and in "Tbe Failure," another five reel Mutual Masterpicture, in wbich John Emerson was featured, she played the part of Rose Vaudet, the actress in the story. Although she was cast to play opposite Douglas Fairbanks in "Double Trouble," she was forced to give up the role on account of illness.

Miss Grey is now playing the part of Mary Magdalene in D. W. Griffith's production of "The Mother and the Law," and has the distinction of being the first woman to portray the character of Mary Magdalene on the "Silent Stage."

She is very fond of all forms of athletics, and is a devotee of riding, fencing, swimming and shooting.

Although a young woman, Miss Grey's success hitherto gives promises of a roseate future for her.

MARGUERITE MARSH, GRIFFITH FINE ARTS

MARGUERITE MARSH, playing in ingenue leads of the Fine Arts Films on the Triangle program, was born at Lawrence, Kansas, in 1892. She came to California with her parents, and received her education in San Francisco and Los Angeles. She first appeared on the legitimate stage for two seasons with Raymond Hitchcock in the New York production of "The Mascot" and "The Man Who Owns Broadway." Then she came to Los Angeles in stock at the Morosco theatre for one season.

In 1911 she became a member of the Biograph staff under the direction of D. W. Griffith. When this company returned to the Eastern studio, she went with G. M. Anderson, where she played until 1912. She then returned to New York, where she played with Fred Mace for the Majestic company for one season, and returned to the Reliance, appearing in "Runaway June." At the close of that engagement she was sent to the Western studio of the Reliance. Some of the productions in which she played leading parts were "The Americano," produced by John Emerson; "Runaway June," in which she played as the heavy lead opposite Norma Phillips, and the lead in "The Way of a Mother," a two-reel subject. Miss Marsh was very popular in the work she did opposite Fred Mace in the Majestic subjects of 1912. Her most recent work was as Viva in "Tricotrin," the leading part opposite Jack Conway, a Fine Arts Film on the Triangle program.

Miss Marsh is but five feet two inches in height, weighs one hundred and twenty pounds, has auburn hair, dark blue eyes and a fair complexion. Miss Marsh's hobby is music and painting.

JACK CONWAY, DIRECTOR, GRIFFITH FINE ARTS

TO Jack Conway was intrusted the important task of directing the production of the first Orrin Johnson Fine Arts Films subject for the Triangle program, "The Penitents."

He recently brought to a completion the second Orrin Johnson subject, "The Price of Power."

Mr. Conway is a native of Graceville, Minnesota, of Irish parentage, twenty-eight years old, six feet in height, has light brown hair, weighs one hundred and sixty-two pounds, and is one of the best athletes of the Fine Arts Films producing staff.

For a number of years Mr. Conway was a member of leading stock companies, playing important parts in "Mrs. Tempest's Telegram," "Merely Mary Ann," and others. During his theatrical career he produced and financed the socialistic "The Land Slide," which was highly successful.

He has traveled extensively, played with some of the best people the theatrical profession has known, and by study and reading has become versed in matters pertaining to stagecraft.

Four years ago Mr. Conway played his first part in motion pictures for the 101 Bison Brand. He had a long engagement with the Selig company, was featured in Nestor comedies by the Universal, played leads in the first several Bosworth subjects, including that of Billy in "The Valley of the Moon," and the lead part in "Smoke Bellew."

He has been affiliated with the Griffith organization for the past year, and has been seen in many successful photoplays, and directed a number of the Majestic two and three reel subjects.

KATE TONCRAY, LEADS, GRIFFITH FINE ARTS

KATE TONCRAY, appearing in character leads of the Triangle program, is known at the studio as "mother" of them all, having appeared in the part of mother in many of the Griffith stars.

Miss Toncray was born at St. Louis, Mo., in 1878, and after a thorough course in the public schools at St. Louis, secured her first engagement on the dramatic stage. For fourteen years she played with well-known companies, appearing with Signor Tomasso Salvini under the management of Charles Frohman; with William Brady two seasons, and Brady and Grismer one season. Her stock experience includes engagements with Lelig's stock at Denver, Meffiet of Louisville, and her last engagement on the speaking stage was with Klaw and Erlanger five years ago.

At that time she was induced to leave the stage by D. W. Griffith and played under his direction for Biograph, in which company she remained until early in 1915. Her first picture was "Sands of Dee," which was also the first picture in which Mae Marsh appeared. In this Miss Toncray appeared in the part of the mother of Bobbie Harron.

In Triangle program releases she appears in the part of mother in "The Lamb," the first Griffith photoplay released, as the mother of the character played by Douglas Fairbanks; in "Old Heidelberg," the fourth Griffith Triangle release, she appears as the mother of the character assumed by Dorothy Gish.

Miss Toncray now enjoys the pleasures of bungalow life in California where she resides with her parents.

ELMER CLIFTON, JUVENILE LEADS, GRIFFITH FINE ARTS

ELMER CLIFTON, juvenile leading man of the Griffith players stock company, is a Canadian, twenty-five years of age; five feet ten inches, weighs one hundred and sixty-five pounds, and has light hair and complexion, with steel gray eyes. He has been a professional basket-ball and hand-ball player, and can swim, ride and shoot with remarkable skill.

Following an education in the grammar schools of Chicago, Mr. Clifton secured an engagement with a New York stock company, and played on the legitimate stage for seven years. About two years ago he went to Los Angeles where he became interested in pictures and played his first big part in the name role of the Bosworth production of "John Barleycorn." This was of four reels, and throughout the subject he gave such a splendid performance that the author, Jack London, wrote him a glowing letter of congratulation.

In 1914 Mr. Clifton became affiliated with the Griffith players, at which time Mr. Griffith first saw his performance in the film version of the London story, and has been there since. His first part of consequence was that of Philip Stoneman, the Northern hero in Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation." Mr. Clifton played Marrishida, the hunchback, in "The Fox Woman," opposite Seene Owen and Teddy Sampson, and the leading part, Clyde, in "The Sable Lorcha." His recent work was the part of a poet lover in "The Lily and the Rose," the first release from the Griffith studio on the new Triangle program.

THOMAS JEFFERSON, LEADS, GRIFFITH FINE ARTS

THOMAS JEFFERSON, known throughout the world for his characterization of the name part in the play "Rip Van Winkle," made famous by himself, his father, and his grandfather, who for seventy-nine years appeared in this role, is now leading character man for Triangle productions made at the Griffith studio.

He was born in New York, in 1855, and was educated at St. Cyril, France. Mr. Jefferson took up the stage as his career as understudy for his father. He remained in this for seventeen years, and every season played the part of "Rip."

The first picture experience of Mr. Jefferson was with the Biograph company under D. W. Griffith in 1913 where he played with Henry Walthall and others in "Classmates," and other subjects with Lionel Barrymore, Marshall Neiland, Blanche Sweet, and others who made the name Biograph famous.

In many K. and E. releases Mr. Jefferson appeared in leading character parts. In August of 1914 he again became affiliated with Mr. Griffith, and has appeared in a number of character sketches, including "The Old Shoemaker," "The Fencing Master," "Ghosts," with Henry Walthall; "Up from the Depths," with Courtenay Foote, and recently in the Triangle release "The Sable Lorcha," with Tully Marshall.

Mr. Jefferson is but five feet eight inches in height, weighs but one hundred and twenty-seven pounds. He has gray hair and steel blue eyes, with a ruddy complexion. He is an excellent fencer and plays golf well.

LUCILLE YOUNGE, LEADS, GRIFFITH FINE ARTS

LUCILLE YOUNGE, leading woman of the Griffith stock company, was born at Lyon, France, 1892. When a child she came to America with her parents and received an excellent education at St. Mary's Convent, Monroe, Michigan. After completing a course at the Detroit Conservatory of Music, she secured an engagement with the Vaughn Glazier stock company, where she played the entire season.

Early in 1911 Miss Younge entered motion pictures with the Imp stock company, New York. Later she made a trip abroad with her mother, visiting Europe and Egypt, and collecting a valuable wardrobe of Oriental costumes, perhaps one of the most elaborate owned by any photoplayer.

In 1914 Miss Younge joined the Griffith stock company, and has since appeared in leading parts. This list includes "The Man," "Portrait of Anita," "The Woman from Warrens," "The Mystic Jewel," all two reel Majestics. In the latter she was fetaured, the play having been especially written for her.

Her principal part in her Imp engagement was that of Hester Prynne, the lead in "The Scarlet Letter." Her most recent work was with John Emerson in the five reel subject "The Scarlet Band," as Carolis in "Tricotrin" for the Triangle program.

Miss Younge is decidedly brunette, with beautiful black hair, brown almond-shaped eyes and olive complexion. She plays golf, tennis, is fond of motoring, rides, and is an excellent marksman. She is also a very clever dancer. Her height is five feet two inches, and she weighs one hundred and twenty-one pounds.

WILLIAM E. FILDEW, CAMERAMAN, FINE ARTS

WILLIAM E. FILDEW, photographer for the Fine Arts Films Company, producing features for the Triangle program, is a professional of more than twelve years' experience. During this time Mr. Fildew devoted practically all of his time to either professional photography or theatrical stage productions.

When the motion pictures became a recognized industry, he turned his attention from the stage to the portrait studio. That Mr. Fildew has been successful in this field is most emphatically brought out by his highly successful photoplays. Included in this list are some of the best known feature productions, namely, "The Lamb" and "Double Trouble," featuring Douglas Fairbanks; "Enoch Arden," with Lillian Gish as star; "Martyrs of the Alamo," and John Emerson in "The Failure," all of which were made under the direction of William Christy Cabanne for Fine Arts brand release on the Triangle program.

Mr. Fildew also photographed "The Absentee," in which Robert Edeson was starred, and "The Lost House," featuring Lillian Gish and Wallace Reid, both of which were released as Mutual Masterpictures.

Mr. Fildew sees great possibilities in the motion picture field for the cameraman who studies, and thus is able to benefit the industry. He is very careful and painstaking, and has won praise from directors, players and exhibitors for his excellent work.

HUGH C. McCLUNG, CAMERAMAN, FINE ARTS

HUGH C. McCLUNG, cameraman at the Fine Arts Films studio, is a pleasing example of the square peg in the square hole. He tried several occupations before he went into the moving picture business, but feels certain that he has now found his real vocation.

He knows his branch of the work from the ground up, and it is his favorite contention that a cameraman is a very much better cameraman if he has been through the dark room. What he preaches he has practiced, and he comes very near being an authority on chemistry and light values.

This was proven on a trip through the tropics a few years ago when Mr. McClung went as cameraman with the Melies company on a swing around the South Seas for educational material. He exposed 87,000 feet of film, and lost less than two hundred feet, and this under all sorts of adverse conditions.

Mr. McClung is a native of Texas, his pleasant voice and deliberate speech betraying his Southern origin.

When only a lad he followed the sea, and is a competent navigator. He has visited many foreign shores, and has had his share of odd experiences. These are soon to be published as a book of adventures for boys.

One of McClung's recent achievements was the directing, as well as the photographing, of a picture known as "The Wonderful Schools of Los Angeles." This picture of seven reels is not only a faithful record of the work being done by these very advanced schools, but is full of humor and sympathetic insight.

WALTER LUNDIN, CAMERAMAN, FINE ARTS

WALTER LUNDIN, cameraman for the Fine Arts Films Company, has been engaged in the motion picture work since 1907, when he accepted a position at the Essanay studio at the age of fifteen. He remained in this position for three and a half years as a developer. He then went to the American company, where he remained a year and a half in the laboratories. For two and a half years he served with the St. Louis Motion Picture Company as cameraman, and six months ago he accepted a position with the Majestic and Reliance companies. When the Fine Arts Films Company was organized, he was retained by William Bitzer, who is in charge of the photographic department.

Mr. Lundin is not only an expert at the camera himself, but he has made a deep study of photography in all its branches, and is an experimenter in untried fields.

This interest in his profession has given him an excellent grasp of all its details, and has stood him in good stead in handling the difficult problems which are constantly arising at a studio.

He has a number of achievements in the line of photography, under unusual difficulty of light and position, to his credit.

Though comparatively young in years, Mr. Lundin has had almost as much experience as veterans in the motion picture business. His many years with various companies, during which time he held practically every position in the photographic and developing departments, have given him a keen insight into every angle of camera work. Fine Arts pictures are notable for their excellent photography, and the pictures upon which Mr. Lundin worked are no exception to the rule.

MARGIE WILSON, LEADS, FINE ARTS

MARGIE WILSON, leading woman appearing in Fine Arts Films of the Triangle program, was born in Nashville, Tenn, 1896. When sixteen years of age she headed her own stock company in the Olympic theatre, Cincinnati. Miss Wilson's first theatrical engagement was at fourteen, with the John Lawrence stock company, following a course in a school for voice and expression.

She appeared with Edna Mason in "The World of Gossips," and later as Shirley Morsman in "The Lion and the Mouse." Following a season at the Olympic, Miss Wilson went to Paintville, Kentucky, where she attended Sandyville Seminary for two years. Returning to Cincinnati she was featured in stock company productions, the company being known as the Margie Wilson stock. She was with Sydney Toler stock company for one year. With her sister she played the principal vaudeville circuits in a musical act, the team being known as the Wilson Twins. This was followed by a season with the Metropolitan players at Seattle. In 1915 she came to California, joining the Reliance Majestic studio. Her first appearance was in "The Outcast," with Mae Marsh and Robert Harron, and her first lead in pictures was in "The Little Matchmaker." Later she played leads in "The Fatal Hour," "The Map of It," the part of Elizabeth opposite Douglas Fairbanks in "The Lamb," and was also Mr. Fairbanks' leading woman in "Double Trouble." Miss Wilson has curly brown hair, brown eyes, a bewitching dimple, and speaks with a decided southern accent. She is of medium height, slender, and is fond of tennis, riding and other athletics.

ALFRED PAGET, LEADS, FINE ARTS

ALFRED PAGET, of the Fine Arts Films studio, is an Englishman. At seventeen he ran away from home to join the British army. To be admitted into the army ranks he told a falsehood as to his age. He served twelve months in the Boer War. Later he went to Canada and served with the Canadian Northwestern Mounted Police. As such he met with a number of novel experiences.

Eight years ago he went to Los Angeles, where he secured a position with Hobart Bosworth, then producer of the Belasco stock company, for a mob scene. The following morning Mr. Paget was given a speaking part by his producer.

He remained with this stock company for two years and then went to New York, where he was engaged to appear in support of Julia Marlowe in "The Goddess of Reason."

In the summer following he applied to D. W. Griffith, who was at that time director-in-chief of the Biograph producing forces, and was cast for a number of Indian roles during the summer. The following season he appeared with Guy Bates Post in "The Bridge," and then returned to Biograph, where he remained for five years.

Early this year he was engaged to appear in Reliance and Majestic pictures supervised by D. W. Griffith, and now is a member of the Fine Arts Films stock company.

Mr. Paget is an expert horseman, a student of Shakespeare, and well liked by his present associates.

He has made a practice of studying, not only every part given to him, but of studying every ramification of that part, and anything which might apply to it, or aid him in a sincere interpretation of it.

Through reading, experience and an active outdoor life, he has achieved a familiarity with dramatic literature and its relation to human life, which has been of the greatest assistance. His associations on the silent stage, and his experience before the camera combine to fit him for the highest class of work. That he is thus fitted he has demonstrated many times, to the entire satisfaction of his directors and his public, all of whom have demonstrated their confidence in him over and over again.

PAUL GILMORE, LEADS

PAUL GILMORE is another dramatic stage star to take up a motion picture career. Last fall he made his third picture in which he was co-star with Orrin Johnson in "The Penitentes" made at the D. W. Griffith Fine Arts Films studio.

Mr. Gilmore has played successfully everything from musical comedy to tragedy. He was first noticed by Mr. Frohman who saw in him a star and engaged him to play the leading parts in "The Wife," "Americans Abroad," and others; after which Mr. Gilmore appeared in "The Mummy and the Humming Bird" for two years; then in "The Tyranny of Tears," "Captain Debonnaire," a costume play; "At Yale," a college play with music; "Boys of Company B," also a musical play; and after that the "Call of the North" and "The Wolf," Western plays; then Clyde Fitch's comedy "The Bachelor," "The Havoc," and "Captain Alvarez."

You who have never seen Mr. Gilmore may know he must be capable or he could not have toured so successfully for years and carried with him as he has such companies of artists and such elaborate productions. Wherever Mr. Gilmore's name appears, remember you have been introduced to him, and may feel assured that whatever he may do will be well worth your attention.

So much for Mr. Gilmore as a dramatic star. As a picture star he has only just started, having appeared only in "The Shrine of Happiness," "The Idol of Paris," D. W. Griffith's Triangle production of "The Penitentes," "Rosemary," a Quality picture, and "The Other Girl," produced by Raver Film Corporation.

CHARLES K. FRENCH, FEATURE CHARACTERS WITH THOMAS H. INCE

CHARLES K. FRENCH, of the Ince Triangle players, was the first director for the New York Motion Picture Corporation, and took the second motion picture company to the West Coast in 1910, locating a studio at the place where the present mammoth Keystone Film Company's plant now stands.

Mr. French did his first motion picture work seven years ago for the Biograph Company, following a stage career, where he served in all branches of the theatrical profession, including banjoist and comedian. For seventeen years he played in and directed productions for Litt and Dingwald, A. W. Brady, Frank McKee, Klaw and Erlanger and Schuberts.

Mr. French's first subject for Kessel and Baumann was known as the Bison brand. Eighteen copies were sold of the first, twenty-five of the second, and from that the number of prints gradually increased each week until at the end of fifteen months they were selling sixty-five prints from each subject. Mr. French returned to the legitimate stage and afterwards became assistant manager and director of the Pathé Los Angeles studio. He formed the company of Foreman and French which made subjects for Pathé. Late in 1914 he organized the Navajo Company and produced ten two-reel subjects for the Kriterion. In June Mr. French returned to the NYMP Company and has been playing in feature productions. He appeared in "The Iron Strain," "The Coward" and in "The Disciple" he played the Sheriff.

He is a member of the Motion Picture Directors' Association.

THOMAS H. INCE, DIRECTOR-GENERAL KAY-BEE TRIANGLE STUDIOS

THOMAS H. INCE, director-general of the New York Motion Picture Corporation, was born in Newport, R. I., in 1882. From his father, John E. Ince, a noted comedian of the early seventies, he inherited his histrionic talents, and through paternal influence associated himself with the profession at the age of thirteen in the capaciy of office boy to Daniel Frohman.

A few years later he commenced his career on the stage with a song and dance in "Poets and Puppets," a satire on "Lady Windemere's Fan." Henry Miller and May Irwin were in the same company.

This appearance was followed by a small part under James A. Herne's wing in "Shore Acres," after which Frohman again engaged him—but this time as a light opera comedian.

An important role with Edwin Arden in "The Ninety and Nine" constituted his next medium of appearane before the footlights. Later, William H. Thompson, the veteran, elevated him to a star in "For Love's Sweet Sake," a vaudeville headliner which remained on the boards for three years.

Throughout the remainder of his career on the stage—which lasted until 1909—Mr. Ince was a vaudevillian. In 1909, Adam Kessel and Charles O. Baumann, heads of the then-growing New York Motion Picture Corporation, decided that they needed a chief to take charge of their producing plant in California. So they selected Thomas H. Ince.

IMMEDIATELY he arrived in California to take up his new duties, Mr. Ince began the organization of a system—a system to which he has adhered strictly in his production of photoplays. As time progressed he startled the country by predicting that feature films would become popular. He made "The Battle of Gettysburg," and its amazing success bore out his statement.

Then followed other massive multiple reelers, among which have been "The Wrath of the Gods," "The Typhoon," "The Bargain," "The Italian," "The Devil," "On the Night Stage," "The Cup of Life," "The Reward," "The Toast of Death," "The Man from Oregon," and "The Darkening Trail."

Perhaps the biggest thing Mr. Ince had ever done up to the premier of the Triangle productions was "The Sign of the Rose," an amplified version of George Beban's dramatic masterpiece in ten reels of pictures and one act of the spoken drama.

The combination had its premiere at Clune's Auditorium in Los Angeles on April 12, 1915, and excited much comment in amusement circles by reason of its originality.

THROUGH the affiliation of Messrs. Kessel and Baumann, the executives of the New York Motion Picture Corporation, with the Triangle Film Corporation, Mr. Ince, in July, 1915, became one of the triumvirate upon whose shoulders now rests the responsibility of turning out two dollar picture plays.

His first production for this program was entitled "The Iron Strain," starring Dustin Farnum, and created a favorable impression throughout the country. His next contribution was "The Coward," starring Frank Keenan.

This too, according to public opinion, met with the demands made of the Triangle. "The Disciple," with William S. Hart as its star, followed, this production differing totally from the first two offerings, simply further established Mr. Ince's right to be regarded as one of the world's three most notable producers.

Other offerings bearing the Ince ingenuity to date have included "Matrimony," starring Julia Dean; "The Golden Claw," starring Bessie Barriscale, and "D'Artagnan," starring Orrin Johnson.

Mr. Ince's dynamic energy has earned for him the appellation of "The white hope of the movies." If he sees in a scenario the possibility of a feature, he revises it himself and produces therefrom a multiple reel story. His day is one of almost endless activity. He is at the studios in the Santa Monica mountains by 8:30. He immediately goes into consultation with his directors, each of whom usually has several problems to present. Mr. Ince solves them. After attending to the volume of correspondence and other business, he personally supervises every production then in the making. Even the little two-reeler does not escape his notice. He coaches the actors, scrutinizes the settings and gives advice even to his camera men.

THE greater part of the afternoon Mr. Ince usually spends in the cutting and projecting rooms. His cutters, though experts, are not averse to asking suggestions from their chief, and in this way Mr. Ince is accounted responsible for every picture released by the company. That is the reason why the vast majority of criticisms of the New York Motion Picture Corporation's productions have been favorable. Mr. Ince has the faculty of detecting on the screen seemingly insignificant flaws that evade the critical eye of the directors.

In the evening Mr. Ince can be found at home, poring over dozens of scenarios with his staff of authors. Each script is submitted to the director-general in the rough. Then, providing it has been given his approval, it is placed into form for production. Once again, then, it must pass the test administered by Mr. Ince, before it is turned over to a subordinate director.

Mr. Ince's right-hand man in the conduct of the company's business is Eugene H. Allen. Mr. Allen is a former Philadelphia newspaperman who became affiliated with the New York Motion Picture Corporation about five years ago.

His first work was done as an actor, but his executive ability and keen business acumen soon evidenced themselves and he was made "charge d'affaires" at the plant.

He rarely meddles with the production of a picture, though in the absence of Mr. Ince, his word is always sought when difficulty is encountered. Mr. Allen's official title is business manager, yet his work embraces more duties than the title implies.

RAYMOND B. WEST, DIRECTOR, NEW YORK MOTION

RAYMOND B. WEST, who, by reason of his comparative youth, has acquired the title of Inceville's "boy director," first saw the light of day in Chicago in February, 1886. He was younger than most of his classmates when he first went to school, and rapidly attracted the attention of his instructors.

A course in the grammar schools of Chicago soon fitted him to begin the work of an advanced student, and he registered in De La Salle Institute.

Here, under the tutelage of the Christian Brothers, he prospered in his studies and as he grew up his parents looked forward to seeing him a lawyer.

A removal to Grand Rapids, Mich., found West a student at the high school in that city, and it was at that time that he began a career that later served to make him recognized as the peer of the schoolboy athletes.

He won numerous championships both on the track and field, and was the envy of his fellows.

In 1901, West went with his mother to Los Angeles, Cal., and for two years labored industriously at sketching, designing and painting, "for fun."

He then went to Detroit, where he became private secretary to a well-known corporation lawyer, and later became associated with two large gas companies.

Early in 1909, young West again went to Los Angeles and this gave him his start in the motion picture field. He began in the property room of the Ince studios and rapidly advanced himself, moving successively from property man to assistant cameraman, cameraman, assistant director and director.

Since West was made director by Mr. Ince he has amazed the motion picture world by his almost unbelievable accomplishments with the camera—for while he is director in title, he personally superintends the adjustment and operation of each scene. They call him the "jack of all trades" because he is so versatile in his cleverness.

Among the principal productions West has been chiefly responsible for since his affiliation with Producer Ince are: "The Cup of Life," "Rumpelstiltskin" and "The Mating."

The first-named starred Bessie Barriscale. The second was a pretentious fairy-story replete with gorgeous scenic effects, while the third—another Bessie Barriscale vehicle—is well known as the popular co-educational college story. West is now collaborating with his chief Ince in the production of a massive spectacle that is expected to equal, if not surpass, "The Birth of a Nation." It will measure some twelve or thirteen reels.

DAL CLAWSON, CAMERMAN WITH THOMAS H. INCE

DAL CLAWSON is one of probably not more than half a dozen motion picture photographers who have been responsible for lifting cinematography from a basis of applied mechanics to a plane of artistic expression. In reviewing his work for the past five years three features stand out prominently: novel manipulation of light and shadows, artistic composition in relation to objects and colors, and a deft employment of photographic illusion—the type of illusion which does not distract attention from the drama and upon which only a technician can lay his finger. Samples of his most recent workmanship are seen in "Hypocrites," in which many of the sylvan scenes show a delicacy of detail in lighting and composition seen only in French pastels.

In this picture he set a record by running one part of the film through the camera twenty-four times, this being the much-discussed "Mirror of Truth" scene.

Dal Clawson was recently engaged by Thomas H. Ince for camera work, and will soon complete his second Kay-Bee Triangle subject. His art work put the biggest producers in the country on his trail, and in securing him Mr. Ince had to outbid practically the entire field. From among the numerous dramatic subjects Mr. Clawson has photographed many will be long remembered—such subjects as "The Rosary," "Shadows of Life," "Memories," "The Merchant of Venice," "His Brand," "Hypocrites," "Sunshine Molly," "It's No Laughing Matter" and likewise the four Elsie Janis pictures, being highwater marks in moving picture history.

He was long associated with the Smalleys, running the camera for some of the biggest productions of the brilliant Lois Weber (Mrs. Smalley), including the Anna Pavlowa ten-reel subject. Paramount patrons have acclaimed his work in "Pretty Mrs. Smith" with Fritzi Scheff, "Captain Courtesy" with Dustin Farnum, "The Yankee Girl" with Blanche Ring, and many others.

Dal Clawson has made a careful study of his profession, and has originated a number of effects possible only to one who understands motion picture photography from top to bottom.

He is known as a man who considers no task or risk too great in order to arrive at an artistic effect, or to get the most possible out of any scene or system of lighting. This is shown especially in the dissolve and double exposure work in the pictures which have been filmed by his camera, and he has won many commendations from his director and others who have noted his lighting.

DIRECTOR REGINALD BARKER, INCE-TRIANGLE, EXPONENT OF THE NATURAL SCHOOL OF ACTING

TO Reginald Barker, director working in collaboration with Thomas H. Ince, fell a distinct honor in the arrangement of the Triangle program, in that the first three Ince releases on this were made by Mr. Barker under the supervision of Mr. Ince.

The first was "The Iron Strain," featuring Dustin Farnum and Enid Markey. The second, "The Coward," starring Frank Keenan. The third "The Golden Claw," in which Bessie Barriscale was starred. Mr. Barker was born in Winnipeg, Canada, of Scottish parents in 1886, and began his career on the legitimate stage at the age of eight years. When sixteen years old he had written and produced his own play.

Mr. Barker decided that he was not to be a leading man, or a great star, and this lack of conceit caused him to seek the next best—the field of producing. When nineteen he came to the conclusion that to affiliate himself with the stages best producers would aid him in climbing the ladder of success more quickly, and he secured an engagement as stage manager for Henry Miller in the original production of "The Light Eternal." Mr. Barker remained with Mr. Miller for two years.

Next he was with Robert Hilliard in the same capacity in the production of "A Fool There Was," with Walker Whiteside in "The Melting Pot," and with Olga Nethersole at the New theatre in the production of "Mary Magdeline." The two years that followed he was with Leibler & Co. and then had a successful year as stage manager for Klaw and Erlanger.

When the motion picture industry loomed up big in the horizon early in 1913, Mr. Barker was exceptionally well trained to take up the work of filming photoplays, and Thomas H. Ince learning of his intention and his past record, induced the successful theatrical stage producer to enter the field.

Mr. Barker, so well qualified for the work, soon gained recognition as a director of note, and the result has been a long list of successes. The first picture he made was "True Irish Hearts," and the second "The Romance of Erin."

Then followed a number of two-reel subjects for the Mutual program, and eight months' work with a company of Japanese actors and actresses, many of whom could not speak a word of English when they first began playing under Mr. Barker. During the eight months "The Wrath of the Gods," and later "The Typhoon" were produced, the latter being released on the Paramount program.

INCLUDED in the list of photoplays made by Mr. Barker for the Broncho, Domino and Kay-Bee release on the Mutual program, the following list is practically complete: "A Woman's Wit," "Borrowed Gold," "The Buried Past," "The Open Door," "The Frame-Up," "The Pitfall," "The New England Idyll," "Divorce," "The Courtship of O'San," "The Geisha," "The Tragedy of the Orient," "The Relic of Old Japan," "The Curse of Caste," "The Chinatown Mystery," and "Winning Back."

The next big feature completed by Mr. Barker was "The Bargain," the first William S. Hart subject in which Clara Williams appeared in the leading feminine part. Later Mr. Barker, with William S. Hart, Robert Edison and Rhea Mitchell, and under the supervision of Thomas H. Ince, took up the making of "On the Night Stage." Upon its release as a Mutual masterpiece caused exhibitors and exchange men to again fully see the folly of their statements regarding Westerns. George Beban, specially engaged by Mr. Ince, was the star of the next production. This Mr. Barker directed, and the result was "The Italian," released through the Paramount.

"The Devil," featuring Bessie Barriscale and Edward Connelly was next produced. Then came "The Reward," with Miss Barriscale, and following this was that remarkable political subject, "The Man from Oregon," starring Clara Williams and Howard Hickman. The three last were released as Mutual Masterpictures.

Since that time Mr. Barker has been devoting all his time to the making of Ince-Triangle subjects with such glowing success as is recorded in the reviews of these subjects by all news and trade papers.

WILLIAM S. HART, LEADS, NEW YORK MOTION

PARADOXICALLY enough, William S. Hart, of the Ince-Triangle players, was not born in the West at all. By birth, he is, as New Yorkers say, "up State folk," for he was born in Newburgh, New York, of English parentage. He is, however, of the West, for while he was still a baby his family settled in North Dakota. There he grew strong and tall like the Indians, among whom he lived, until, as a lad of 15, he was of the West, Western.

Mr. Hart's father was a college bred man and the parent in his wisdom saw that the boy made the most of his educational opportunities. Surrounded by soldiers at a military post Mr. Hart decided to become an officer in the army and at fifteen left for New York to prepare for West Point. Mr. Hart passed a perfect physical examination for West Point and secured marks sufficient to entitle him to enter the military academy, but entry was finally denied him on the ground that his father was an Englishman and not naturalized at that time.

Fascinated by the productions which he witnessed in New York, Mr. Hart decided to become an actor. He sold several trophies won in athletic contests and, New York having offered no opening, took the boat for London. But his heart still longed for the West and he returned to America. In New York he obtained a place with a German tragedian, Daniel B. Bandmann, who played repertoire. This proved to be a valuable experience and Mr. Hart rapidly advanced. In a few weeks he was "doubling" as the king and the ghost in "Hamlet" and playing leads.

At twenty-four young Hart was playing big parts with Madam Modjeska on Broadway. Then he starred in "The Man with the Iron Mask" under the management of Frank Deats and later supported Julia Arthur, playing such parts as Pygmalion, Ingomar, Orlando and Romeo.

Hart, figuratively, came into the country of his boyhood in "The Squaw Man," in which he originated the part of "Cash Hawkins." This was followed by his appearance as star in "The Barrier" and "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine."

Thomas H. Ince, who had been casting about for a strong Western character actor, picked Hart and, attracted by the lure of the real West, the star acceded to persuasion and signed a contract. This was in 1914. When Hart's first production, "The Bargain," appeared, it marked an epoch in Western pictures, which, up to that time, had been a drug on the market. Ince and Hart met that demand. There followed "On the Night Stage" and "The Darkening Trail."

CHARLES GIBLYN, DIRECTOR, NEW YORK MOTION

CHARLES GIBLYN, director with Thomas H. Ince, making Kay-Bee-Triangle picture plays, in point of experience is one of the oldest motion picture directors on the West Coast, and has been engaged in this work longer than any of his associates at this studio. Eight years ago Mr. Giblyn took up this work first, and he has continued with it ever since. Mr. Giblyn has now had twenty-five years' theatrical experience, and his work in pictures follows a career on the legitimate stage, where he was actor and producer with prominent theatrical managers.

Mr. Giblyn was affiliated with the New York Motion Picture Corporation in its infancy, and made three of the early-day features, the titles of which were: "The Voice at the Phone," "The Boomerang" and "The Witch of Salem." For two years he was with the Universal company, and among his best-known pictures are "The Fondling of Father Time," "As We Journey Through Life," "When It's One of Your Own," "The Faith of Her Fathers," adapted from the Bruno Lessing story, and "The Francois Villon" series, adapted from the Bronson Howard articles which appeared simultaneously in the Century Magazine.

Mr. Giblyn is highly regarded in the profession, and besides being a prime mover in the formation of the Motion Picture Directors' Association of America, he is a member of several clubs where his natural gift of oratory makes him popular as an after dinner speaker.

Mr. Giblyn, one of Mr. Ince's very able lieutenants, is now associated with his chief in the production of photoplays which appear on Triangle screens.

He is a seasoned and accomplished director, and fitted by his long experience to turn out productions maintaining the high standards set in Kay-Bee offerings.

Mr. Giblyn is a native of Watertown, N. Y., and so keen was his instinct for things theatrical that he ran away from college to go with a tent show.

That was in the long ago, of course, but it was the beginning of Mr. Giblyn's extended association with the theatre and the screen.

Giblyn's methods of production are characterized by an extraordinary attention to detail. This has earned him the reputation of being one of the most careful producers on the entire West Coast.

His varied experiences as an actor enable him to keep in unusually close touch with a picture in every particular, and to perfect the interpretations his actors give to their roles to the smallest detail.

HOWARD HICKMAN LEADS N. Y. MOTION

HOWARD HICKMAN, leading man in Ince Triangle productions, was born in 1880 at Columbia, Mo. When a youth he went into vaudeville and later became a stock actor at the old Morosco Grand Opera House, San Francisco. He was with the Melbourne McDowell-Sardou plays, and appeared in stock at the Bush Temple, Chicago. After several seasons in stock he went to London with the "Wiggs' Cabbage Patch" company. Returning to the United States he began an engagement at the Alcazar theatre, San Francisco, lasting three years. One season in company with Bessie Barriscale he appeared on Orpheum time in a vaudeville sketch, then took part in the Broadway success, "The Bird of Paradise." Mr. Hickman's first motion picture experience was as leading man for the Universal. Later he was with the Lasky company. For the past year he has been with Thomas H. Ince, acting and directing.

Mr. Hickman has played prominent screen parts. He appeared as the honest politician, the name role in "The Man from Oregon," and was leading man opposite Julia Dean in "Matrimony," a Triangle release. Recently he has been working in a big multiple reel Ince feature.

In this Mr. Hickman has the chief role.

Mr. Hickman is almost six feet in height, has black hair and brown eyes, and his favorite diversions are baseball and driving his Stutz 45. He is a good swimmer, and in a number of pictures he has proved his ability to ride. He is one of the most reliable men of the Ince organization.

BESSIE BARRISCALE, LEADS N. Y. MOTION

BESSIE BARRISCALE, Triangle, who stars under the supervision of Thomas H. Ince, is the daughter of an English actor. Her stage career began at five in "Shore Acres" with James A. Hearne, with whom she played many child parts from Little Eva to Fauntleroy. She was also associated with Russ Whytal and played a number of parts with him, but the engagement which Miss Barriscale says made her an "actress" was with Louis James, who was fond of her and who saw that she was well trained. He gave her lots of sage advice. With James she played some good parts and understudied Katherine Kidder in several leading Shakesperian roles.

Miss Barriscale has been associated with the best stock companies in the country. She played Lovey Mary in New York for a season and went with the company to London, playing the part for ten months.

At San Francisco and Los Angeles she became associated with two parts which she says have been her favorites—Juanita in "Rose of the Rancho," and The Girl in "Bird of Paradise," the play which Richard Walton Tully wrote for her.

Her last success was in "We Are Seven," by Eleanor Gates, played in New York. After a season in San Francisco she joined the Lasky company to play the lead in "Rose of the Rancho."

Her recent successes in "The Cup of Life," "The Painted Lady," "The Mating" and "The Last Act" give convincing proof of her versatility and show what a sterling little actress she really is in such parts.

GERTRUDE CLAIRE, CHARACTER, LEADS, N. Y. MOTION

ONE of the happiest little women devoting her life to motion pictures is Gertrude Claire, character leading woman at the New York Motion Picture Corporation, where she has a cozy dressing room surrounded by flowers which she personally cares for. Miss Claire was born in Boston, and made her first professional appearance at twenty with the Nellie Boyd repertoire company. Then she became manager of her own stock company for two seasons, the Central Theatre stock company, and was very popular through the Middle West. Later she played in stock in the best organizations.

In 1909 the Biograph company came to Los Angeles, and with this organization she played first for pictures. Among subjects made was "Ramona," with Mary Pickford and Henry Walthall, under the direction of D. W. Griffith. Later Miss Claire divided her time between dramatic stock and pictures with the Biograph and with the Imp, Thomas H. Ince, director. Miss Claire also worked under the Smalleys and Mr. Porter at the Rex studio, and Milton Fahrney at the Nestor at Mariners' Harbor, and at Hollywood. She took part in the pioneer days of film producing in California at the little shack on Gower street, which was the beginning of the Universal. In 1912 Miss Claire accepted a position with the NYMP Company, offered by Mr. Ince, and has continued here, while the little camp has grown from a few buildings into a great producing center. She is happy in her work here, and is grateful that the autumn of her life is devoted to motion pictures. Miss Claire is but two inches more than five feet in height, has gray hair and blue eyes.

IDA LEWIS, CHARACTER WOMAN, N. Y. MOTION

IDA LEWIS, now with the New York Motion Picture Corporation, where she is playing character parts, was for a number of years on the legitimate stage, where she appeared in support of some of the best known stars in their original production of their starring vehicle.

She is English, and following an education in a private school and one in music, she entered upon a career on the stage, and has since been in England, France, Germany and the United States. In America Miss Lewis has played in support of Edwin Booth, E. A. Sothern, Eleanor Robson, and appeared in the title role of "Jane Eyre." For five years she was a member of the Belasco stock company in Los Angeles, and her last engagement on the legitimate stage was with Margaret Illington in "Kindling."

Like many other leading actresses of the legitimate stage, Miss Lewis heeded the call of the camera. Her first engagement was with the American company at Santa Barbara. Later she joined the NYMP organization, and there appeared in "The Mating," "Whither Goest Thou," "The Devil," "Lottery Man," and "The Blue Knot." Miss Lewis has an excellent wardrobe and delights in playing grand dame parts. She is decidedly happy with life as a motion picture actress, in that it permits of home life impossible on the legitimate stage. She acknowledges being a good cook, and her many friends testify to her ability in a culinary way.

Her work has a finish which comes from talent mellowed by and blended with experience, and to watch her acting is an education.

RICHARD V. SPENCER, AUTHOR, N. Y. MOTION

GENERAL MANAGER THOMAS H. INCE, of the New York Motion Picture Corporation, bas surrounded himself with a corps of experienced writers who have proved their ability to evolve original stories that have a big heart-interest punch, and who as well are experts in the arrangement of scenes that give the stories the finished toucb when they are filmed for the screen.

Richard V. Spencer, now a special writer on tbe Ince scenario staff, is one of the early settlers of Inceville. He has been with the New York company since shortly after its organization and the arrival of the company at Santa Monica. He was first employed by this company in July, 1910, writing scripts for the old Bison brand, where he served as editor of scenarios, for the first manager, Fred J. Balshofer. Mr. Spencer continued in the same position when Thomas H. Ince became director general.

Mr. Spencer is a native of Grampian, Pa., born in 1885, and was educated in his native state. Shortly after completing his course in school he began writing motion picture plays, and now has to his credit more than six hundred scripts produced by the New York company, in additon to a large number sold prior to the time he became affiliated with Mr. Balshofer.

Originally Mr. Spencer was a free lance scenario writer, and his scripts were eagerly sought by many producers. Among his best subjects are "The Voice at the Telephone," "The Belle of Yorktown," "The Battle of Gettysburg," and "Custer's Last Fight," all of which were released on the Mutual Program. He is at present writing multiple reel subjects.

MONTE M. KATTERJOHN, AUTHOR, N.Y. MOTION

MONTE M. KATTERJOHN, fourth writer of the Ince New York Triangle staff, is a former newspaper man and magazine writer. He is a native of Boonville, Indiana, and prior to the time he took up scenario writing be had a number of articles accepted and published in Collier's, Cosmopolitan, Blue Book, Green Book, Photoplay Magazine, and other publications.

For a time Mr. Katterjohn published the magazine Motor Topics and was editor and publisher of the first photoplaywright magazine whicb bore the title The Photoplaywright.

In 1908 Mr. Katterjobn wrote his first photoplay, and since that time has written more than a hundred scenarios, produced by various companies. His first efforts were sold to the Vitagraph company, and in 1913 he became scenario editor of the Eastern studios of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company.

In August, 1915, he became a member of the Ince staff and is now writing in collaboration with Mr. Ince. Included in the long list of subjects written by Mr. Katterjohn, some of the most prominent are: "In tbe Hands of the Jury," Kalem; "The Battle of the Weak," Vitagraph; "The Toll of War," Bison-Universal; "The Primeval Test," Rex-Universal; "The Greed of Osman Bey," Edison; "The Heart of Valeska," Edison; "The Baited Trap," Imp-Universal; "A Man of Quality," Edison; "Prunella o' Pines," Griffith, an adaptation for the Fox Film Corporation of George Ohnet's "Countess Sarah"; and the original five reel story of "The Romany Rye" for William Farnum.

WALTER EDWARDS, DIRECTOR, N. Y. MOTION

WALTER EDWARDS, director, New York Motion Picture Corporation, was born in Michigan, and educated in the public schools and the printing office.

His first professional appearance was with Fred Ward at the old Windsor theatre, in August, 1886. Like most successful actors, Mr. Edwards began in repertoire. He was starred in the name part of "Virginius", also in leading stock companies for a period of twelve years.

When in "Sherlock Holmes," Mr. Edwards played the name part. He was cast in the orginal company, producing "The Lion and the Mouse," and played in this four years. For a while be was leading man with Olga Nethersole, and appeared in "The Deep Purple."

Mr. Edwards' motion picture career began almost three years ago when he was engaged by Mr. Ince. After six months' acting in pictures Mr. Edwards was appointed director, and in a number of subjects he played his own leads.

Pictures made by this director are: "The Flame in the Ashes," "The Bells of Austi," "The Gringo," "The Bride of Guadeloupe," "The Tale of the North West Mountain," "The Cross of Fire," "Satan McAllister's Heir," "The Gun Man," "The Last Act," "The Corner" and "Honor's Altar."

The director-actor has a very good screen appearance. He is five feet eleven inches in height, weighs almost two hundred pounds. When not busy at the studio he devotes his time to his hobby of collecting antiques. His collection now is a large one, and is frequently used in NYMP productions.

MACK SENNETT, DIRECTOR-GENERAL, KEYSTONE-TRIANGLE STUDIOS

THE generally accepted idea of a biographical sketch is a narration covering the whole span of life from the cradle to the grave, including early evidences of precocity, youthful pranks, college honors and the years of struggle before the hero of the tale crept up and clouted success under the jaw, established a bank account and started increasing his abdominal girth.

"In my attempt to play the part of Boswell to Mr. Mack Sennett I am very seriously handicapped," says Frederick Palmer. "Although I have been associated with Mr. Sennett, who is one of the units upon which the Triangle Film Corporation is founded and the most successful producer of comedy films in the world, for about a year, during this association there has never been an opportunity to obtain any information, reminiscently anecdotal, officially statistical, or otherwise, concerning his life before he started making films.

"This is the result, not of any reticence on his part, but of the fact that he is too busy with the present to disinter the past. The nearest that I ever came to getting a line on 'the early days' of Mr. Sennett's life was one night when I drove into Los Angeles from the Edendale studios with him and a party of friends.

"Included in the group was Harry Williams, a member of Keystone. In the course of conversation Mr. Williams mentioned his early struggles in New York before he received recognition. Mr. Sennett laughed heartily and said: 'Well, boys, I remember when I evaded my landlady, who was waiting my every entrance and exit from a cheap and modest room, and craftily secured several meals by way of the lunch counter route.'

"Mr. Sennett gravitated to the moving picture field. His first appearance was with Biograph—when the picture business was young. In the midst of this engagement Mr. Sennett organized the Keystone Film Company with the assistance of Ad. and Chas. Kessel and Chas. O. Baumann.

"The result was that 1912 saw the birth of the new organization whereby the Biograph lost Mack Sennett, Mabel Normand, Ford Sterling and Fred Mace. It was a bold experiment, as the Biograph was recognized as a substantially organized company and all concerned with the new Keystone were taking a gambling chance.

"A few scenes were made at Ft. Lee, N. J., after which the little group of iconoclasts treked across the continent to Los Angeles to take possession of the studio location at that time occupied by the 101 Bison.

"Mr. Sennett, surrounded by Miss Normand, Mace, Sterling, Alice Davenport, a cameraman, a property man and a few hastily gathered extra people, started making one and split reel comedies. They walked to locations, carrying their 'props' in bags and baskets.

"Dust covered and perspiring, the little group followed Mr. Sennett from the studio to city locations, back to the hills and dales of Edendale and Glendale and trouped, foot-sore and weary, to the studio long after the sun had descended. In this way the cornerstone of the Keystone was laid.

"Today the Keystone studio occupies all of two city blocks and many acres of land adjacently situated, and all of this is the result of the energy, optimism and pertinacity of Mr. Sennett.

"A garage equipped for the handling of fifty cars per day is now being erected by the courageous man who formerly walked from the studio to locations. A steam shovel has just been used to cut several acres out of a hill back of the original studio site. These and other improvements have been and are quietly taking place to the end of erecting the greatest and most complete film producing plant in America. Over and above the cost of land and original equipment, Mr. Sennett is spending more than $100,000 in replacing the original frame buildings with permanent and substatial brick and concrete structures.

"At the present time Mr. Sennett has an elaborate suite of offices furnished with desks, telephones, and occupied by a staff of managerial assistants—but way back in a small corner of the studio is a crude dressing room fitted up with dumb-bells, Indian clubs, pulley weights, rubbing table, and governed by a physical trainer.

"In this little room Mr. Sennett transacts the greater portion of the business of the organization. He leaves his apartments in the Los Angeles Athletic Club at five-thirty each morning and shortly after appears at the little studio dressing room. His punctuality is proverbial.

"After a quick change of clothing, he takes a five-mile run through the rough Edendale country roads, a cold shower and a strenuous rub-down, and is ready, smiling and full of 'pep' when the first members of the company begin to arrive for the day's round of comedy-making.

"He devotes the entire day to the writing, rehearsing and actual making of comedy films, and frequently works far into the night for the same purpose. As a writer has pertinently stated: 'Mr. Sennett has burned his brain upon the altar of public entertainment for the past three years.' He lives pictures, he sleeps pictures, he dreams pictures. Every ounce of vitality, mentality, ambition and action, is centralized upon this one object of making and improving comedy films. In three years a shock of brown hair has been transformed to a mass of gray, but the result has been worth the effort, for since the beginning of history no man has ever succeeded in making so many millions of people laugh and thereby bringing so great amount of joy to the hearts of the multitude as Mr. Sennett.

"Even tempered, low of voice and modest regarding his achievements; big hearted, loyal to those who are loyal to him and silent when praise is impossible—he is the sort of man who might have led armies or climbed to high places of state, had he not chosen to concentrate laughter and gladness in little rolls of celluloid and send them broadcast over the face of the earth."

CHARLES "CHUCK" RIESNER.

HAMPTON DEL RUTH, managing editor of the Keystone Film Company, holds an unrivaled position among the writers of film successes. He joined the New York Motion Picture organization about two years ago, well equipped for the artistic fulfillment of his duties.

Mr. Del Ruth was born of American parentage in Venice, Italy, on January 10, 1888. Much of his boyhood was spent in travel with his parents and his early education was accomplished by a private Italian tutor in arts and literature, followed by an Oxford diploma and a post-graduate course in that institution of learning.

Among his early successes were "The Passer-by," "Conscience," "Old Black Joe," "Count de Monte Cristo," "The Lighted Way," "Pelleas and Melisande," "The Struggle Everlasting," "Ties of Fate," "A Study in Criminology," and "Love Tales of Hoffmann."

Mr. Del Ruth, being a strong advocate for quality, has succeeded in surrounding himself with an able staff of comedy writers with international reputation.

HARRY WILLIAMS was born in Minnesota in 1879. He first entered the profession organizing and producing amateur minstrel performances, after which he entered the circus business and then gravitated to vaudeville.

After writing "Navajo," a song which was an immediate and lasting hit, he adopted song writing as a profession, and since that time has written about a thousand songs and several Broadway successes—all this in less than fifteen years.

Last January Mr. Williams went to the Pacific Coast from New York and decided to enter the field as a scenario writer. Upon application to Managing Director Mack Sennett, of the Keystone Film Company, he was placed under contract as a staff writer in the Scenario Department, and regards himself as fortunate to be identified with the greatest comedy film organization in the world. Mr. Williams states that while "In the Shade of the Old Apple Tree" made him more money than any other song, he believes "I'm Afraid to Go Home in the Dark" his best effort.

WILLIAM JEROME was born in Cornwall, N. Y., in 1865, and has been writing popular song hits for thirty-five years, and is author of "Mr. Dooley," "Bedelia" and innumerable other big hits. Mr. Jerome is the dean of American song writers, having been engaged in this profession for a longer period than any other living writer. The success of the most musical comedies for the last twenty years has been due to Mr. Jerome's unique sense of humor, as he has "written in laughs" for almost every star comedian besides furnishing countless laughing acts to vaudeville.

Seeking a larger field for his laugh-producing genius, Mr. Jerome has allied himself with that division of The Triangle Film Corporation known as the Keystone Company. Keystone comedies have always been the "dernier cri" of humor, and with this environment, under the able direction of Mack Sennett, "the man who has made the whole world laugh," Mr. Jerome's smile-producing talent should be at its very best as a staff writer in the Keystone Scenario Department. Mr. Jerome's two biggest musical comedy successes were "The Ham Tree," with McIntyre & Heath, and "Piff Paff Pouf," in which Eddie Foy and Fred Mace starred for several seasons on Broadway.

VINCENT BRYAN was born in St. Johns, Newfoundland, in 1877, brought up in New York City, and has been a writer of comedy acts, monologues and comic songs for twenty years. Some of the better-known songs are "Down Where the Wurzburger Flows," "Tammany," "Cubanola Glide," "He's Me Pal" and "That's How I Love You, Mame."

Many of the songs and acts done by Lew Dockstader, Irene Franklin, Nat M. Wills, Eddie Foy, Jimmie Powers, Neil O'Brien, Charles Bigelow, Montgomery and Stone, Harry Bulger, S. Stuart Barnes and Bert Williams were the work of Mr. Bryan.

That shining point of the Triangle Film Corporation known as the Keystone Film Company has secured Mr. Bryan's services, and there, in collaboration with the best humorists that money can procure, and under the direction of that Belasco of Film Comedy, Mack Sennett, Mr. Bryan's laugh-producing ability should be better than ever before as a Keystone Staff writer.

JEAN C. HAVEZ was born in Baltimore, Md., forty years ago and took a course at the Johns Hopkins University, attaining the degrees of A.B. and Ph.D. He entered the newspaper field, and after a few years' apprenticeship in Baltimore journalism, he became a special writer for the New York Sun. He was engaged as press agent for Lew Dockstader in 1902, rising from that position to business manager of the company, and for ten years wrote all the songs and humorous matter used in the performance.

Mr. Havez has written and had produced several musical comedies and farces, and is the author of nearly one thousand vaudeville acts. He has written material for every headliner in vaudeville and has several thousand songs to his credit. His greatest song success was "Everybody Works But Father." Recently he joined the Keystone Film Company as a staff writer under Managing Editor Hampton Del Ruth.

In January, 1915, Mr. Havez married Miss Cecil Cunningham, the prima donna of the New York Winter Garden, and before that the leading mezzo-soprano in grand opera in Paris. They have one of the most delightful homes in Los Angeles.

FREDERICK PALMER, after many years of newspaper and theatrical experience, joined the Mack Sennett organization about a year ago and is now kept busy in two capacities—assistant editor and director of publicity.

Mr. Palmer was born in New York in 1881, was educated in the public schools of Flushing, L. I., and Rochester, N. Y., and later at Cornell University. While acting as dramatic critic on a Rochester daily he resigned from newspaper work and adopted the stage as a profession. During the years spent on the stage, in drama, vaudeville, musical comedy and two seasons with a circus, Mr. Palmer found time to write many short stories and vaudeville acts. For four years he edited "The Rounder," the largest theatrical magazine that has ever been published on the Pacific Coast, resigning that position to enter motion pictures. After a year of screen acting Mr. Palmer became identified with the Keystone Film Company as a scenario writer, and has risen to his present position by hard work and concentration.

FRED MACE, COMEDIAN, KEYSTONE

FRED MACE left a trail of laughter from coast to coast when he starred in "A Chinese Honeymoon," "Piff, Paff, Pouf," "The Umpire," "The Time, Place and the Girl," "The Chocolate Soldier" and other musical successes.

During that time he was undoubtedly a stage star of the first magnitude, but later when he starred in Keystone comedies, his pantomimic characterizations placed him in the rank of screen celebrities; the people have never grown tired of him.

Whenever Mr. Mace appears upon the screen he is greeted with the same shouts of laughter that made him famous four years ago during the first flush of his screen success.

Mr. Mace was born in Philadelphia thirty-three years ago, and after a common school education graduated in medicine and dentistry. During his school days, however, Mr. Mace began to show a strong inclination for the stage, and shortly after receiving his diplomas he journeyed to New York and started his stage career, playing a small part in a musical comedy production.

The theatregoers of New York and other cities are well aware of the success that followed, and when Mr. Mace deserted the stage and joined the pioneers of the picture business, it was with general regret.

However, this regret was soon turned to joy, as when the admirers of Mr. Mace's work began to see him on the screen, his popularity, instead of fading, began to increase.

After an engagement with the Biograph Company, Mr. Mace became associated with Ford Sterling, Mabel Normand and others in the new Keystone Film Company, which was organized by Mack Sennett in 1912. Mr. Mace worked opposite Mr. Sennett in a series of comedies that established the permanent popularity of the Keystone brand. Becoming ambitious to produce his own pictures, he resigned from the Keystone ranks and organized a new company.

Later Mr. Mace received an offer from Mr. Mack Sennett to return to the Keystone Company, at one of the largest salaries ever paid a film comedian. After brief deliberation the offer was accepted and it was with much joy that the film fans of the world heard the news that Mr. Mace would again be seen under the direction of Mr. Sennett in Keystone films. Since his return Mr. Mace has appeared with Raymond Hitchcock and other stars, and has shown that his vacation increased his ability and added freshness to his peculiar line of comedy. Mr. Mace will frequently be seen in Keystone-Triangle reels.

ARTHUR SHIRLEY, LEADS, NATIONAL DRAMA CORPORATION

ARTHUR SHIRLEY, former leading man for the Rex Universal company, now with the Thomas E. Dixon National Drama Corporation, is an international motion picture star, having played for manufacturers in Australia as well as in the United States. Mr. Shirley was born at Sussex, England, in 1886, and went to Australia with his parents.

He had special training for the stage, and during his legitimate stage career played with Nellie Stewart in everything from bits to leads, and for a number of seasons was under the management of the J. C. Williamson company playing leads. This organization is the largest theatrical producing company of the Islands.

It was with the Australasia Film Company that Mr. Shirley did his first work in motion pictures in 1913. One of his best subjects was that of the leading part in "The Shepherd of the Southern Cross" which was filmed by Higgins Brothers. Mr. Shirley remained with this organization for almost two years, during which time he was featured in all subjects in which he appeared.

At the end of this engagement he came to America and played with the Kalem company at their New York studio, and was later transferred to the Glendale studio where he played in the detective series.

It was while finishing these that Mr. Shirley received an offer from the Universal company, which he accepted, and has since been playing leads exclusively for Director Joseph DeGrasse. He was featured in "The Pine's Revenge" and "The Fleur-de-Lis," the title of which was changed to "The Lily."

Mr. Shirley has just signed a two years' contract and will first appear in "The Fall of a Nation," from the pen of Thomas E. Dixon, author of "The Clansman" and others. Mr. Shirley is to be starred in the first production of this organization.

That Mr. Shirley was very popular in Australia was brought out recently by the statement of Ernest Higgins, of the firm of Higgins Brothers, motion picture manufacturers of Sydney, who came to America to study manufacturing conditions. While here Mr. Higgins made a number of pictures of Mr. Shirley at the request of Australian film manufacturers, exhibitors and fans which he took back to Australia.

That Mr. Shirley is a good judge of talent is duly appreciated by the management of Universal City, and the officers feel indebted to him for the recommendation of Louise Carbasse.

WILLIAM J. BOWMAN, DIRECTOR, HORSLEY PICTURES

WILLIAM J. BOWMAN was born at Bakersville, N. C., and went to California with his parents when a boy. He received his education at Lordsburg College, Pomona, Cal., where he studied to be an architectural draftsman. This work after a short time proved distasteful to him, and he decided upon a career on the dramatic stage.

One of his early engagements was with Robert Mantell in 1896, where he appeared in "The Face in the Moonlight' and "The Corsican Brothers." With Jeanette Waldorf he toured the Orient, playing in Shakespeare. Upon his return to the States he played in the famous Frawley stock company at the Grand Opera House in San Francisco. During the year this organization was composed of such actors and actresses as Wilton Lackaye, Theodore Roberts, John Mason, H. R. Roberts, Kathrine Grey and Mary Van Buren.

WILLIAM BOWMAN, as himself, and in two of his characters.

Below Mr. Bowman is shown as "The Devil," in "The Devil, the Servant and the Man."

Following this he gave his attention to the vaudeville stage, and wrote a number of acts which were headliners on the big circuits. Included in this were "The Family Entrance," "The Little Mother" and "Quarantine." He then created the role of The Devil in the vaudeville playlet "The Devil, the Servant and the Man," and for two years appeared in this over the Orpheum and Keith circuits.

His last two legitimate stage engagements were in Chicago and covered a period of five seasons, when he was leading man of the Imperial and Rush Temple stock companies.

EDWIN THANHOUSER was manager of the Bush Temple company, and when he decided to enter the motion picture field he induced Mr. Bowman to become a member of his photoplay organization.

Bowman's first work in pictures was in the role of Shylock in "The Merchant of Venice," produced by Mr. Thanhouser. Mr. Bowman remained with the Thanhouser company for some time, and then became director at the American studio at Chicago. Here he produced an adaptation of Opie Reid's "Starbucks," in which the author himself appeared. This was made in three reels.

When the first New York Motion Picture Corporation company went to the West coast, Mr. Bowman accompanied them as director, and the three first subjects were "The Iconoclast," "The Lure of the Violin" and "Retrogression."

He remained with the NYMP company six months, and then became director for the Western Vitagraph organization, where he directed the production of the "Master of the Mine." Among the other Vitagraph subjects he made were: "Ghosts," "Inasmuch," "Face of Fear" and "The King's Man," in which he played leads.

The next engagement of Mr. Bowman was at the Miller 101 Ranch, where he made four three-reel subjects. From here he went to the New York studios of the Universal and produced three photoplays, one of two, another of three, and the other of four reels, the title of the greater subject being "The Beautiful Unknown."

He then began producing for himself, and made a six-reel photoplay entitled "The Tale of the North," which was sold by state rights. It was while finishing this subject that he began negotiations with the Quality company, which resulted in his engagement by President Fred Balshofer at New York City.

Mr. Balshofer had employed Mr. Bowman as the first director for the NYMP corporation when he went West and opened the studio for this company near Santa Monica. He had followed Mr. Bowman's career in the picture world, and knowing his ability did not hesitate to offer him the directing when the new company was organized.

SINCE affiliating with this organization he has produced four photoplays and is now completing the fifth. The first was "The Second in Command" of five reels with Francis X. Bushman, who also appeared as star in "The Silent Voice."

This was in seven reels, and Mr. Bowman is author of it as well as director. "A Corner in Cotton" is the title of the five-reel Marguerite Snow subject, and "Pennington's Choice" was the fourth.

In this, which consisted of five reels, Francis X. Bushman was star with Beverly Bayne as his leading woman. His most recent work has been the filming of "Rosemary," in which Marguerite Snow is featured.

Preferring to remain on the West Coast, Mr. Bowman resigned his position with the Quality corporation when it was decided that all future production of this organization would be done in the East, and after considering several offers from some of the biggest producing companies with studios in Los Angeles, he accepted the offer of David Horsley to make Centaur features for the Mutual program. He first produced "The Terror of the Fold," and then took up the making of "The Bait," which was completed in five reels.

That he is familiar with all details of stagecraft is shown best in the fact that while a member of the Alby stock company at Providence, R. I., where he was stage director, he designed, painted the scenery, directed the production, and played a prominent part in "The Warrens of Virginia," and is, without a doubt, the only man who has such a record. His last stock work was in the production of "The Servant in the House."

SMYTHE ADDISON, DIRECTOR, HORSLEY COMPANY

SMYTHE ADDISON, director for the Bostock Arena and Film Company, producing Centaur dramas, has had a very wide experience in the many and varied departments of the big show game. Born at Covington, Ky., 1889, Mr. Addison attended the public schools and the Georgia Technical College at Atlanta, Ga.

He began his professional career by running away from school to join a circus. Later he went into musical comedy and then was found by his father and taken home.

After completing the studies prescribed by his parent he played six years on the legitimate stage, a portion of the time with Florence Stone and Dick Ferris. Later he played with Frank Cooley and Gladys Kingsbury stock at San Diego, and the Bailey and Mitchell stock at Seattle, and covered himself with distinction there.

Mr. Addison's first motion picture experience was with Mack Sennett at the Keystone, and later with Fred Mace. He was juvenile leading man with the Monopol company in the filming of "As Through a Looking Glass," and later promoted a company at Bakersfield and made a six-reel subject entitled "The Heart of California."

In this he was one of the leading stockholders as well as leading man. From this position he went to the Santa Barbara Motion Picture Company, where he directed "The Syd" series of comedies. When this company closed he returned to the Keystone and for a time was in the scenario department, and later held a similar position for the Universal. His work there was of the high order to be expected from him.

Prior to accepting the position as director with the Bostock company, Mr. Addison was with the Essanay company as director and scored a success in that capacity.

While Mr. Addison's experience in the motion picture field has been brief, he is nevertheless an able director, as is shown in the fact that he is employed by that pioneer of the film industry, David Horsley.

Mr. Addison has solved a number of difficult problems, and has had several unusually hard tasks thrown his way since joining the Centaur forces. To these he has brought a certain originality of idea and method, and a forceful style of execution which have not made him popular with his companies, but have won the confidence of other producers affiliated with the company.

In large scenes, with unusual settings, which call for expert knowledge, he is quite at home.

ROBERT BROADWELL, DIRECTOR, HORSLEY COMPANY

ROBERT BROADWELL, now directing at the studio of the Bostock company at Los Angeles making dramatic subjects for the Mutual program, has had a varied career, and in three years has risen to the ranks of director.

Mr. Broadwell was born in Boston in 1879, and after graduating from the public schools, attended Andover. For four years following this he was in the U. S. Internal Revenue service, and then spent ten years abroad.

For a time he was at Honolulu, in the Philippines, Japan, and spent several months in China during the Boxer uprising. During his absence from this country he served in various government positions.

About three years ago he accepted a position with the New York Motion Picture Corporation as assistant director, and aided in the filming of "The Wrath of the Gods," "The Typhoon," "The Devil," "The Barrier," "The Coward," "On the Night Stage," "The Iron Strain," "The Man from Oregon," and other equally well known photoplays.

Several months ago he went to the Bostock Jungle & Film Company, where he was appointed director. Up to this time he has produced "The Blood of Our Brothers," "Could a Man Do More," and at the present time he is filming pictures featuring Crane Wilbur, one of the most recent of which is "Vengeance Is Mine." He is recognized as one of the most thoroughgoing and painstaking directors on the West Coast.

BROOKLYN KELLER, LEADS, HORSLEY COMPANY

BROOKLYN KELLER, engaged by David Horsley for appearance in the five reel emotional drama of social gangster life, "Capital Punishment," has played in pictures since 1912, appearing in leading parts and occasional heavies.

Mr. Keller was born at Lakeland, Fla., in 1890, and began his professional career when at six he appeared in "Tom Thumb." After a season he returned to his studies until he had completed the course in the public high school.

He played in stock companies in the Middle West and on the west coast, including engagements with the Curtis stock company at Denver, one season in repertoire with the Cleo Madison stock company, a summer at the Potter theatre, Santa Barbara, and thirty-two weeks with the Burroughs company at Pomona, Cal. During these engagements Mr. Keller took parts in such plays as "The Lion and the Mouse."

Mr. Keller was engaged by Thomas H. Ince in 1912 and remained there for three years playing leads and heavies in "The Bells of Austi," "The Frontier Mother," "Shorty's Secret," "The Silent Messenger" and "The Rightful Heir."

He was specially engaged for "Under Two Flags," a Biograph production. Mr. Keller's theatrical experience, training in athletics, and his work in pictures gives him an enviable position in filmdom.

He is five feet eleven inches in height, weighs one hundred and sixty-eight pounds, has black curly hair and dark blue eyes. While in school he paid considerable attention to athletics, winning medals in a number of events.

BIG FOUR FEATURE PLAY

For Big Four Exhibitors

IN line with the dominating purpose of the V-L-S-E to provide its exhibitors, not only with features of the highest-tensioned drawing power, but with the maximum service to help them resell those features to the public, we have prepared the reference guide shown above.

It is a substantial volume, the size of the Motion Picture News, containing handsome portraits of all the principal players of the Vitagraph, Lubin, Selig, Essanay Companies who appear in V-L-S-E productions, together with "out-of-the-usual" personality sketches of the rise, successes and intimate sidelights of these stars.

As an aid in compiling press notices and other publicity, the book should be invaluable to every theatre manager. The illustrations lend themselves to perfect reproduction, and the text matter is written from a "human-interest" angle which will appeal to every editor. A request to any V-L-S-E office will bring it to you.

How do you book your pictures?

WE do not know how you feel about our reviews of pictures; but we do feel inclined to tell you some facts about them.

In the first place, we realize that a clear and impartial review of every picture is one of the most important services we can give you. It is only natural, therefore, that we do our best in the matter. That is plain business sense.

THREE staff men give all their time to this work—and often other staff men help out.

We hold weekly editorial conferences to sharpen up their efforts. These reviewers are the very best men we can get hold of for this particular work.

This reviewing service alone, if it were not included in a large magazine like MOTION PICTURE NEWS, would have to cost you considerable money.

Perhaps you think, because MOTION PICTURE NEWS carries manufacturer advertising, that this influences our reviews. If so, you are dead wrong. If you can prove this to us in any instance we'll admit it in cold type.

WE sell circulation to the manufacturer, not reviews. If we did not keep our reviews wholly unbiased, we would lose circulation; and the manufacturer knows this. Otherwise he pays out advertising money to get nowhere.

He knows that the exhibitor must have honest reviews. If the exhibitor doesn't get them from us he'll get them elsewhere; and the manufacturer prefers to have his pictures reviewed by recognized experts working for a substantial business institution whose good reputation is its best business asset and cannot be risked.

WE do not claim that our review service is the only one to take. That would be too much in our interests and too little in yours. The booking of your pictures is too important.

You need every help you can afford to pay for. So we suggest that you read reviews from other sources—provided only these sources are reputable and efficient. Comparative reviews will help you.

WE only ask this: that, since our interests are the same in the matter, you help us help you. You can do this by writing us a letter.

Criticize our reviews freely. Tell us how they can be improved. Write us whenever any one review, in your estimation, fails to hit the mark.

And if you've got the time, write us right now.

AL. CHRISTIE.

EDDIE LYONS.

LEE MORAN.

NESTOR COMEDY COMPANY, UNIVERSAL

AL. E. CHRISTIE'S first real job in a theatre was as doorman at 25 cents per night and a double pass, and then he was promoted to property man in a little New York theatre. From property man he became actor and appeared in support of Wilton Lackaye and May Irwin, and appeared in such successes as "The Man from Home."

The motion picture industry began to show life at that time, and he became a member of the David Horsley staff for the Centaur company at Bayonne, N. J., his position there being the general manager. He produced most of the "Mutt and Jeff" comedies, which will be remembered by the trade as a big hit in their day. He toured the country with this company, making pictures in many locations, then with thirty-two people and two carloads of trunks, scenery and props, went to Los Angeles and located the first studio in Hollywood in 1911.

Mr. Christie has produced more than three hundred photoplays, two hundred and fifty of which he has written and produced himself. His present contract with the Universal company calls for one hundred and four single-reel comedy subjects to be written and produced under his supervision. In addition to this he puts on five-reel Broadway Star comedies, the first being "Mrs. Plum's Pudding," featuring Marie Tempest. "Sallie's Blighted Career," with Edna Aug, is now being produced, and he has scenarios prepared for the five-reel comedy in which the Nestor players will be featured, entitled "Is Matrimony a Failure?" and another "Charley's Aunt" and "All the Comforts of Home."

Mr. Christie is a whirlwind in direction. He knows just how every scene is to be made before he begins production. He is very explicit in his instructions to his players, thus reducing rehearsals, and has established a number of records for speed in making subjects that retain the quality.

He is always from ten to fifteen weeks ahead of his releases, and when any special subject is wanted in the comedy line, the Universal company knows who can deliver the special production for them.

London (Canada) was his birthplace. He secured his education in New York and the big school of experience; was tutored by David Horsley, and has won a most desirable reputation in filmdom. He is now a member of the Hollywood Board of Trade, and to him are referred most matters pertaining to picture companies.

EDDIE LYONS, who is known the world over for his smile that won't come off, hails from Beardstown, Ill., which he claims is the capital of comedy. He was born in 1886, and after an education in the public schools joined a repertoire show at fourteen

With this he toured the Middle West, and then for two seasons played in the Marlowe stock company at Chicago. He was with Liebler and company, producing "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch," and then went into vaudeville with Mamie Gehru, producing the sketch "June." After touring the Orpheum and Keith circuits he became a member of the "Beverly of Graustark" road company, in which he remained for one year. About five years ago Mr. Lyons became a member of the Biograph stock company at New York, and his first picture work was in the second production made by Mack Sennett in which Mr. Lyons worked opposite Mabel Normand. Three months later Mr. Lyons was employed by Carl Laemmle, and for nine months remained with the Imp. Four years he has been a Nestorite. Last year Mr. Lyons directed for five months, and returned to the Christie company because of the many requests from exhibitors. His recent success was the juvenile lead part in "Mrs. Plum's Pudding." Mr. Lyons is 5 feet 8 inches in height, weighs 143 pounds. In addition to playing and directing, he has written a number of scenarios.

LEE MORAN, of Nestor, was born in Chicago in 1887. After the public schools he attended St. Ignatius College, Chicago, where he graduated. His first engagement was with "The Golden Girl" company, where he played a character comedy part. He appeared in stock at Chicago, and was with Mary Flynn and Franklin Farnum. His next engagement was that of juvenile lead in the road company in "The Girl in the Kimono," and then a year in vaudeville on the S. & C. time, appearing in the sketch, "The Long and Short of It," in which he was the Long and Bud Duncan the Short.

Four years ago he became a member of the Al. E. Christie Nestor brand, and has since appeared in a subject each week. In "Wanted a Chaperone" he gave a female impersonation, as well as in "A Lucky Deception."

He considers his work as porter in "All Aboard" one of his best parts. As Detective Potts in many Nestor comedies he has won high praise. Mr. Moran is 5 feet 10½ inches in height.

HORACE DAVEY, GALLAGHER AND BURNS

A LARGE portion of the mirth provoked by Nestor comedies of the Universal is due to the painstaking work of Director Horace Davey; and his principal players, Miss Billie Rhodes, Raymond Gallagher and Neil Burns. This company was formed as the result of the popularity of Nestor brand comedies, and was placed in charge of Director Horace Davey early this year.

Mr. Davey was born at Bayonne, N. J., in 1889, and is a pioneer of the Los Angeles film colony. He went there in 1911. Like Mr. Christie, Mr. Davey did his first work for the Nestor brand at the old Centaur studio at Bayonne, and he gave up his work after serving an apprenticeship to the printer's trade because he saw a future in the motion picture industry. His first position was at David Horsley's Nickelodium where he operated the machine, took tickets, was cashier, and if necessary operated the broom. Then he was promoted to property man at the studio, and later became assistant to Director Christie.

When the Nestors were sent West he was one of the first to be selected, and he has remained there ever since. His careful attention to details and persistence for improvement caused the Universal officials upon the recommendation of Mr. Christie to place him at the head of this comedy company, and from the first he has demonstrated that they made no mistake in their trust. Among his recent one reel pictures produced are "Father's Helping Hand," "The Other Man's Wife," and "Those Kids and Cupid." The first picture made under his direction was "Following Father's Footsteps."

RAYMOND GALLAGHER.

NEIL BURNS.

Constant association with Al Christie, father of the Nostors, has enabled Mr. Davey to gather valuable information on the production of comedies. His pictures are known for their cleanliness. The objectionable or the scene which would give even the slightest offense is never present in the one-reel comedy of his direction coming from the Universal West Coast studios weekly.

Mr. Davey has also written the greater part of the scenarios he handles in production. Sometimes the stories are also his, but very often they are handed to him by Mr. Christie, and at other times they are purchased from the great influx of manuscripts that come to Universal City each day, marked "For the Nestor company."

But the Nestor comedy style is not an easy one to comprehend at short notice and so practically always either Mr. Davey or Mr. Christie revises the scenarios.

Detail is one of Mr. Davey's strong points, and glaring errors are very seldom to be discovered in his comedies.

RAYMOND GALLAGHER, leading man for Nestor, was born at San Francisco in 1888. He was educated at Sacred Heart College where he distinguished himself in athletics and amateur theatrical performances.

His ambition to become an actor led him to accept the work of playing bits in stock productions. He first appeared in "The Resurrection," then was selected as juvenile lead in R. L. Stockwell's play "Mrs. Temple's Telegram," which he played for one season. He played in stock for some time and then was with Belasco's "The Girl of the Golden West." During a stock engagement at the Alcazar theatre in San Francisco he met Mr. Melies of the Melies Film, who offered him a position as leading man in his company. He played at the American studio, and was then selected as leading man to make a tour around the world. He traveled with them as far as Japan, and then returned to Los Angeles where he was engaged by the Lubin Film Company. He played leads here for one year, and then became a member of tbe Universal stock and has since played leads in many of their best releases.

In everyday life and on the motion picture screen he has a pleasing appearance. He is five feet nine inches tall, weighs about one hundred and sixty pounds. His features are clean cut and regular; out of door life has kept him in fine trim. He motors, rides, hunts, is a baseball fan, and is an enthusiastic devotee of all forms of outdoor sports, winter and summer.

Gallagher is by schooling an engineer who gave up a scientific career to take up work on the legitimate stage. While it was not without a few twinges of regret that he abandoned the former profession, he has never really felt that he made a mistake. His success both on the stage and on the screen, he feels, fully justifies him for his early choice.

NEIL BURNS, leading man with Nestor, was born in a tank town of Pennsylvania which bears the name of Bristol. When a lad he packed his carpet bag and went to Atlantic City, where he received his education and became interested in stage work. Upon leaving school in 1907 he signed with the road company to play the part of a jockey in "The Sporting Duchess."

That was his debut, and he made good. At the close of the season he booked with "Just Out of College," where he did his first stage dancing. Since that time his engagements include the part of Skeeter in "Stubborn Cinderella," Berty in "The Girl in the Taxi," in "The Girl of my Dreams" and "The Winsome Widow."

He did not like the jaunts, so became affiliated with the Gaiety musical stock company in Los Angeles. It was here Al. Christie first saw him, and the Nestor engagement followed. He considers "Taking Her Measure," "When Hubby Grew Jealous," "It Almost Happened," "Molly's Malady," and "When a Man is Fickle" his best subjects.

Mr. Burns is five feet five and a half inches tall, weighs one hundred and thirty-five pounds, has light brown hair and eyes, and a very fair complexion.

Motoring is Mr. Burns' hobby, and he drives his own car to the many picturesque nooks of California. He plays golf, rides, and is an expert swimmer.

Since joining the Christie-Nestor aggregation Mr. Burns has become a proficient and versatile interpreter of eccentric comedy character parts. His personality is naturally a happy one, and he has never allowed it to suffer while appearing before the lens of the Nestor camera.

Mr. Burns has played about every comedy part from a Wall Street clerk to a destitute colored man. He is always ready on a moment's notice to adapt himself to any role, no matter how weird or unusual, that Director Horace Davey assigns him.

Of recent date Mr. Burns has been turning bis hand to the writing of scenarios and has met with considerable success. He lays this to the fact that he is continually making a study of comedy production from every angle.

Mr. Burns believes that by making an exhaustive study of comedy and farce that he will thus be enabled to assume his future roles with more complete understanding, although from his performances in the past there seems to he little room for improvement.

In the short time that he has been affiliated with Al. Christie's second company of Nestorites this player has well proven his value.

JANE WALLER, LEADS, UNIVERSAL

JANE WALLER, who has appeared in leads in a number of Nestor comedies, is a Los Angeles girl whose professional experience has been in pictures only.

Following a course at the Los Angeles High School, Miss Waller secured an engagement with the Del Henderson comedy company of the Biograph producing staff where she played for several months. Her next engagement was with the Balboa where, under the direction of Charles Hayden, she appeared in "His New Job," "The Wooing of Sal," and several other photoplays.

With the B. A. Rolfe company she played in support of Max Figman, apearing in the part of Ann Bludge in "My Best Girl." Since becoming affiliated with the Nestor company she has played in "Kids and Corsets," "A Maid and a Man," "It Almost Happened," "Some Fixer," "Almost a Knock-out," and in "Putting One Over on the Dean" she appeared in a boy part.

Miss Waller is an ideal type for pictures, having light hair, blue eyes and a very light complexion. She is five feet five and a half inches in height, and weighs one hundred and twenty-four pounds.

During her high school course, she was a star basket-ball player and took part in tennis tournaments.

She swims, rides, is a motorist, and excels in dancing, diving and swimming. At the Universal studio she is referred to as the champion Ukalele player.

When the Horace Davey Nestor company was formed Miss Waller was selected as second leading woman by Al Christie. Her work with Biograph, Balboa and Rolfe had stamped her as a comedienne in every sense of the word and Mr. Christie's good judgment did not fail him when he offered her a position with his second company.

Miss Waller has proven that she can act as well as appear pretty and vivacious. She has already secured a large following in Screenland and seems to have a very bright future in store for her.

H. C. MATTHEWS, UNIVERSAL COMPANY

H. C. MATTHEWS' productions during the past eight years entitle him to much credit and certainly to a place in the producers' "Hall of Fame." His picturization of the stories told us in our childhood of the beautiful fairies and the wonderful characters so dear to children, have given him the title of the "children's director."

After directing for two years in the Edison studio, Mr. Matthews joined the Powers' Company, where he directed for four years. He then joined the Universal forces in the East, and after a year and a half he joined their company on the West Coast.

After more than seven years of producing for other people, Mr. Matthews decided last spring to manufacture and market his own work. An agreement was reached with the Universal Company, and without the noise of trumpets or the waving of banners he opened the H. C. Matthews studio in the former home of the Universal Company in Hollywood, and has written and produced since that time the following three or more reel features: "The Runaway Princess," "Such a Princess" and "Nosy Land," besides the following one and two-reel pictures: "Hearts Are Trumps," "How Early Saved the Farm," "The Healing of Mary Brown," "One on Mother," "The Circus," "The Mascot" and "The Sea Shell."

Among the most popular of his spectacular productions for children which were adapted and staged by him, and in which were featured Elsie Albert and Baby Early, are: "Snow White," "Beauty and the Beast," "Sleeping Beauty," "Aladdin," "For the Heart of a Princess," "When First We Met," "Mammy's Child," "The Four Senses," "Babies Three," "Those Were the Happy Days," "The Lesson," "Rivals," "Little Helping Hands," "Wanted—A Practice," "The Plan That Failed," "Early's Awakening," "The Skeleton" and many others.

Before leaving the East Mr. Matthews completed for Henry W. Savage the educational feature, "Uncle Sam at Work," which has enjoyed a wonderful run all over the country.

Mr. Matthews is justly proud of the fact that during his years of producing he has directed more than three hundred pictures and not one of them has been put on the shelf.

ELSIE ALBERT started her screen career as a child, after having had considerable experience and training with the Blaney Stock Company in Newark, N. J. After a season under the direction of Edward Porter and Searle Dawley she joined the Edison forces under the direction of Mr. Matthews, playing the leads in child dramas, comedies and comedy dramas.

While Miss Albert's success and popularity have been due to an extent to the ability of her director, yet it would be difficult to determine just how much of Mr. Matthews' success has been made possible by the inborn art, ability and valuable qualities possessed by this charming young lady. Miss Albert is one of the most promising of the young screen stars and bright things are predicted for her in pictures.

WHILE only eight years of age, Baby Early has had five years' experience in pictures and shows ability far in excess of her years.

It was Baby Early's work in the leads of Powers' "Kid Pictures" that made them so popular all over the country, yet with all her ability and the praise that has been heaped upon her, she retains that sweet, childish spirit and light-heartedness that make childhood so interesting to us all.

She received her first directing at the hands of Mr. Matthews and has shown marked ability in the following productions: "Mammy's Child," "Babies Three," "Those Were the Happy Days," "The Lesson," "Rivals," "Little Helping Hands," "Wanted—A Practice," "The Plan That Failed," "Early's Awakening," "The Skeleton" and many others.

Her lovable disposition and sweet childish ways have endeared her to all who know her, and she is a great favorite around the studio. During those tiresome waits when the sun is hidden from view by clouds she will climb upon a table or chair and entertain the company by reciting, throwing all of her emotions and dramatic ability into the work in a way that holds her hearers. While Baby Earle has made a wonderful record in her screen work as a child, yet undoubtedly her greatest achievements will come with the dawning of young womanhood.

SEYMOUR HASTINGS, comedy director for Mr. Matthews, received his early training in the hard field of newspaper work. He spent twenty-five years as a traveling correspondent in the United States, Canada, Japan, South Africa (as a war correspondent), South America and Europe.

He has learned in this work to read human nature and has acquired keen powers of observation which have been valuable to him as a director and scenario writer. Mr. Hastings is a splendid actor and has been connected with some of the largest studios. He has also directed for the Lubin, Masterpiece and Premier companies.

Remarkable Child Actress.

HOBART HENLEY, LEADS, UNIVERSAL

HOBART HENLEY, starring in Universal Broadway features, is a native of Louisville, Ky., where he was born in 1887. He was educated at the University of Cincinnati, and following the completion of his studies he appeared in an engagement on the legitimate stage, and since has been under the management of Belasco, leading man in stock companies in Cincinnati, Cleveland, Buffalo and other large cities, and did his first work before the camera in January, 1913.

His first picture was made under the direction of Julius Stearn, entitled "The Opal King," in which he played the leading part, and he has since been leading man continually in Universal subjects.

A few months back he was transferred from the Eastern studio to the Western. His recent subjects are "The Little Brother of the Rich," where he appeared as Paul Potter, and "The Man in the Chair," three reels, written by himself.

"The Tenor," three reels, in which he appears in a dual role, is another of his original photoplays. Recenlty he played the leading part in the three-reel subject, "The Deficit," from the story by Peter B. Kyne.

The producing company in which Mr. Henley is leading man is known as the Hobart Henley Company, and it is understood from those in authority that many big things are in store for this promising young actor.

He is to be featured in every way possible for the Universal company, as it is understood that President Carl Laemmle has found him to be popular with screen fans.

The success of Mr. Henley in screen work is attributed by the actor to the aid he has secured from directors, scenario writers and his personal study of parts he portrays. Every scenario is first given a very thorough study, this leading man going over the script with his director, and thoroughly discussing each and every scene separately.

Mr. Henley makes a good screen appearance; he is six feet tall and weighs 180 pounds. His hair is black and eyes are dark brown. He is proficient in athletics, rides, swims, shoots and plays golf and tennis.

RICHARD STANTON, DIRECTOR OF UNIVERSAL "GRAFT" COMPANY.

HOBART HENLEY, STARRED IN UNIVERSAL'S "GRAFT" SERIES.

RICHARD STANTON, DIRECTOR, UNIVERSAL

RICHARD STANTON, director-actor, was picked by Universal to direct "Graft," its serial which followed "The Broken Coin." Mr. Stanton began work on the first episode with Hobart Henley in the lead.

Mr. Stanton was born in Philadelphia, where he was educated and gained his first stage experience in amateur theatricals. He then went in for musical comedy, and after Ward & Vokes separated, Mr. Stanton joined Ward and traveled with the company, playing "Around the Clock in Twelve Hours." For three years he traveled with Kolb and Dill. This took him to California, and it was while enjoying a rest in San Francisco that he was called upon to play a lead in a picture which the Melies firm was producing.

He went through many hairbreadth escapes, one of which was diving under water and getting his breath through the barrel of his rifle until the posse pursuing him had given up the search.

So successful was Stanton's first picture and so clearly did he demonstrate his knowledge of theatrical affairs, that he was made a director and took a company South from San Francisco to film scenes at Catalina Island. It was while on the way North from Catalina that Stanton met Thomas H. Ince, and a contract by which the actor-director joined the Ince banner was the result. What followed is familiar history.

The engagement for the NYMP company continued for three years, during which time he made many excellent subjects, including "The Master of His House," "The High Seas" and a number of others, practically all of which were in two reels.

His last work was filming "Aloha," an American-Hawaiian story featuring Enid Markey and Willard Mack as an Ince contribution to the Triangle program. In this there was a sensational shipwreck scene, and exceptionally large sets used in which Mr. Stanton displayed his ability at handling large numbers of players in the making of scenes.

He began his engagement with the Universal but a few weeks ago, and has produced two and three-reel subjects until he took up the filming of the serial, "Graft."

From boyhood Mr. Stanton has been an athlete, playing amateur baseball while at college, and later a member of the Newark, N. J., league team. He also rides and swims.

Mr. Stanton is a strong man physically, as is shown by the strain of night and day work. He stands almost six feet in height, has black hair and dark brown eyes. He is very popular in club circles and with the host of players at the various Los Angeles studios.

GLORIA FONDA, LEADS, UNIVERSAL

GLORIA FONDA, candidate from the State of Washington for the Universal Beauty Contest, held in June, is one of the few members of this party selected by the popular vote, and made a tour of the country, to accept a position as actress in Universal films. She is now playing leads in subjects of the Victor Brand, made under the direction of William C. Dowlan.

Miss Fonda was born at St. Paul, Minn., in 1896. After attending public schools she spent some time in Forrest Ridge Convent at Seattle, Wash.

It was while Miss Fonda was a student in the convent that her schoolmates picked her as a candidate for the Universal Beauty contest, and her attractive face and pleasing manner during the campaign not only won for her the first place in the contest of the State of Washington, but also hundreds of friends.

In Los Angeles the five judges who were selected by the Universal company to pick the most beautiful of the sixty-one candidates gave Miss Fonda one of the highest scores, and for a time there was debate among the judges as to whether or not she should be entitled to the distinction of the most beautiful.

After the contest Miss Fonda returned to her home at Seattle, Wash. The Universal company made her several offers and she finally accepted, going to the West Coast studios in July.

The first picture in which she appeared was the Broadway star feature, "The College Orphan," featuring Mr. and Mrs. Carter DeHaven. In this she played the ingenue part of Irma Brentwood.

Since that time she has appeared in the featured part in "The Devil and Idle Hands," a one-reel Victor, opposite William Dowlan; "The Unmasking," a two-reel subject, and is now working in "The Mills of Greed." Miss Fonda is to be featured in one, two and three-reel Victor subjects.

At school and during her life in the mountains Miss Fonda learned swimming, canoeing, and frequently hunted and fished. She can ride horseback and drives her own car. Miss Fonda is 5 and a half feet tall, weighs 120 pounds and is a decided blond with blue eyes and very fair complexioned.

The color of Miss Fonda's eyes and her fair complexion are very appropriate for photography. Her past training and natural ability leads the Universal producers to believe she will become a popular screen star.

Miss Fonda's ambition is boundless, and her talent seems to assure her of success in any department of photodrama.

WILLIAM C. DOWLAN, LEADS, UNIVERSAL

AN experience of fourteen years in dramatic stock, playing in the best theatres in America, and appearing in leading parts of the recent successes of the stage, gave to William C. Dowlan an insight into dramatics and stagecraft that is greatly aiding him in his work as director of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company at its West Coast studios.

Mr. Dowlan was born at St. Paul, Minn., and received his education at the Christian Brothers School in that city. Almost immediately after finishing his education he took up work on the stage, and with the exception of the time when he managed and starred in his own road company, he played in stock.

In this period he played in many of the principal theatres from Coast to Coast, appearing at Chicago, Philadelphia, Vancouver, B. C.; Omaha, Portland, Ore.; the Oliver Morosco stock at Los Angeles, and at Dallas, Texas, and in other cities.

While at Dallas, Mary Fuller, now star of the Universal, was playing ingenue, and in other engagements he appeared in the same productions with such screen favorites as Clara Kimball Young.

Mr. Dowlan became affiliated with Universal more than four years ago, and from the first played leads. One of his best performances was that in "Richelieu," and the lead opposite Princess Hassan in "Under the Crescent" series.

After completing his work in the "Crescent" series, Mr. Dowlan was advanced to the position of director, and has since made a number of one, two and three-reel subjects, in all of which he played the leading part, and recently filmed the Universal Broadway feature, "The College Orphan," a comedy drama of college life with Carter and Flora Parker DeHaven in six parts.

The list of subjects Mr. Dowlan has directed include the following: "Out of the Darkness," "Their Secret," "Double Standard," "Dear Little Old-Time Girl," "The Lilt of Love," "Lord Barrington's Estate," three reels; "The Devil and Idle Hands," "The Masked Substitute" and "The Mills of Greed."

Practically all of these subjects were from scenarios prepared by Leonora Ainsworth. The subjects produced under the direction of Mr. Dowlan have become noted for the accuracy of detail, and the true-to-life portrayals.

He understands the art of stage setting so well that little touches he causes to be added to scenes prepared for his productions add much to the photoplay.

OGDEN CRANE AND GRACE BENHAM, UNIVERSAL

OGDEN CRANE, who was character man with the Smalleys' Universal company in the production of the Broadway feature, "The Flirt," adapted from the Booth Tarkington novel, and who is now playing in the coming Universal serial, "The Journal of Lord John," being filmed under the direction of E. J. Le Saint, is the son of the late Madame Ogden Crane, noted singer of New York.

Mr. Crane was born in 1873 at Brooklyn, N. Y., where he attended the public schools, and later was a student at Siglar's Preparatory School at Newburgh, N. Y. For a time he was connected with Katlin & Co., wholesale dry goods merchants, and the Consolidated Gas Company.

OGDEN CRANE.

GRACE BENHAM.

Under the management of Charles Frohman he played in support of Mrs. Patrick Campbell in "The Sorceress," with Tyrone Power in "Ulysses," and Louis Mann in "The Man Who Stood Still."

For three years Mr. Crane played the part of Buck McKee in "The Round-Up" with Macklyn Arbuckle. During his legitimate stage career this actor played in stock in many leading American cities.

His motion picture experience shows that he has been as successful in this field as on the legitimate stage. For a time he was with the Famous Players, appearing in support of Mary Pickford, and at the Thanhouser studio he was with the company featuring Maud Fealey.

Prior to accepting his present engagement with the Universal, he played with the Edison, Kalem, New York Motion Picture and Biograph.

When the Smalleys were selecting the cast for their screen production of "The Flirt" they interviewed many aspirants for the sympathetic role of Laura, that Booth Tarkington has so beautifully drawn.

Then Miss Benham was introduced to the Smalleys. "What a wonderful type for Laura," exclaimed Mr. Smalley. "Absolutely the type," echoed Mrs. Smalley, and this is Miss Benham's debut into the screen world. Miss Benham was born in Ft. Scott, Kansas, in 1888. With King Baggot and Henry Otto she appeared as leading woman in a local organization in St. Louis known as the Players Club, where she was at once recognized as an amateur of rare ability.

Miss Benham made her professional stage debut with Mrs. Patrick Campbell, following in parts with Virginia Harned and Marie Doro. She had several seasons in stock. Later she was engaged by Charles Frohman.

JEAN TAYLOR, LEADS, UNIVERSAL

JEAN TAYLOR, playing leads for Universal films opposite Herbert Rawlinson and other prominent leading men, is another example of success in motion pictures without previous experience on the legitimate stage. Miss Taylor is a Canadian, born in 1893, and has lived in the United States since early childhood.

She attended the public and East high schools in Rochester, N. Y., and the University of Rochester, N. Y., and went to Los Angeles following the close of her school work.

Her first engagement in pictures was in December, 1914, when she was selected by Director Al. Christie, father of the Nestors. Under his direction she appeared in "Too Many Crooks," then played the part of Mrs. Crab in "He Fell in the Park," and appeared as Mrs. Smith in "They Were Heroes," opposite Lee Moran in all of these subjects.

The first big part assigned Miss Taylor was that of Rose in "Just Jim," made under the direction of O. A. C. Lund in five reels and released as a Universal Broadway feature.

Miss Taylor appeared in the lead part for Director Burton King in "For Professional Reasons," and was then transferred to the Worthington company, where she played leading parts in a number of subjects. In support of Herbert Rawlinson Miss Taylor has taken the lead part in "Chivalry," the "Ne'er-Do-Well," "The Bloodhound of the North" and others.

This actress is very enthusiastic over athletics, and has learned to ride and swim since entering pictures. She also has found that her tennis and basketball playing at college serve her well in pictures.

While in school she took a special course in music. She is a woman of domestic tastes and her little dinners have won for her the distinction of being an excellent cook. Miss Taylor is attractive; she is slender, of medium weight, and has an abundance of reddish-brown curly hair, with blue eyes and a very fair complexion.

Miss Taylor, one of the prettiest actresses of the Universal west coast studios, is blessed with a vivacious and attractive personality. The numerous pictures that she has appeared in, including "Chivalry," have been greatly enhanced because of this dominant personal magnetism of the star.

She is lively enough at times to carry a scene by her very presence, but when her role calls for more serious efforts she acquits herself with just as much credit. Versatility is hers, and she is equally at home in an emotional or a light bit. She has received lessons in varying phases of the art from the best directors.

ROBERT LEONARD AND ELLA HALL, UNIVERSAL STARS

OF the big producing staff of the Universal company there are no more popular players than Robert Z. Leonard and Ella Hall, who for the past year have been featured together in Rex subjects and appeared in the featured parts of the big Universal serial "The Master Key," together with a number of Broadway features.

Robert Leonard, directing and playing many of his own leads, began his professional life in Denver, Col., where as a boy he played super parts. About ten years ago he became a member of the California Opera company. Later he became comedian, assistant manager, stage manager, property man, and door keeper. He appeared first in "The Bohemian Girl," and has sung in over a hundred operas. Later he was with dramatic companies, and more than three years ago became a member of the Universal stock company, playing juvenile leads.

He played leads opposite Margarita Fischer. In Mr. Turner's "Robinson Crusoe," "Shon, the Piper," and as lead in the Westerly detective series. He was made director almost two years ago, and has since directed and played his own leads. His recent production is "That Lass O' Lowries" with Helen Ware in five reels. He directed the making of "Renunciation" with Julia Dean in the featured part.

Mr. Leonard is one of the most able directors of the Universal staff. He is master of the technique of the photoplay, and in addition to directing and playing leads, he writes many of his own stories.

ELLA HALL, leading woman for Mr. Leonard and star in Universal Broadway features, is a New York girl, born in 1897, and educated in a private school. Her professional career began in 1909 with David Belasco in "The Grand Army Man" and Isabel Irving.

In the following year she did her first work in pictures under the direction of D. W. Griffith, playing for two years in various parts. She was with the Reliance company, New York, for six months, and then became a member of the Universal stock. In the recent production of "Jewel," Miss Hall appeared in the name part. In "That Lass o' Lowries" she appeared as the Rector's daughter in support of Helen Ware. In "The Master Key" series she was the heroine. Miss Hall is fond of playing little girl parts, for which she is an adept, being but five feet one inch in height and weighing but one hundred and five pounds.

MYRTLE GONZALEZ, LEADS, UNIVERSAL

AN artist in photoplays who prior to becoming a motion picture actress had little or no experience, and from the first was successful as a leading woman is Myrtle Gonzalez, now playing featured leads for Universal films.

A little more than four years ago Miss Gonzalez applied for a position with a motion picture company, and her first application placed with the Vitagraph company resulted in her engagement, and for more than four years she remained with this company, playing leads in subjects of various sizes from one-reel pictures to six-reelers like the Blue Ribbon feature, "Capt. Alvarez."

The little experience Miss Gonzalez had on the legitimate stage was in drama with the Belasco stock company in Los Angeles, and in child parts at the Auditorium. While playing at the Belasco she was urged by motion picture exhibitors to become a motion picture actress and she followed their suggestion.

Of the many good subjects Miss Gonzalez has appeared in she is particularly pleased with the part assigned her in "Ghosts" made in two reels, "His Wife and His Work," "Capt. Alvarez," "The Great Game of Life," "Troubled Waters," "The Golden Grain," and that recent success, "The Chalice of Courage," in which she played the featured part of Enid Maitland.

Following a number of engagements as a child actress Miss Gonzalez entered Sacred Heart Convent in Los Angeles, where she remained a student until she completed the course. It was following this that she was a favorite in stock, and took up motion picture work.

Her education well adapts her for screen acting, and in addition she is a talented musician, both vocally and instrumentally. Recently she has favored a number of exhibitors in Los Angeles by appearing at their respective theatres and singing solos.

During school days Miss Gonzalez took advantage of securing an athletic training, learning to swim, ride and play gymnasium games. In her picture work she has played parts that required very daring feats and in all of these she refused to permit the director to have anyone double for her.

Recently Miss Gonzalez has appeared in the leading parts of "The Pinnacle of Success," "Riches," each of three reels, and "The Cross."

Miss Gonzalez is an ideal leading woman, being but a few inches more than five feet in height. She has light brown hair and eyes that photograph well. She is a native daughter of California, was born in Los Angeles, where she has lived all her life despite the fact that she has gained a world-wide reputation.

EDWIN N. WALLOCK, DIRECTOR, UNIVERSAL

EDWIN N. WALLOCK, late director with Balboa Amusement Producing Company, the Jackie Saunders Feature Play company, and now on his way to the Orient with the Henry McRae Universal company, was born at Council Bluffs, Iowa, in 1878. He spent six years at Benedictine University, Atchison, Kan., where he received two degrees.

For eighteen years he has been engaged in the theatrical profession as actor, manager and producer. His first dramatic training was received under the late Thomas W. Keene, the tragedian. For twelve years he was stock leading man and producer, serving in Spooner stock and the Woodward stock at Omaha.

Entering the motion picture field six years ago he served as producer for two years. For about four years he was with the Selig West Coast studio stock, playing leads and heavies. He appeared in eleven episodes of "The Adventures of Kathlyn," and one of his best subjects was "In Tune with the Wild," in which he played lead opposite Kathlyn Williams. He has also written a number of scenarios.

It is due to the extensive experience that Mr. Wallock has obtained through years of hard work on the dramatic stage that he was selected as director with the Henry McRae-Universal company which is to tour the Orient.

The wide variety of pictures to be produced by this company of touring Universalites necessitates a complete knowledge of the habits and customs of all people in order to give each picture that is sent to the Universal's distributing offices the required air of realism.

While with the Selig company, where Mr. Wallock appeared in and directed many of the animal pictures, he gained extensive information concerning both India and Africa, where many of these productions were staged. The scenarios called for entire exterior settings, supposed to represent these southern countries, and naturally Mr. Wallock is already familiar by way of these pictures with the country over which the Henry McRae company of players is to travel.

MAUDE GEORGE, HEAVY LEADS, UNIVERSAL

MAUDE GEORGE, playing heavy leads in Universal Broadway features made under the direction of Otis Turner, is a California girl who chose the stage for her career nine years ago. She was born at Riverside, Cal., 1890, completed the course in the grammar and high schools, and took a special course at the Comnock School of Expression in Los Angeles.

Miss George's first engagement was in the Burbank stock company at Los Angeles, where she played in support of Blanche Hall, Harry Mestayer, Wm. Desmond, A. Byron Beasley, and a number of others, who are now prominent on the American stage and in pictures.

For two seasons she was with Conrad Le Marie in a headline act booked over the Orpheum time, during which engagement she played lead, and then took the part created by Valerie Bergere in the vaudeville sketch, "The Sultan's Favorite," in which part she remained for one season over big-time circuits.

Miss George did her first work in pictures in 1914 when she was engaged by the Universal company, playing leads under the direction of Charles Giblyn. Later she was transferred to the Universal feature companies and has since played in many of the Broadway star features.

The first was in support of Hobart Bosworth in "The Little Brother of the Rich." She impersonated Blanche in "Both Sides of Life," sharing lead honors with Ella Hall.

She appeared in several numbers of "The Black Box" series, and played a part in "Cigarette," produced by the Smalleys. In "The Frame-Up" Miss George played the lead opposite George Fawcett, and was with Nat Goodwin in "Business Is Business."

In "Big Bill Brendt," with Hobart Bosworth she played the leading heavy, and her recent work was that in the adaptation from the Meredith Nicholson story, "Pennington's Legacy," in which J. Warren Kerrigan was featured. The last three named were all made under the direction of Otis Turner.

Miss George has confined her work on the stage as well as in pictures principally to the heavy parts, fully realizing that in the portrayal of these she could never gain public favor as is the good fortune of the actress who plays the heroine, but knowing she was best suited for such impersonations she preferred to be artistic, and so took up the playing of these which required more talent. Miss George is 5 feet 7 inches in height. She has an olive complexion, dark brown eyes and raven hair. That she should be selected by Otis Turner to play in features produced by him is a distinct honor.

CLEO MADISON, LEADS, UNIVERSAL

CLEO MADISON, for several years Universal leading woman, has the distinction of being one of the very few successful women motion picture directors. Several months ago she was induced to attempt to direct a picture, and her first subject met with such favorable criticism that she was retained in the position as director, and continues to play her own lead parts.

Included in the list of subjects made under the direction of Miss Madison are: "The Cowboy Girl," "Liquid Dynamite," "Live and Let Live" and "The Wooing of Juanita," all two and three-reel subjects of unusual merit.

Miss Madison is perhaps best known as leading woman of the Gold Seal Brand, and for her portrayal of the part as the wife of Pythias in the Universal multiple reel adaptation of "Damon and Pythias."

Miss Madison was born in a little Illinois town, and received her education in the common and high schools of Bloomington. Shortly after her graduation, the family moved to California.

After their arrival in the West, Miss Madison began looking around for something to do. Then it was that the stage suggested itself. She therefore began preparing for that line of work with very much the same feelings that she would have had if she were learning stenography. It was a means of achieving success.

Seven years ago a dramatic teacher of the West was about to start on a tour of the coast with a company of amateurs. Miss Madison approached him for a place and was given a "bit." She did so well in rehearsals that she was given a lead.

There was no money in it, but it meant real experience. Returning to Los Angeles, she received her first real part, a leading role in Haddon Chambers' "Captain Swift," with a repertoire company. Then followed an engagement with Oliver Morosco in stock at the Burbank theatre, Los Angeles, following which she played a short stock engagement with James K. Hackett.

Her next work was with Virginia Harned. She played lead in a dramatic sketch for one season over the Orpheum circuit, and gained much experience. The next year she not only played the leading parts, but directed the production of many plays. This caused a failure of her health, and she went to Los Angeles for a vacation with her parents.

It was while in Los Angeles that she decided to enter pictures and was first engaged by the Universal company. Since then she has played leads in many pictures. Her work as director has been equally successful.

MARGUERITE WHISTLER, CHARACTER WOMAN, UNIVERSAL

MARGUERITE WHISTLER, playing second lead, heavies, and character leads for the Universal company, is a Kentucky woman, born at Louisville, 1888, and was educated at Notre Dame College, Washington, D. C.

Miss Whistler has had a varied experience in the theatrical profession, playing all over Europe and America in animal acts, vaudeville, and for a year and eight months was with the Bostock Trained Animals at Coney Island. With this act she traveled extensively.

Miss Whistler played her first theatrical engagement at the Columbia, Washington, D. C., where she remained for two and a half years. She was with Blanche Bates one season in "The Girl of Wall Street," and "The Arcadians" one season.

She entered motion pictures in 1911 with the Lubin company, playing the mother part in "The Heart of Tessie." Her first work with the Universal was in 1912, and she has since appeared in a number of its successful subjects, including "The Campbells Are Coming," "Call of the Waves," and "The Symphony of the Violin," all made by the Francis Ford company.

She has played character leads for the Al Curtis company and general stock, and heavies and leads. Recently she has played with Cleo Madison in "Alas and Alack," "The Cowboy Girl," and appeared in "The Silent Battle" and "The Sacrifice of Jonathan Grey." Miss Whistler is a painter and designer of gowns; she has planned all those worn by Cleo Madison.

AGNES VERNON, INGENUE LEADS, UNIVERSAL

AGNES VERNON, known to all photoplayers of Los Angeles as "Brownie," has had a very remarkable career in motion pictures, and her success has been the comment of much favorable talk in film circles.

Miss Vernon was born at La Granade, near Portland, Ore., in 1896, and complains that she has never received any birthday presents because her friends give them all to her on Christmas day. She was educated at convents in Kansas City and Chicago, and did her first work in pictures in March, 1913.

Miss Vernon began as an extra girl, but aptness in appreciating situations and portraying them for the film soon brought promotion. For a long period she played under the direction of Charles Giblyn in two and three reel Universal subjects.

In "The Three Mothers" she impersonated the child part, and in "The Girl of the Dance Hall" played the name part, that of a Western girl who was elevated to social rank.

In "Stumbling" she was a slum girl, and in "Public Approval" a society woman. She played in "The Terror," "In Search of a Wife," and in a number of other Universal pictures to the satisfaction of all who saw her.

Miss Vernon is five feet four inches in height, weighs one hundred and fifteen pounds, and although the pictures portray her as having dark hair, it is in reality very light. Miss Vernon has been able to perform all kinds of athletic feats required in the parts for which she has been cast. She is particularly fond of motoring.

NEIL C. HARDIN, JUVENILE AND HEAVY LEADS, UNIVERSAL

NEIL CAMERON HARDIN, a graduate of the University of Michigan, is a protege of Allan Darnaby, former stage director for Richard Mansfield, student of classical and modern dances under the Castles, and an all-around athlete with a Michigan boxing championship. He is a member of the Universal Pacific Coast studios stock company, playing heavies and juvenile leads.

Mr. Hardin was born at Louisiana, Mo., in 1886. After graduation he practiced law in Missouri for about five years. Then he was with Darnaby for two years.

Early in 1915 Mr. Hardin visited Universal City and became interested in the making of pictures. From the first he did well under the direction of Otis Turner in "The Black Box" series as the secretary.

In "The Broken Coin" serial he appeared as the spy with Francis Ford and Grace Cunard. He was juvenile lead in "The Unmasked Substitute" under the direction of William C. Dowlan, and played heavy in "The Mills of Greed" by the same director.

Mr. Hardin's athletic training during his university life has served him well. One of his sensational acts was that of leaping from a bridge 75 feet above the water in Otis Turner's "The Scarlet Sin." Mr. Hardin is a descendant of the Hardins of Kentucky, a son of N. C. Hardin, former Missouri representative, and is a lineal descendant of Revolutionary ancestors.

In his native state Mr. Hardin is referred to as one of the "Hardins o' Kentucky, Suh," and his father was one of the makers of the present constitution of the State of Missouri.

Mr. Hardin is one of the most versatile men of the Universal stock company. His work has been recognized by the directors, and as a result he is given some very exceptional parts.

Mr. Hardin is one of the most valuable men in the Universal capitol. He plays with every company in the organization and sometimes has scenes for several pictures to be made in the same day. His versatility is of course partially responsible for the continued demand that directors make on his services, but he is as well a daring player.

Whenever a script calls for a fearless jump or fall, producers know that Mr. Hardin is ready to perform any stunt within reason, or without reason for that matter, for the good of the picture.

In "The Broken Coin" he did very sensational work, as well as demonstrating his ability as an actor.

ED GIBSON, JUVENILE LEADS, UNIVERSAL

ED GIBSON, playing juvenile leads with Western Universal, was born at Tekamoh, Neb., in 1892. Mr. Gibson became an expert rider at sixteen and followed the National Riding contest. He remained at this for four years, and during that time took first prize at some of the greatest contests held in the United States.

He won a belt for all around riding at Pendelton, Ore., in 1912. At Salt Lake City in 1913 he carried away many prizes. He went to Australia with the Bud Atkinson circus, where he did roping and riding for this organization, the largest of its kind that ever toured the Island.

One of his early engagements was riding companion for Dick Stanley during the season of 1909 and 1910.

Mr. Gibson's first motion picture engagement was in 1911 with the Selig company, when he played the juvenile lead in "Shotgun Jones." At the Kalem company he played juvenile leads in "The Hazards of Helen" series, and for a time appeared in the Nestor Universal Brand. In the first Harry Carey five reel subject, "A Knight of the Range," being filmed under the direction of Jacques Jaccard, he is playing the juvenile heavy. He received unstinted praise for his excellent work in this stirring Western picture.

Mr. Gibson is almost five feet ten inches in height, weighs one hundred and sixty pounds; is an expert swimmer and an excellent shot.

Mr. Gibson's recent releases are "The Cowboy Girl," in which he played juvenile lead; "Judge Not," and in the Robert Leonard subject. "That Lass o' Lowrie's."

HECTOR V. SARNO, HEAVY LEADS, UNIVERSAL

HECTOR V. SARNO, heavy, with the Universal "Graft" serial company, was born at Naples, Italy, in 1880. He received his education during his army training and travels throughout Europe and the United States.

Before entering the theatrical profession, Mr. Sarno had the distinction of being a lieutenant of a sharpshooting regiment in Italy, called Bersaglieri.

His first theatrical experience was in stock with Novelli in Italy. After long experience with stock companies in Italy he came to America and took up the work of foreign correspondent in French, Spanish, Italian, Portuguese and English. His knowledge of the customs of foreign nations has made him a versatile actor in pictures.

In 1910 Mr. Sarno entered motion pictures with Vitagraph and remained with it for a year and a half. After an engagement with the Imp he went to Florida to do work in animal pictures with Captain Bonavita.

After this engagement he played leads with the Reliance, and then joined Biograph, where he played leads and heavies, taking the parts of Mexicans, Italians, Arabians, Spanish and others.

Some of his best pictures he considers "The Ring and the Book," "Under the Guest Light," "The Woman in Black," "The Power of the Press," "Man's Enemy," "Pere Goriot," "The Soul of a Peer," besides a number of one-reel subjects.

His appearance is suitable for the foreign parts he portrays in pictures.

HERBERT RAWLINSON, LEADS, UNIVERSAL

HERBERT RAWLINSON, Universal's popular star and athlete, was born at Brighton, England, and received his education there and in France. A thorough mastery of the French language has stood him in good stead in his many years in the legitimate drama.

His three years in France as a student; his training in the English naval reserve, where at twenty-two he held three amateur championships, single scull, road mile and long distance swimming; his remarkable experiences as a globe-trotter, his thorough knowledge of stagecraft, his splendid athletic ability, all of these combined with an optimistic nature make him fitted to portray the characterizations he has given the lovers of screen art.

His portrayal of Pythias, the Grecian general, in "Damon and Pythias"; the pugilist in "Kid Reagan's Hands"; the title role in Fennimore Cooper's "The Spy"; Ted Allen in "The Social Lion," and Sanford Quest, the scientific detective, in "The Black Box," thirty reel serial, has proved him a conscientious actor.

His debut in pictures was with the Selig company, followed by an engagement in Jack London's "Sea Wolf," Bosworth, Inc., after which he was contracted with Universal for two years.

Throughout his career he has kept his love for athletics. He is twenty-eight years old and is six feet in height.

Herbert Rawlinson is a sound thinking man whose success has been won cleanly on his merits rather than by any amount of clever advertising. There are few more virile actors, mentally or physically, than he. Athletics is a hobby of his.

OTIS TURNER, DIRECTOR, UNIVERSAL

OTIS TURNER, Universal director, was born in Fairfield, Ind., and was educated in Indianapolis. His dramatic work began at eighteen and continued until he began directing for the Selig company in Chicago nine years ago. Mr. Turner remained with the Selig company four years. He spent one year as director for the Imp company, and for the past four years has been producing for Universal.

To Mr. Turner is accredited the production of the first wild animal picture made in America, Selig's "Hunting Big Game in Africa"; the first feature picture made in America, the Selig release, "Spirit of '76"; The first war picture, "Stormy Days in Old Virginia"; the first Western, "The Cowboy Millionaire," and the first three-reel American subject, "The Coming of Columbus." Included in the list of artists who have come under his direction are: Mabel Taliaferro, Tom Carrigan, Fred Walton, Ethel Grandin, Kathlyn Williams, Charles Clary, Harry Pollard, Margarita Fischer, Frank Weed, Tom Mix, Myrtle Stedman, Robert Leonard, Edna Maison, Herbert Rawlinson, William Worthington and Anna Little.

He conceived the idea for the remarkable detective series, "The Black Box," produced "Damon and Pythias," and recently completed Universal Broadway features, starring Nat Goodwin, George Fawcett, Hobart Bosworth, J. Warren Kerrigan and others. His experience covers everything from blackface to managing a circus, and producing for Henry Miller, Henry W. Savage and others.

JOHN H. COAKLEY, TECHNICAL DIRECTOR, UNIVERSAL

ALMOST important member of any motion picture producing company is the technical director who plans and arranges all settings, and upon whom depends the selection and arrangement of all furnishings that add realism and give the picture the turn of perfection.

Director Otis Turner, producer of Universal Broadway features, realized the importance of the position of technical director, and induced the company to engage John H. Coakley, who gives his entire attention to the arrangements of all sets for Mr. Turner's big productions.

Mr. Coakley has devoted his life since he was nineteen to his work as a scenic artist, and was employed at the Lee Lash studios in New York. His ability won promotion and he became foreman, which position he held for two years.

Following this he became technical director for the Universal, and he supervised the preparations of all settings for the Turner production, "Damon and Pythias."

The skill of Mr. Coakley was very apparent in the Fiction Pictures subject, "The Spanish Jade," for which he supervised the reproduction of many old Spanish scenes.

Several months ago he returned to the Universal. He supervised "The Frame-Up," starring George Fawcett. At present he is engaged in completing settings for the five part Broadway feature, "Pennington's Legacy," in which J. W. Kerrigan appears. Mr. Coakley is familiar with all details of this kind of work, and those who know speak of him as a master in this line.

WILLIAM GARWOOD, LEADS, UNIVERSAL

WILLIAM GARWOOD, of the Universal, came from Springfield, Mo., and was educated there. He entered the dramatic world at the Elich Gardens in Denver, where he played juveniles. Like so many other motion picture actors he played with a number of stock companies.

He has acted with Virginia Harned, with Kyrle Bellew and Miller Kent, and was with Dustin Farnum in "Cameo Kirby." He was also under the Frohman management for a long time.

He joined Thanhouser for one picture, but so well did he do in his first attempt that he stayed with the Thanhouser and the Majestic companies for three years.

He became a member of the American company at Santa Barbara, where he acted with Vivian Rich.

William Garwood left the American to join the Universal, and for many months worked under the Imp Brand in the East. Recently he traveled west to assume the lead in the big serial, "The Journal of Lord John."

He is an excellent athlete, and he keeps himself in the very best of condition all the time. He is in love with his work, and never allows himself to remain idle—he is advancing continuously.

Always well groomed, debonair and smiling, William Garwood is a pleasant fellow to meet, and he is a splendid and convincing actor as well, with a peculiar finish to his work that makes it individual.

Garwood is about as popular with his brother and sister artists as any actor in the game. He is a pleasant personality and is a gentleman through and through. Scarcely less is his popularity with audiences the country over.

ALLEN CURTIS, UNIVERSAL JOKER COMEDIES

ALLEN CURTIS, originator of the Joker comedies, and since the organization of the company almost three years ago its director, has carved a name for himself in filmdom by the making of one comedy a week for the past three years.

Mr. Curtis received his experience on the legitimate stage where he was with Weber and Fields for three seasons. Ward and Vokes for one season; played in stock at the Chicago Orpheum Music Hall, and for eight years had his own company, the Allen Curtis Musical Comedy Company, which played through the Middle and Western states.

He was educated in the New York public schools, and his birthplace was New York City. He was born Febuary 5, 1879.

Three years ago he became affiliated with the Universal and for a time was engaged in making comedies which were released on the Imp and Powers brand.

During his connection with the Universal Company he has made more than two hundred comedies, many of which he has written himself. Of the recent successes in this line is that of the "Lady Baffles and Detective Duck" series, which was originated by him and have proven very popular.

The esteem and consideration held for Mr. Curtis is shown in the honor bestowed upon him by his election to the office of secretary of the Motion Picture Directors' Association.

Whenever any special comedy production is needed, or the organization takes part in public entertainment Mr. Curtis is usually called upon and acquits himself with credit. His personal popularity at Universal City is considerable.

MARSHALL STEDMAN, DIRECTOR, UNIVERSAL

MARSHALL STEDMAN, at the mammoth producing plant of the Universal company at Universal City, is a native of Bethel, Maine; educated at Newport, R. I., and at Colorado College, where he completed a literary course. He took up the stage almost immediately after college, his first engagement being with William Morris as juvenile lead in "The Wandering Jew" and "Lost Paradise." With the E. H. Sothern Company, for several years, he appeared as juvenile lead in "The Adventures of Lady Ursula," "Change Alley," "Lord Chumley," "The Lady of Lyons," "The Enemy of the King" and "King of the Musketeers." After a gold seeking experience in Colorado he returned to Chicago, where he taught acting for four years at the Chicago Musical College. From there he entered pictures at the Chicago Selig studios as an actor and scenario writer, and remained for five yeers. He then became manager of the Selig company on its western trip to Canyon City, Colorado, and produced a number of pictures, including "The Brand Blotter," "A Motorcycle Adventure," "The Cattle Rustlers," "The Tribal War," "'Tween Love and War," "The Suffragette," "The Saint and the Siwash," "The Mantle of Red Evans," "Object Matrimony" and "Rhoedrick's Ride."

Following an engagement with the then newly organized Bosworth, Inc., where he remained until in March of that year, Mr. Stedman became one of the four business managers of the Universal studio, resulting in his promotion to his present position. In this Mr. Stedman has a little of everything to do. Mr. Stedman knows every detail of the motion picture business, and is a very capable man.

SYDNEY AYRES, DIRECTOR, UNIVERSAL

SYDNEY AYRES, star, director and author with the Universal company, was born at Tarrytown, N. Y., in 1882, and his first legitimate stage engagement was in the part of Little Lord Fauntleroy, which he played over the Western country. He played the part of the little colonel in the original New York production of "The Clausman," and was author and star of "Texas" in the New York production and en route. He was stock star for Oliver Morosco's Belasco theatre, Los Angeles; Alcazar at San Francisco, and put on a headline vaudeville act over the Orpheum and Eastern vaudeville circuits, entitled "A Call of the Wild." For a time Mr. Ayres was leading man for Wilton Lackaye in the W. A. Brady production of Hall Caine's "Bondman."

Mr. Ayres did his first motion-picture work with Thomas H. Ince, when he was one of the two original producers of two and three reel productions made by the NYMP. Following this he was with Selig and Edison, and director of the first company at the American Film company's studio at Santa Barbara, California.

Mr. Ayres is now in his second year as acting director for the Universl company, producing three and five reel features. Among the subjects he has written, produced and acted are "On Desert Sands," "Tiny Hands," "Does It End Right?" "The Killing," "The Amber Vase," and a three reel feature by F. McGrew Willis and himself in which he played the lead.

As a director, Mr. Ayres has proved his inexhaustible versatility time after time, and is today recognized as one of the most reliable in the business.

FREDERICK CHURCH, JUVENILE LEADS, UNIVERSAL

FREDERICK CHURCH, juvenile leading man of the Universal, has been playing in pictures since 1907, when he accepted his first engagement under the direction of Frank Boggs. Mr. Church was born in Quebec, Canada, in 1889, and after an education in the public schools in Michigan entered vaudeville. He became a stock player in the principal cities of the Middle West for the next three years.

Mr. Church's motion picture career began with a juvenile lead in "The Cowboy's Baby," for the Selig Company. Other subjects for Selig were "The Mad Miner" and "The Book Agent," the latter a comedy. In 1908 he joined Essanay, direction of G. M. Anderson, playing juvenile leads in the Broncho Billy series, and was afterwards featured in "The Cast of the Die," "The End of the Circle," and many others.

In 1914 he was featured on the United program in Premier Brand. In 1915 he joined Universal and has been playing juvenile leads there since that time. He supported Frank Keenan in "The Long Chance," from the Peter B. Kyne story. His recent work was juvenile lead in "The Flirt," adapted from the Booth Tarkington novel and produced by the Smalleys.

Mr. Church is six feet in height, weighs one hundred and seventy-eight pounds, is dark complexioned, with dark hair and eyes. He has been very successful in athletics and can swim, ride, row, and is fond of indoor sports; sings, plays on the piano and stringed instruments.

MAY ELMORE BENSEN, CHARACTER WOMAN, UNIVERSAL

MAY ELMORE BENSEN, known as "Mother Bensen," is one of the most interesting women in motion pictures, and one of the very few who frankly tell their age. She was born in New York, 1854, and attended schools there and in Boston. She became a teacher and later a professional reader. For some time she was on the Lyceum platform, and at various times did legitimate stage work. She is decidedly well informed, a serious thinker, and an authority on many questions. She can speak several languages, and decides all questions pertaining to English for her associates. She was educated in music and became known as a singer.

She went to California twenty-six years ago. Her first work in pictures was done in 1912 under the direction of Alan Dwan with Murdock MacQuarrie and Pauline Bush. Her first picture was "The Jewel of Sacrifice," in which she played the part of the wife. Recently she appeared in "The Old Cobbler," "The Foundling," "Father Time," an allegorical subject.

She was featured in "Their Golden Wedding," with Charles "Daddy" Manley. Recently she appeared in "In the Folds of the Flag," "The Measure of Leon Duhrey," and in "Mary Ana" she took the part of the blind wife. She had a very good part in "The White Feather," a recent anti-war picture.

Mother Bensen is of a sunny disposition, and as her nickname implies, is mother to all the players at Universal City. Her hair, once dark, is now slightly gray, and she has bright blue eyes.

LULE WARRENTON, LEADS, UNIVERSAL

LULE WARRENTON, character leading woman of the Universal West Coast studios, has been on the stage practically all her life. She was born at Flint, Mich., in 1863, and was educated at the Convent St. Roses and the University of Michigan.

She did child parts under the management of her uncle, Sheridan Corbyn. One season in Shakesperian leads with W. V. Rauona was followed by stock engagements in heavies. After three seasons on the Lyceum platform giving readings, she returned to the legitimate stage. In Los Angeles she did character work for six seasons, and then went into pictures.

She joined Universal in October, 1912, and has since played leading character parts. She played in character comedy leads for ten months. She was with the Smalleys in "The King Can Do No Wrong," "The Jew's Christmas" and others. After four months in general stock with several different Universal companies, she became a member of the Henry McRae 101 Bison. She accompanied them to the Hawaiian Islands and created Hawaiian parts, and appeared in the male role of the Chinese Mandarin. In "Jewel" she appeared as the housekeeper, and with Pauline Bush in the "Such Is Life" series made by Director Joseph DeGrasse. In "The Frame-Up," produced by Otis Turner, she appeared in the character heavy.

Mrs. Warrenton's experience in the photoplay art is depended upon by Universal directors for most difficult impersonations. She is five feet six inches in height, weighs one hundred and fifty pounds, and has brown hair and blue eyes.

HENRY OTTO, DIRECTOR, UNIVERSAL

HENRY OTTO, known in Los Angeles as "The artistic producer," is at present directing Hobart Henley and company in feature productions at the Universal studios, California.

He was born in Birmingham, Ala., and was educated for the priesthood, but he yearned for the stage and, having a fine baritone voice, finally obtained a position with a small burlesque company.

Following this Mr. Otto studied voice culture and appeared with several stock companies, after which he joined a traveling opera company as the Duke in "Olivette." He toured the Middle West with the Franklin Hunt Comic Opera Company.

Later came an engagement with Richard Mansfield in "In Old Heidelberg," after which he became ill and had to rest up for a year.

Henry Otto appeared in New York with Henry W. Savage in "The Devil," Edwin Stevens starring. In the Orpheum circuit he appeared in "The Drums of Doone" with Minnie Seligman.

Henry Otto entered motion pictures with the Nestor company in leads for a year. He then joined the Selig company, with whom he stayed for two years. He produced for the Balboa company "A Will o' the Wisp," "Gypsy Love," "The Message of the Mind" and "The Siege of Jealousy," among other pictures.

Later he became a producer with the American company at Santa Barbara, where he added very considerably to his reputation as a maker of pictures "which count," some of his pictures being masterpieces. He left to join Universal, and has since made a number of notable three and five reel subjects, including "Undine."

BERTRAM GRASSBY, LEADS, UNIVERSAL

BERTRAM GRASSBY, well known on the legitimate stage, with the Shuberts for many years, is another actor to enter the motion picture field. He is now with the Turner-Universal.

Mr. Grassby was born in England in 1890. He came to this country with his parents and received his education here.

One of his first engagements on the legitimate stage was with Virginia Harned in "Anna Karenina." He received many favorable press notices, Alan Dale in the American stating that aside from John Mason, Mr. Grassby was the best member of the cast.

Following this Mr. Grassby played a season with Bertha Kalish in "Martha of the Lowlands" at the Garden theatre, New York, in the role of Morrucho. Later came a number of months in stock, and then his appearance in the part of Tweed Bix in "The Three of Us," Jose in "The Pretty Sister of Jose," and Sebastian Pasquale in the photodramatization of "The Morals of Marcus."

In the long run of "Havana," starring James T. Powers at the Casino, Mr. Grassby interpreted the part of the young Cuban, Roderigo. For three seasons he appeared with Maxine Elliott, and was a member of the original all-star cast of "The Modern Eve" during its Chicago run.

Mr. Grassby went to the West Coast early this year and played seven months in subjects of the Selig Polyscope, and in September he went with the Universal, where he has been assigned important parts.

FLORINE HANNA, LEADS, UNIVERSAL

FLORINE HANNA, of the Universal company, was born in Madisonville, Ky., where she received her education in private, puhlic and high schools, and at Douglass College, Cairo, Ill.

She has had an extended theatrical experience covering a period of ten years in light opera, musical comedy and dramatic companies. Her first engagement in theatrical work was with the Delmar Opera company at St. Louis, Mo., under the management of Samuel Gomparts. Then followed engagements with several road attractions, dramatic and musical comedy companies. During the last five years prior to entering motion pictures she was engaged with several permanent theatrical stock companies, including the Woodward stock at Kansas City, Wolfe stock at Wichita, Kan., Fulton stock at Lincoln, Neb., Imperial at St. Louis, and the West End Heights stock company of the same city, in all of which she scored decisively, and covered herself with dramatic glory.

Her motion picture experience covers engagements with the Warner Features, the St. Louis Motion Picture Company, and the Universal, where she is now playing emotional and heavy leads. She considers some of her best pictures "The Gypsy's Warning," "The Sand Rat," "The Black Pearl," "The Peril of the Plains," "The Taint," all of which were three reel features. Her work in "Released from the Burning Stake" was considered exceptionally good.

Miss Hanna is of medium height, has very dark hair and eyes, and is possessed of a pleasing personality.

JOSEPH J. FRANZ, DIRECTOR, UNIVERSAL

JOSEPH J. FRANZ, director of 101 Bison, was born at Utica, N. Y., in 1883. He was educated at Utica, and attended Christian Brothers Academy.

Mr. Franz had ten years' experience in the theatrical field before taking up motion pictures. His first engagement was with the St. Louis Motion Picture Company filming Frontier Brand, released on the Universal program, and later the Premier for the United program.

He remained with this company three years, and his next engagement was in the filming of Warner's features. For six months he served at the Santa Barhara Motion Picture Company, making subjects for the Kriterion, and has been with the Universal for the past six months.

Some of his best motion picture productions are "The Ghost Wagon," three reels; "Queen of Jungleland," by James Oliver Curwood; "Superior Claim," three reels; "What the River Foretold," by Peter B. Kyne, three reels; and "The Voice of the Wilderness," three reels. He is a member of the Motion Picture Directors' Association.

Mr. Franz's theatrical experience covers a wide range as actor and director. He was with Elsie DeTourney in Shakesperian repertoire. Then followed several years with traveling repertoire companies and high class road houses, including "The Lion and the Mouse," "The Squaw Man," "Three Weeks," and others.

The next five years of his legitimate stage experience were with stock companies in the East and West.

OLIVE FULLER GOLDEN, LEADS, UNIVERSAL

OLIVE FULLER GOLDEN, playing leads under the direction of Jacques Jaccard, opposite Harry Carey at Universal City, was horn in 1896, in New York. She is the daughter of George Fuller Golden, founder of the White Rats.

Although only nineteen, Miss Golden has had a long and varied experience on the legitimate stage and in motion pictures. She studied under a private tutor while traveling around the world with her father, and much of her stage experience has been with him. She was in vaudevile on the Orpheum circuit in this country, and at the Palace Theatre, London, for one year.

Her first motion picture experience was with the Biograph company in Los Angeles, in 1914. She played opposite Eddie Dillon, and later under D. W. Griffith. She left the Biograph company to play Teola in "Tess of the Storm Country," Famous Players, featuring Mary Pickford.

Some of her pictures with the Universal are: "To Redeem an Oath," ingenue lead opposite Frank Lloyd; "Dr. Mason's Temptation" and "In the Grasp of the Law," opposite Millard K. Wilson; the part of Dora in "Manna," a three reel Universal Gold Seal subject, in which she gave an enviable impersonation.

She played opposite J. W. Kerrigan in the fifth episode of the "Terrence O'Rourke" series; the ingenue lead in "Just Jim," a four reel Broadway feature; and in "The Knight of the Range," a five reel Broadway star feature.

Miss Golden is five feet five inches in height, weighs one hundred and twenty pounds, has curly blonde hair, and dark blue gray eyes.

HARRY CAREY, LEADS, UNIVERSAL

HARRY CAREY, of the Universal Broadway Western subjects, of five reels or more, is an author, actor and plainsman, whose varied experiences have increased his ahility as an actor, and aid him in giving the screen exceptional subjects of a Western type.

Mr. Carey was horn in New York City in 1880; attended Hamilton Military Academy and New York University. He has written and starred in dramas of a Western type. Of the list of plays Mr. Carey has written and played in the most prominent are "Montana," "Heart of Alaska," "Five Women and That Man," "Dacotah," and vaudeville sketches. In addition to this he has also an extensive stock experience. For a time he was prospector and cowboy, and has traveled very extensively.

Mr. Carey's first motion picture experience was with the Griffith-Biograph where he played with Kirkwood and Walthall. "The Master Cracksman," in which he was starred, was written by him. Another early release was "The Martin Mystery." In May, 1915, Mr. Carey joined Universal, and played in "Just Jim" and "Judge Not," each of five reels and produced from his original scenarios.

Mr. Carey is an all around athlete, and during his school days won many contests. For a time he was middleweight hoxing champion of New York State. He is an expert rider, roper and swimmer. In the selection of Mr. Carey to head the recently organized Western company, the Universal officers decided that he is the best exponent of the pioneer day hero. The pictures he has appeared in have proved the soundness of their judgment.

JACQUES JACCARD, DIRECTOR, UNIVERSAL

JACQUES JACCARD, director for the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, now producing the series of pictures to be released under the general title of "Little Stories of Real Life," is thirty years of age, and practically all of that time has ben spent in the show business. Mr. Jaccard was born near New York, and soon returned to France with his parents, and during and between engagements as a child actor he secured some education from schools and private tutors. When fourteen years of age he became property man in a New York theatre, and his first part of any great importance was that in the Klaw and Erlanger's spectacular production of "Ben Hur." In this he had a number of important lines and business in the temple scenes. From then on he gave most of his attention to the production end, and was in same on the stage. For four years he was stock producer at some of the best theatres of the country, and then turned his attention to motion pictures.

Five years ago he began the production of his first photoplay, and since has directed for the Universal, International, American, and is now with the Universal. In pictures he has also appeared in the part of juvenile heavy. He has for almost two years been director of the J. Warren Kerrigan-Victor Company, written many of the plays used and adapted the Terrance O'Rourke series. Early this year he accepted an engagement with the American company at Santa Barbara to produce "The Diamond from the Sky," and the first several numbers of this were made by him.

In May Mr. Jaccard returned to the Universal company, and up until this time has been with the Kerrigan-Victor company at Lake Tahoe, where he produced seventeen reels of pictures in fifty working days.

Mr. Jaccard's vast experience as a stage producer and also dirccotor for motion pictures, and his intimate knowledge of stagecraft, makes him a most desirable director both for the manufacturing company and the players working under him. He knows every detail of the business, how all sorts of scenes should be enacted, and never asks his players to do anything that he would not do himself. He is a very proficient scenario writer, and always adds a number of new situations to every photoplay, all of which bespeaks his originality.

EDNA MAISON, LEADS, UNIVERSAL

EDNA MAISON is young in years but old in point of service with the Universal company. Connected with the Nestor company since its consolidation with the Universal, she has never been absent a day. She has played leading parts all this time. Miss Maison is a brunette with expressive eyes. Her Spanish and French descent partly accounts for the fire she puts into her emotional roles and the dainty touch to her comedy parts. She was born in San Francisco and made a name for herself throughout the West as leading contralto with the Tivoli, Edgar Temple operatic companies and the Californians. She was also prominent with the Fischer, Burbank and Cooper stock organizations.

She entered pictures, taking leads with the old Bison company at Santa Monica. An engagement followed with Pathé, after which she joined Nestor, taking leads. During this time she was seen in photoplays covering light comedy chcaracters to vampires. Versatility is one of the most engaging things about this clever actress.

A few of her best parts include "The Dumb Girl of Portici," "The Merchant of Venice," "Richelieu," "Across the Veldt," "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and "Slavery Days."

She is very proud of the car which was presented to her on her return from Chicago with the "Portici" company; is an excellent rider and is fond of home life. Apart from her pleasant disposition she is a capable and conscientious artist and one of the best "all round" actresses in pictures. Her work is well recognized on the screen by all devotees of pictures.

MARC ROBBINS, LEADS, UNIVERSAL

MARC ROBBINS, responsible for many of the characterizations in the Robert Z. Leonard features for the Universal, was born at Cleveland, Ohio, in 1870, and was educated at Washburn College, Topeka, Kan.

His first engagement was with Fanny Davenport, followed by three seasons with R. D. McLean and Marie Prescott. His engagements in stock include a season with the Hopkins at St. Louis, the Gillis at Kansas City, and A. Y. Pearson's "A White Squadron," with Robert Hilliard. For nine seasons he appeared in leads in a Shakespearian repertorie for the Morey stock company, four of these as manager. In "For Her Sake" he toured the West and Middle West, and then became affiliated with Universal, where he did his first picture work.

Since entering pictures Mr. Robbins has taken important parts in the "Terrance O'Rourke" series, playing with Warren Kerrigan, and in Laemmle releases he appeared in the leading parts. He was with the Nat Goodwin "Business Is Business" subject; in the Broadway feature "Judge Not" he appeared with Julia Dean. In "That Lass o' Lowries," a Universal Broadway, Mr. Robbins supported Helen Ware. He played the character lead in "The Little Girl of the Altar," "The Toll of Youth," "The Temptation of Edward Swayne," "The Pawns of Fate" and "Prophet of the Hills."

Mr. Robbins is five feet nine and a half inches in height, weighs one hundred and ninety pounds, has brown eyes, slightly gray hair, and is a master of character parts.

HARRY D. SOUTHARD, JUVENILE LEADS, UNIVERSAL

HARRY D. SOUTHARD, playing juvenile leads for the Universal, has had an eventful career in athletics, in business, on the stage and in pictures. Born in Buffalo, N. Y., in 1886, he attended Riverview Military Academy and Cornell University. Cornell gave him honors in oratory, which in a measure caused him to decide upon a stage career. His first engagement on the legitimate stage was with Klaw and Erlanger. Later he appeared in William A. Brady productions. In "Little Women" he played a leading part, and also in the Selwyn company's "Within the Law." In "The Girl and the Pennant" he took the place of William Courtenay. Mr. Southard also had two years in stock in the principal cities.

His first work in pictures was for the Reliance, direction of Larry McGill, in 1911. Later he played leads for Thanhouser and Kalem, heavies in Pathé productions, and was featured by the Photo Drama Company in "Folks from Way Down East." His Universal engagement began the first of August, last year, when he was assigned to the cast of "That Lass o' Lowries," produced by Robert Z. Leonard and featuring Helen Ware. At New York City, when he was nineteen, Mr. Southard won the short dashes, and running broad jump championship of the State, and engaged with the Buffalo team in the old Eastern Buffalo league. He played professional with the Eries in the Interstate league, and was selected as a member of the all-star Interscholastic football team.

CRAIG HUTCHINSON, DIRECTOR, L-KO, UNIVERSAL

CRAIG HUTCHINSON, director for the L-Ko company, releasing its comedies on the Universal program, is entitled to the distinction of being the youngest director. He is twenty-three years of age, and has been with the motion picture industry one year. He was born at Austin, Minn., in 1892, and attended military school.

Going to the Coast he took up newspaper work and for a time was on local papers, handling athletics. While at this work he became interested in motion picture making, and secured a position at the studio of the Keystone Film Company.

There he decided he could write scenarios, and his first picture was entitled "Love and Dynamite," in which Ford Sterling was featured. After several months at the Keystone as scenario writer, Mr. Hutchinson went with the L-Ko, where in collaboration with Henry "Pathé" Lehrmann, he has written a number of scenarios for their principal comedy productions.

Mr. Lehrmann decided in August that Mr. Hutchinson was fully capable of directing the making of pictures, and assigned him a company. His first subject made was "Father's First Murder," and since he has produced several, including "Blackmail in a Hospital," "Ready for Reno," "A Scandal at Sea," "Mr. Mcidiot's Assassination," and "A Sap Head's Revenge."

Although he has had but a little motion picture experience, Mr. Hutchinson has fully mastered the details of the work, and has a natural ability in seeing, inventing, and recognizing the importance of comedy situations.

WILLIAM J. PILTZ, CHIEF CAMERAMAN, L-KO, UNIVERSAL

WILLIAM J. PILTZ, chief cameraman for the L-Ko company releasing through the Universal, was born at Bayonne, N. J., in 1875, and after his school days became an optician. When the motion picture industry grew in such rapid strides he gave it his attention and learned camera work.

His first engagement in this capacity was with David Horsley at Bayonne, where for two and a half years he was employed in the dark room, and through this work he learned the operation of a camera.

For thirteen months he remained with Horsley after becoming a cameraman, and then accepted a position with the New York Motion Picture Corporation, where he remained for eighteen months as cameraman.

At the end of that engagement he returned to the Centaur studio in the East. Mr. Piltz has been with the L-Ko since the first of March, last year, returning West to accept the position as chief cameraman.

He has worked out a number of new effects of exceptional value to comedy films. He understands every detail of the photographic end of pictures, and is a most valuable employe of the L-Ko institution.

Much of the trick work that is generally present in L-Ko pictures is due to the inventive mind of Mr. Piltz. He has made a careful study of this end of the business as well as devoting much of his attention to the artistic side. Mr. Piltz is also active in the assembling of the L-Ko comedies, a process of slapstick picture producing that counts so much toward their success.

J. G. BLYSTONE, DIRECTOR, L-KO COMEDIES, UNIVERSAL

J. G. BLYSTONE, director for the L-Ko company, producing comedies for the Universal, was born in 1892. He began his motion picture experience four years ago with the Universal company, where he remained for three years.

Before joining the Lehrmann organization, Mr. Blystone directed a Joker company at Universal City, composed of Ernest Shields, Eddie Boland and Betty Schade. His work with this group of players was marked by a true comedy every week. Writing many of his own scenarios for these productions, he soon won for himself an enviable reputation in the field of eccentric comedy.

He was continually striving to gain new trick effects, and reversing the action of the players by back camera action was one of his favorite hobbies, and consequently while at work with this company he made his mark, which led him to his present position.

When Mr. Lehrmann formed the L-Ko producing company and secured his release on the Universal program, Mr. Blystone was engaged as his assistant. Much of the detail of directing the L-Ko pictures now rests on his shoulders.

VICTOR SCHEURICH, CAMERAMAN, L-KO UNIVERSAL

VICTOR SCHEURICH, cameraman for the L-Ko motion picture company, producing for the Universal, with studios in Hollywood, Cal., has had a very extensive experience and traveled in many foreign countries.

He was born in Berlin, Germany, in 1889, and following a high school education he started out to see the world. Up to this time he has been in Germany, France, England and America.

In 1896 he did his first motion picture camera work, and since that time has devoted his attention to this vocation. First Mr. Scheurich was with the Eclipse for three years.

For one year he was with the Bioscope, and then with the Master Film Company for two years, and a similar period with the Kinemacolor Film Company.

When the Kriterion Company was organized in 1914 he went West with H. C. Matthews, and was with the organization at Santa Barbara. He went to Los Angeles several months ago, and has since been with the L-Ko company.

Mr. Scheurich, by virtue of his many years of experience and endless experimental work, has conceived a number of innovations for motion pictures, all of which have added much to the subjects he has photographed.

He thoroughly understands every phase of photographic work pertaining to films, and is spoken of in photoplay circles as an expert cinematographer.

CHARLES "DADDY" MANLEY, UNIVERSAL WEST COAST STUDIOS

CHARLES "DADDY" MANLEY, of the Universal West Coast studios, who appears in featured leads, is perhaps the oldest actor in motion pictures. He is over eighty-four. His experience began at seventeen as a circus rider and since he has appeared in various theatrical performances.

He held the copyright on the dramatization of "Dante's Inferno," and appeared in this for years. He has supported Booth, Barrett, Forrest and many other stars.

In pictures Mr. Manley has been with the Famous Players, Edison and the Universal, and during his career has written, produced and directed, as well as played the lead in any number of successful productions. "Daddy" Manley is one of the best beloved inhabitants of Universal City.

F. D. ORMSTON, ART DIRECTOR, UNIVERSAL

FRANK D. ORMSTON, art director at Universal City studios, has spent a lifetime in the study of this work. After graduating from the art department of Columbia College, he became a designer of scenery in New York City at his own studio.

His first motion picture experience was with the American Adoliscope. Later he became affiliated with the Powers as scenic artist. In 1911 he joined the Universal, was sent to the coast and promoted to the position as technical director. Since that time he has been with the Universal almost continually.

He prepared all the sets for "The Dumb Girl of Portici," "Hypocrites," "Damon and Pythias" and other big productions. He has one of the most extensive collections of rare art books.

His volumes contain an exhaustive study of all periods of architecture, from which he draws upon when it comes to a picture like "Damon and Pythias" or some other story laid in bygone ages. His work on the mammoth production of "Samson" called forth praise.

LILLIAN PEACOCK, LEADS, JOKER UNIVERSAL

LILLIAN PEACOCK, playing leads with Curtis Universal Joker company, was born in Pennsylvania in 1894. Her engagement with the Universal company began in 1914, when she was engaged at the New York studio and appeared in Imp subjects. In 1914 she became a member of the Joker company working under the direction of Allen Curtis. She has since played in practically all of their one reel comedies.

She has appeared in "Love vs. Law," "Back to School Days," "Light Fingered Lill," "Hiram Went to the City," "Schultz Lead the Orchestra," and others.

Miss Peacock rides, swims, rows and enjoys all kinds of athletics.

This dashing comedienne of the Joker comedy company appears in comedy character parts as well as straight roles. During the time she has been appearing in the weekly Jokers under the direction of Allen Curtis she has gained wide experience through a score or more eccentric characterizations.

LYNN F. REYNOLDS, DIRECTOR, POWERS UNIVERSAL

LYNN FAIRFIELD REYNOLDS, director of Powers brand, Universal, was born at Harlan, Iowa, in 1889, and educated in Denver, Colorado.

His motion picture experience began with Selig in 1904 in characters for the Burton King company. In August he became director for Mr. King, and went to the Universal in November. He began as co-director with the Gene Gontier Universal company in April, 1915, and was given his own company on May 29. He has directed Sydney Ayres in "Both Sides of Life," featuring Ella Hall; "The Man From Argentina" and "A Man's Way."

At present Mr. Reynolds is directing a company composed of Myrte Gonzalez, Arthur Shirley, Val Paul and Albert Allen, making one, two and three reel dramas.

The pictures which have been released on the Universal program directed by Mr. Reynolds, show a marvelously good selection of appropriate exteriors, for which he is largely responsible. These scenes go a long way towards the benefit of his releases.

MAX ASHER, COMEDIAN

MAX ASHER was born in Oakland, California, in 1879; after attending the public schools there, became a member of the Peoples Stock at Oakland. Later he did a magician's act in vaudeville. Was in a vaudeville sketch of Hathaway and Asher, and four years with the Louis and Kale musical comedy. The first motion picture work of Mr. Asher was for the Keystone in 1912, and later for Universal.

Some of his best known parts were in "The Cheese Special," "What Happened to Schultz," "Schultz the Paper-hanger," "Schultz the Orchestra Leader," "A Day at the San Diego Fair," and the "Lady Baffles and Detective Duck" comedy series.

While with Universal Mr. Asher practically created a new part with every weekly release in which he appeared. Eccentric make-up is one of his strong points and thus he adds originality and distinction to every comedy in which he appears.

In the "Lady Baffles and Detective Duck" series, it was computed that Mr. Asher wore a more varied collection of costumes, make-ups, etc., than any other screen artist has worn in one reel.

HARRY W. SCHUMM, HEAVIES

HARRY W. SCHUMM, late of the Ford Universal company, is an actor of many years' experience, during which time he played with some of the best known stars.

Mr. Schumm was born in Chicago, in 1879, and after attending Chicago University took up stage work in 1895. His first engagement lasting four years, was with the Hopkins stock company in Chicago, followed by two years at the Columbus in the same city. He was also a member of the Marlowe stock for one season.

He was with Kathrine Kidder and Frederick Ward in "Salambo," and for several seasons had his own sketch, "The Price of Friendship." He played this on a circuit to the Coast, and there was engaged by the Universal company.

Since 1912 he has played in more than one hundred pictures. His recent work was that of King Michael in "The Broken Coin" serial of forty-four reels. In the previous Francis Ford-Grace Cunard thirty-reel serial "Lucille Love" he played throughout the part of Lieutenant Gibson which continued through the thirty reels of this subject.

Mr. Schumm has appeared in prominent parts in practically all of the Universal-Francis Ford subjects of the past two years. All of these subjects consist of two or more reels. His usefulness in motion pictures is augmented by his athletic ability. He is very fond of all kinds of sports, and rides, swims and rows.

He is nearly six feet in height, weighs one hundred and seventy-five pounds, has dark eyes and black hair, and is dark complexioned.

R. S. STURGEON, MANAGING DIRECTOR, VITAGRAPH

R. S. STURGEON, managing director of Santa Monica Vitagraph studio and producer of Vitagraph Blue Ribbon features for the V-L-S-E program, began his work in motion pictures in 1908 as a free lance scenario writer. The value of his scripts was at once apparent to the officers of the Vitagraph company, to whom he submitted a number, and he was added to the staff as the first member of its manuscript or scenario department in 1909. In these early-day photoplay pictures he picturized many of Vitagraph specials, such as "The Life of Moses," "The Tale of Two Cities" and "Uncle Tom's Cabin" and a number of adaptations from Shakesperian plays.

His success as scenario writer and his ablity to visualize scenes caused the heads of the Vitagraph company to place him in charge of the direction of a producing company in 1911, and he was sent to the vicinity of Lake Champlain and Ausable Chasm in upper New York State.

There he worked with his players for a time, then crossed the continent to Colorado Springs in the Fall. He was there several weeks, then took the company to Grand Canyon, and later on to Los Angeles and finally located the original Vitagraph company at Santa Monica.

The first picture to be made under the direction of Mr. Sturgeon at the Western studio was entitled "How States Are Made," and at that time attracted the attention of trade papers and the press of the country, and from all sources it was hailed as an innovation in motion picture making.

Since that time, early in the year of 1912, Mr. Sturgeon has remained in charge of the Vitagraph California studio, and produced a number of notable successes. During the past summer it was through Mr. Sturgeon that negotiations were completed for the removal of the producing plant from Santa Monica because of the inadequate facilities, and to a larger, well-equipped and admirably-appointed studio in the heart of the film-producing district of Hollywood.

The new plant was constructed under his supervision, and by photoplay producers is considered one of, if not the most conveniently-arranged studios of the West.

Mr. Sturgeon is at present under contract with the Vitagraph company for a number of years, and is to devote all of his time to the making of Blue Ribbon features, which will be released on the V-L-S-E program. Perhaps the best-known subjects, and two that show the ability of Mr. Sturgeon, are "Captain Alvarez" and "The Chalice of Courage."

GEORGE HOLT, CHARACTER LEADS, VITAGRAPH

GEORGE HOLT, playing character leads in Blue Ribbon features of the Vitagraph company of America, is a native of Massachusetts, born at Fall River. He was educated in the public and high schools of Fall River, and then went to Toronto, Canada, to study electrical engineering, but he now confesses that the study consisted mostly of frequenting theatres.

After spending some months at school, Mr. Holt decided he heard the stage calling, and secured an engagement with Annie Russel in "The Mysterious Mr. Bugle." Then followed seasons in vaudeville, stock and traveling companies, in which he was generally cast for heavies.

He considers his two best parts on the legitimate stage as that of Drake in "The Christian" and Bradley in "Via Wireless."

Mr. Holt's first picture experience was with the Lubin Company, working in Los Angeles in the summer, and returning to Philadelphia each Fall, to rejoin the Arthur Hotaling forces at the Philadelphia studio.

He made his first contract with the Universal, that company taking him from New York to California. There he played for a number of months and then went to the Vitagraph, where he has been playing about three years. One of his best portrayals is that of Mizzo, the hypnotist in "The Shell."

Other small subjects in which he played good parts are: "The Passing of Joe Mary," "Goody's Soldier Boy" and "Slim Driscoll, Samaritan." In the five-reel Vitagraph feature, "Captain Alverez," he appeared as Turso the spy, and gave a good performance which received very favorable comment from all the critics.

Since that big production he has played Trigger Jim in "The Sage Brush Gal," another Blue Ribbon feature, and most recently was Armsrtong the heavy in the six-reel subject, "The Chalice of Courage," released on the V-L-S-E program. The critics say Mr. Holt did his best work in the part of Armstrong.

Mr. Holt has made a study of heavy parts, as he has followed this line of acting throughout his professional career. He is fond of comedy and works in it occasionally, but he appreciates a good character part that has life of the red blood character. Since appearing in pictures he has become proficient in riding, shooting, auto driving, and is good in other athletics, including boxing. He is 5 feet 10 inches tall, weighs 165 pounds, and has dark hair and eyes. Mr. Holt about the studio is known as the "movie fan," for he is said to spend a good portion of his time at the motion picture theatres. He attempts to see all the principal productions.

WILLIAM DUNCAN, LEADS, VITAGRAPH

WILLIAM DUNCAN, leading man appearing in Blue Ribbon Vitagraph features released through the V-L-S-E program, and in Vitagraph subjects of the General Program, is Scotch, his birthplace being Lochee Dundee, Scotland. When a lad he came to America with his parents and received a common school and college education.

At college he excelled in sports, particularly wrestling, boxing and football, and later won a number of amateur boxing tournaments. His ability as an athlete secured for him the position of director of McFadden's Physical Culture Health Home, where he remained for some time, and later established his own school of physical culture.

While at this institution he met Sandow and went into vaudeville, appearing on the larger circuits with the great wrestler. At the end of this engagement he became leading man in the Fairpaugh stock company at Philadelphia. His ambition to conduct his own show caused him to organize a company of which he remained the head for six years.

During this time he wrote several plays, including "The Fifth Generation," and later compiled "The Sporting Editor," a vaudeville playet in which he appeared on U. B. O. time.

It was while he was playing in this sketch that he met Thomas Nash, then manager of the Selig studio at Chicago, who induced him to enter pictures. His first engagement for the camera was that with the Selig company at Chicago, where he appeared in leading roles and became director. During this engagement he played leads with such well-known screen stars as Myrtle Stedman, Lester Cuneo, Rex Roselli, Tom Mix and many others.

He went with the Selig company to Colorado, and later played with them in New Mexico. After a year and a half with the Selig company he went to California for a vacation, and it was while there he met R. S. Sturgeon, managing director of the Vitagraph studio, at Santa Monica, and was engaged for Vitagraph productions.

In the most recent Sturgeon Blue Ribbon Vitagraph feature, "The Chalice of Courage," Mr. Duncan appeared in the leading part, and has been complimented on every hand for his excellent performance in this. He is particularly proud of his work in "The Offending Kiss," "His Golden Grain," and in the name part of "The Man from the Desert."

Mr. Duncan stands 5 feet 10 inches, and weighs near the 200 mark. His athletic training stands him well in hand, and he does not appear in many subjects but what some of his past training serves him well.

GEORGE KUNKEL, LEADS, VITAGRAPH

GEORGE KUNKEL, character leading man at the Vitagraph Santa Monica studio, is of a family of professional actors and singers. He was born in Baltimore in 1866. In 1883 Mr. Kunkel played his first engagement with an opera company at Baltimore. His qualities as an actor, and his excellent baritone voice, won for him instant position. He played engagements with some of the best opera companies, including the Jennie Winston, McCall, J. C. Duff and the Boston Lyric. He took part in both comic and grand opera. After a tour of Australia and the colonies he returned by the way of Honolulu, where he played a long engagement, followed by a season in stock at the Tivoli theatre in San Francisco, and a second tour with the Walter Sanford dramatic company to Australia. Returning to America he was with the Aborn company, and for a season was in stock at the Orpheum theatre, Cincinnati. Mr. Kunkel came to the Pacific Coast three years ago, and to the Vitagraph company, of which he has since been a prominent member.

In the Blue Ribbon feature, "Capt. Alvarez," he appeared in the part of chief of police, and in "The Sage Brush Gal" as McTuirk. His part in "The Child of the North" was that of Cal Johnson, and in the recent Vitagraph Blue Ribbon feature, "The Chalice of Courage," produced by R. S. Sturgeon, Mr. Kunkel appeared in the part of Robert Maitland.

Mr. Kunkel is about six feet in height, weighs two hundred and ten pounds, has brown hair and gray eyes. He swims, rides skilfully, and his hobbies are amateur photography and stamp collecting. He has a large number of compositions to his credit.

MARY ANDERSON, LEADS, VITAGRAPH

MARY ANDERSON, leading woman of the Santa Monica Vitagraph studio, recently transferred here from the Eastern producing plant of this company, is a New York girl, born in 1897. Completing the public and high school course, she had little difficulty in securing a place in the Vitagraph stock company, and since 1913 has been a member. Her first part of any consequence was that with John Bunny in "Father's Flirtation." She scored a decided success at once.

After this she played an important part in "The Old Maid's Baby," and later in "The Wardrobe Woman." When production of "The Goddess" was taken up she was selected to play the part of "Waif," and appeared in a number of these releases.

Miss Anderson went to the Santa Monica, California, studio the first of August and has been featured in several subjects there. One was that of "Cal Marvin's Wife"; and the comedy, "He Got Himself a Wife." She has just completed scenes in the name part of "The Hoyden," which she believes will be her best subject.

Miss Anderson is scarcely five feet tall, has brown hair and blue eyes. This actress has a very pleasing personality, and her talent as an actress is now established. Her work before the camera has caused the directors to give her conspicuous parts, and those who have followed her screen career believe she is destined to become a very popular screen star.

Miss Anderson is a good swimmer, and since going West has added riding to her attainments for screen work.

NELL SHIPMAN, SCENARIO WRITER AND ACTRESS

NELL SHIPMAN, the scenario writer and actress who shortly will also be known as a director, began scenario writing four years ago. Since then she has written many scripts to order for such screen stars as Jack Warren Kerrigan, Francis X. Bushman, Arthur Shirley and William F. Russell.

Miss Shipman's last screen work has been the portrayal of the Woman in the Vitagraph Blue Ribbon feature, "God's Country—and the Woman." Previous to beginning this engagement she contracted to write six feature scripts for the Palo Alto Film Corporation. Two of these have already been delivered, the first, "Wanda of the Red Street," being already produced, and the production of the second started.

Nell Shipman was born in Victoria, British Columbia, of British parentage.

She made her stage debut seven years ago with Paul Gilmore in his play "At Yale." She played in stock under the management of Oliver Morosco, Frederick Belasco and George Baker.

She reconstructed the play of "The Barrier" so that the heart interest of the hero and heroine dominated instead of the sympathetic interest which before had been awarded to the father, John Gale. This construction was so commendable that Theodore Roberts, the original John Gale in this production when launched under the management of Klaw & Erlanger, stated that it had improved the play one hundred per cent. As a consequence of this revised version it started on tour three years after Messrs. Klaw and Erlanger were through with it and realized more than $20,000 profit.

DANIEL F. WHITCOMB, SCENARIOS, THOMAS H. INCE

DANIEL F. WHITCOMB, scenario writer, late of Balboa company and now with Thomas H. Ince at New York Motion Picture Corporation studio at Culver City, Cal., is a former newspaper man and fiction writer, whose contributions to the legitimate stage include both drama and vaudeville sketches.

He first became interested in writing motion picture plays in 1910, and shortly afterwards left the newspaper field to devote all his time to this work. In his present position he has contributed several very notable picture plays, one of which was made in five reels, and after being viewed by the manager of Pathe, Inc., was sent to Paris to be hand colored, and will be when completed the largest hand colored film ever released. He resides in Hollywood, Cal.

As it is with many dramatists and photoplaywriters, Mr. Whitcomb's newspaper experience has served him in valuable stead in his career as scenario writer. At present he is working on feature subjects to be released through Triangle.

VIVIAN REED, SELIG ZOO STUDIO

VIVIAN REED is leading woman at the Selig company Zoo studio. She was born in Chicago in 1893, and educated at El Paso, Texas. She chose a theatrical career, played in stock, and then going to the Coast joined the Oz Film Company, where she was featured as their trade mark girl, and played leads in "The Last Egyptian." She supported Mrs. Leslie Carter in the film version of "The Heart of Maryland," and this year has been playing leads for the Selig company, where she has been featured in one reel animal subjects.

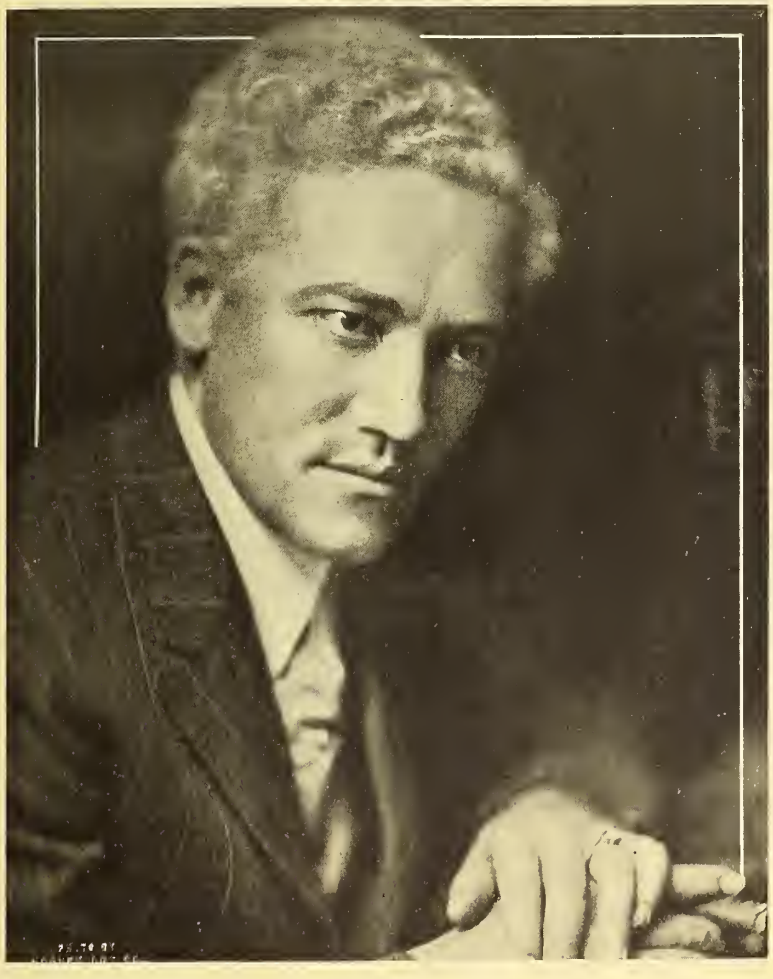
Miss Reed is a good swimmer, rows, and rides horseback, and is devoted to athletics in all forms.

Though a young woman, Miss Reed's beauty and ability point to an enviable future for her as a screen favorite.

FRED J. BALSHOFER, PRESIDENT OF QUALITY PICTURES

PIONEERING in the motion picture industry was the work that Fred J. Balshofer took upon himself, and for the past fourteen years he has been engaged in this work, his duties reaching to every part of the industry from exhibitor and laboratory man to that of president and general manager of his most recent perfected organization, Quality Pictures Corporation, which releases its subjects featuring Francis X. Bushman, Beverly Bayne and Marguerite Snow on the Metro program.

Mr. Balshofer was born in New York in 1877. He first took up work pertaining to photography when a lad. When motion pictures were first invented he was affiliated with Underwood and Underwood at New York, and had charge of the laboratory in the manufacture of stereopticon views, and it was from this position that he went to become a member of the Siegmund Lubin staff at Philadelphia. At that time motion pictures were but a side issue for Mr. Lubin as he devoted a greater portion of his time to a very lucrative optical business. Mr. Balshofer became superintendent of the motion picture laboratory, then he learned the operation of a camera, and later operated the camera and directed the making of pictures. Mr. Balshofer remained at the Lubin plant until he, with Adam Kessel and Charles O. Baumann, organized the New York Motion Picture Corporation.



In 1897 Mr. Balshofer was made vice-president and general manager, and he had charge of the making of the first Bison brand pictures. The first subject made was that with Davey Crockett in "Hearts United," from which eighteen copies were sold. "The Fisherman's Daughter" was next produced and twenty-two prints disposed of. The third subject was "A Disinherited Son's Loyalty" and from this twenty-five copies were sold.

Charges for infringements were made by the New York company by the Patents company, and attempts were made to stop productions of this company. It was brought out that a non infringing camera was used which was not built along lines covered by the patents of the Patents company. The time needed to prove this was not lost by Mr. Balshofer, for he served as salesman of the company visiting exchanges, for at that time everything produced by independent manufacturers was sold on the open market. Shortly after this came the Sales company, which handled the films of this and other independent producers, and later still the organization of the Universal.

Mr. Balshofer came West with a company of players and established in Los Angeles the second motion picture studio. This was located on one of the lots now occupied by the Keystone Film Company's plant in Edendale, Los Angeles. For one month everything ran smoothly, production continued, only to be interrupted by a war for possession. Representatives of the releasing company were sent to Edendale to take possession of the company's plant and books, and a merry little time ensued. Day and night Mr. Balshofer retained a guard of twenty-four men about the premises, and Fred Mace then served for the first time as captain of police, but at this time he was not filmed in that makeup. Ultimately the agents of the releasing company entertained the guards royally and got possession of the office, where they dynamited the safe and secured the books. Shortly after a cash compromise was reached.

Prior to the time of opening the Edendale studio, Mr. Balshofer had leased the 101 Miller Brothers ranch in the Santa Inez Canyon along the coast beyond Santa Monica, which is now known as Inceville. The Bison brand was then renamed the 101 Bison, and by the compromise referred to this title name became the property of the Universal Company, and is one of the few remaining pioneer brands of this organization. Mr. Balshofer continued as general manager of the New York plant, and with him as directors were Thomas H. Ince and Francis Ford. He remained in this capacity until in 1913 when he sold his interests in the company consisting of twenty-five per cent. to the present owners, Messrs. Kessel and Baumann.

Early in 1914 Mr. Balshofer organized the Sterling Motion Picture Company and secured a release of two reels weekly on the Universal program. In many of these he featured Ford Sterling. At the end of the contract for release this company was disbanded and Mr. Balshofer went to New York, where he organized the Quality Pictures Corporation. Mr. Balshofer remains at the producing plant, which occupies property owned by him and which was the original home of Nestor subjects for the Universal Company and the Sterling Motion Picture Company.

While affiliated with the New York Motion Picture Corporation, Mr. Balshofer also organized and conducted film exchanges at Los Angeles, San Francisco and New York known as the F. B. Film exchanges. All subjects were bought on the open market. He disposed of his Western branches to M. L. Markowitz and Earl Miles, and the two exchanges then became known as the California Film Exchange, Inc. These were purchased by the Universal Company in the latter part of 1914.

In the production days of the original Bison subjects, Mr. Balshofer wrote all the plays for the brand which consisted of two and a half reels a week, and did the camera work and directed one company. During most of this time there were detectives hovering about to learn of any infringements on patents and it required a general to keep a plant active.

Perhaps there is no one man now engaged in the business who has had the varied experience as that of Mr. Balshofer, and in all instances he has been successful. He personally supervises the production work at the studio, and gives his attention to the details of making the Quality pictures live up to their name.

Recently while in New York Mr. Balshofer made arrangements for the completion of a studio there which the Quality picture players will use six months in the year. The companies left for the East about the fifteenth of October to take up the filming of "Richard Carvel" and other big plays.

FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN, STAR, QUALITY

THE story of the very eventful life of a Southerner who became a wrestler, artists' model, sculptor, matinee idol, and motion picture star, who has been signally honored by prominent people and publications, who was the first person of the profession, either on the legitimate stage or in pictures, to have a day set aside for him by an International exposition, as well as being chosen king of another exposition—Francis Xavier Bushman. The public career of Mr. Bushman began at the age of nine, in "The Lady of Lyons," at a Baltimore theatre, with Louise Bushman, a sister, as star in the name part.

Mr. Bushman was born at Norfolk, Va., and studied at Ammendale College, Maryland. While in school he showed a distinct liking for amateur dramatics and athletics, and won numerous honors in each.

At fifteen he began wrestling, and until he was twenty met many of his own weight, and threw a number who were much heavier. He took up bicycle racing, and with his brother as a team mate, carried away prizes at every meet they entered.

After finishing school Mr. Bushman tried many vocations, in all accepting thirty-seven different positions, each from a half day to three weeks. This varied experience has helped him materially in the realistic portrayal of the many different parts he has played on the stage and in pictures. The experience also indicated to him that he liked dramatic work best.

Francis X. Bushman's first engagement was with the George Fawcett stock company at the old Albaugh theatre at Baltimore, as juvenile lead. Later he joined the "At Yale" company. The season ended in New York, where he was selected as juvenile lead for the Dillingham production of "The Red Mill."

Sculptors of New York saw Mr. Bushman while he was playing in "The Red Mill," and he was sought by a number for him to pose. He was a model for more than four years, with engagements two years ahead.

He posed for Leyendecker, Wenzell, the Kinneys, French, Flagg, Alonzo Kimball, Konti, Ellerhausen and others. Mr. Ellerhausen, sculptor, in 1914 made the figure which he named "Conception" from memory, Mr. Bushman being the model.

Mr. Bushman returned to the stage as juvenile for "The Top o' the World" production.

Later he was juvenile in "The Queen of the Moulin Rouge," which had a long run at the Circle theatre, New York. Then he joined the road company producing "Going Some." In 1909 Mr. Bushman played juvenile and leads with the Colonial stock at Columbus, Ohio; later he played leads for forty-four weeks to successful business in Camden, N. J. The long engagement resulted in poor health, and Mr. Bushman went to the counrty. While recuperating he received an offer from Essanay.

For four years, with the exception of four months, he was with that company, appearing in featured leading parts. During the four months referred to, Mr. Bushman made a speaking triumphant tour of the theatres.

During his engagement with the Essanay company his first subject was "Lost Years," in one reel. He appeared in "The Richard Neal" series; "Graustark"; "Under Royal Patronage," and "Dear Old Girl."

In the popularity contest conducted by the Ladies' World in 1913 and 1914, Mr. Bushman was selected by a popular vote to play the leading part in the film adaptation of the magazine serial. In this contest he received eight hundred thousand more votes than the nearest candidate. "One Wonderful Night" was made in six reels, but exhibitors induced the Essanay company to cut this to four reels.

In March of this year Mr. Bushman accepted the offer of Fred J. Balshofer when the Quality Pictures, with a release on the Metro program, was formed. Mr. Bushman went to Hollywood in May. The first subjects to be made were "The Second in Command," "The Silent Voice" and "Pennington's Choice."

The officers of the Panama-Pacific Exposition set aside July 14 as Metro Day and selected Mr. Bushman to preside. The event proved most successful. This led to Motion Picture Day and a contest through the newspapers of California for the selection of a king and queen. From the opening Mr. Bushman led, securing more votes than any other candidate. Beverly Bayne, leading woman for Mr. Bushman, was similarly honored.

In October Mr. Bushman and players went East, where he played the name part in "Richard Carvel."

INTIMATE GLIMPSES OF BEVERLY BAYNE, LEADING WOMAN OF THE FRANCIS X. BUSHMAN QUALITY PICTURES COMPANY, FROM FIVE OF HER LATEST AND BEST PHOTOGRAPHS.

BEVERLY BAYNE, LEADING WOMAN BUSHMAN QUALITY PICTURES COMPANY

IN this day of photoplay fanism—and more young women every day are desirous of becoming motion picture actresses—it is refreshing to learn of an instance such as that of Beverly Bayne, leading woman of the Francis X. Bushman Quality Pictures Corporation Company, who was pleaded with on a number of occasions before she would consent to attempt to act before the camera.

This story has a setting in Chicago, the home of Miss Bayne—also the Essanay Film Manufacturing Company. It was during her visit to this studio that she was asked by a director who was having difficulty in securing a type, to play a leading role in a production.

Miss Bayne was dubious as to whether she would be capable of handling the part or not, as she had never had any theatrical experience.

So, at the age of seventeen Miss Bayne appeared in her first motion picture and in the leading role. This happened three and a half years ago, and the story produced, "The Loan Shark," filmed by the Essanay Company to aid the Chicago Tribune in its fight to rid the Windy City of its Shyloeks, proved to be not only a great success for the Essanay Company, but showed that Miss Bayne, not only photographed well, but had talent, which, if developed, would prove a great asset to her.

From that day until now, this actress has been leading woman, appearing in both dramatic and comedy subjects. When it is considered that she took up the work without any previous training or legitimate stage experience and made a success, in itself it bespeaks her natural talents better than can words.

Such is the beginning of the career of a motion picture actress who is today the leading woman of one of the most prominent producing organizations, and playing opposite Francis X. Bushman, who was selected by tens of thousands of American people as the most popular photoplay actor.

Very recently it was demonstrated that Miss Bayne had become equally popular in a voting contest conducted by the California-Panama Exposition officials in connection with southern California newspapers in which she was voted to be the most popular actress playing in southern California, and thereby selected as queen of the San Diego Exposition for Motion Picture Day.

Miss Bayne was born in Minneapolis, Minn., twenty years ago, and attended school there, at Philadelphia, and graduated from the Hyde Park High School in Chicago. Among her most important subjects released under the Essanay trade-mark are "The Soul Reclaimed," "The Masked Wrestler," "Under Royal Patronage," "The Crimson Wing," and the big feature production from the George Barr McCutcheon novel, "Graustark."

She includes in her best subjects "Any Woman's Choice" and "The Love Route."

Immediately upon going with the Quality Pictures she took up the interpretation of the dual role of Eugena and Myria Blondeau in "Pennington's Choice," which has now been completed by the Quality Pictures Corporation, with Francis X. Bushman appearing as Mr. Pennington.

Miss Bayne is now in the East with the Bushman Quality Company, where she will play the leading part in the photoplay, "The Yellow Dove," a diplomatic story dealing with the present European war, in which she will have the most thrilling experience of her career, that of riding in an airship.

A conversation with Miss Bayne will lead one to think she is a daughter of the South. Her mannerisms likewise will add to this impression. She has a soft, musical voice that makes one regret that she is playing in the silent drama.

Miss Bayne has dark brown hair and large attractive brown eyes, is but a trifle more than 5 feet in height, which will be a surprise to many. In some roles she appears as much taller, while in others she plays parts personifying girls much smaller than herself.

In other words, Miss Bayne has the rare ability of playing any part from that of ingenue to an elderly woman. Since becoming a motion picture leading woman, Miss Bayne has found her athletic training during her high school days most beneficial.

In addition she has learned to ride, drive racing cars, and has never hesitated in the making of a picture.

But recently Miss Bayne was selected by one of the large news syndicating organizations in America, the Newspaper Enterprise Association with offices in practically all of the leading cities, to write a series of articles of fashions and beauty hints. These are appearing under the title of Beverly Bayne's Beauty Hints, and carried by newspapers from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the Lakes to the Gulf. Newspaper readers in all parts of the country are burdening her now with questions, and prior to her departure to New York it required the aid of stenographers to answer the big mail. Remarkable as was the entrance of Miss Bayne as an actress it is overshadowed by the success she has made as leading woman in five hundred and more subjects.

HOWARD ESTABROOK

HOWARD ESTABROOK has enjoyed an almost meteoric career upon the legitimate stage, and it should be said to his great credit that when he flashed across the picture horizon as a star, he gave to his work an intent and conscientiousness of effort as he had never given the legitimate stage. Pictures seemed made for him, his natural mode of expression and his work was instantly noted for its utmost thought and care, as well as for the exceptional photographic qualities of his face. The result was magical. In "Officer 666," his first picture, he accomplished a success of such magnitude as to place him, by merit as well as reputation, in film's front rank. Then there followed a series of features, each one excellent to a degree limited only by the opportunities of the story. Perhaps his most interesting recent work was done in "Four Feathers," the Metro production of Mason's great story, and in "The Closing Net," declared when released to be the best Pathé Gold Rooster feature to date. Following this, Pathé bound him by a long-term contract, not allowing him to appear on the speaking stage again.

Mr. Estabrook was born in Detroit, Mich., where his father is president of the Iron and Wire Works, one of Detroit's leading industries. It is interesting to note how he came to adopt a theatrical career. His uncle was county treasurer, and young Estabrook's first position after leaving school was as assistant cashier in his uncle's office.

It happened that a short distance down the street from the county treasurer's office was a theatre playing stock. They needed a juvenile and young Estabrook applied for the job and got it. For a while he held down both positions at the same time. Then came his chance. The stock company put on "Shenandoah," and he was offered a good part. He took it and made good with a bang. The result was that he wrote to Mr. Seymour, of Charles Frohman's interests, applying for a job, and got it—with William Collier in "The Dictator." This took him to London, where he played with Collier in repertoire half a year. "On the Quiet" was his next engagement, and with it he came back to New York. "Brown of Harvard" saw his first important part, and in it he made a big hit.

At this time he joined the Lambs Club, and was tendered a number of very flattering offers. Clyde Fitch made one of them and got the prize for which they were all angling. The medium in which he was placed was "The Straight Road." This was followed by the lead in "The Boys of Company B," under Daniel Frohman's management.

After that engagement he married Gretchen Dale, the daughter of a San Francisco banker, and a wedding trip of a year's duration took him to Europe again. During this time he had written "Mrs. Avery," which had its New York production at Weber's Theatre. As a result he was elected to membership in the "Society of American Composers and Dramatists." Then followed engagements with Holbrook Blinn in "The Boss," and one with Wilton Lackaye, in both of which he assisted in the stage direction, and as a "side line" at this time directed the production of a number of one-act plays for vaudeville.

He was in the original cast of "Within the Law," and when that play was sold by Mr. Brady was withdrawn and placed in the part of Laurie in "Little Women," scoring so that Mr. Brady placed him under a two years' contract and announced him as a star-to-be.

Leading man with Grace George in several of her plays and revivals came next, and then the leading part in "Things That Count," which had an all-season run at the Playhouse. Lack of a suitable play for him enabled David Belasco to secure him for the lead in "The Vanishing Bride," and then finally when "Search Me" was put on at the Gaiety last August he was brought forward in the star role. At the same time he was appearing in the Pathé "Closing Net" production, and following another appearance with Elsie Janis in "Miss Information," at the Cohan, he was placed under the Pathé contract, and it is probable that the speaking stage will not see a great deal of him in the future, as he is finding pictures a field of expression far less limited than his previous work.

Mr. Estabrook has also been placed under contract for personal business management by Chamberlain Brown, Aeolian Hall, New York, who attends to all his business affairs.

J. G. HAWKS, AUTHOR, N. Y. MOTION

J. G. HAWKS, of the Thomas H. Ince staff of photoplay authors, began life in San Francisco in 1876. His varied career started shortly after he finished high school, when he shipped as an ordinary seaman on the harkentine General Fairfield.

One voyage sufficed to quell his nautical ambitions, and he went to the I. K. Ranch, near Douglas, Ariz., where he rode as a cowboy for a number of years. Stories of the fortunes to be made from abalone and pearl on the Lower California coast so interested him that he left the ranch and organized an expedition.

The venture proved too unprofitable to warrant a second trip. Returning to San Francisco, he seized the opportunity to join the Henley-Boucicault stock company in San Francisco. He was doing "bits" and "general business" at the time of the declaration of war with Spain. Joining the First California, United States Volunteer Infantry, he was made a sergeant in Company F of that regiment, which was part of the first expeditionary force.

At the close of the Philippine uprising, Mr. Hawks returned to New York, where he was honorably discharged, and joined the David Belasco forces. For the next four years he appeared in Belasco productions in which Blanche Bates and Henrietta Crosman were starred.

Late in 1904 he joined the Maryland Opera Company, and in 1905 became stage manager and director for Hill and Elmendorff, which position he filled until he went to San Francisco, and experienced the great earthquake and fire that destroyed the city.

During the fire he had charge of a dynamite squad, and later assisted Dr. Blue in his crusade against the bubonic plague.

In 1911 Mr. Hawks resigned as deputy tax collector for Alameda County, a position which he had held for two years, and devoted his energy to directing the production of Belasco repertoire in the leading stock companies of San Francisco, Los Angeles and Portland.

Early in 1912 the demand for photoplays had caused producers to advertise their wants far and wide. Mr. Hawks had written two dramas, "Kathleen Acushla" and "Down Nogales Way," and such vaudeville sketches as "Other Men's Wives" and "The Deputy Sheriff," which had popular runs in the West.

He decided to write photoplays. So successful was he that in 1913 he was employed to direct productions for the Monarch Film Company, and in 1914 became a director for the Vim Motion Picture Company of Alameda.

He constantly kept at his writing, and in 1915 was made associate editor of the Ince staff of writers. Among his most noteworthy contributions to the screen are: "The Hammer," "The Conversion of Frosty Blake," "The Shadowgraph Message" and "The $100,000 Bill." He is now engaged in writing original photoplays for the Triangle program.

OLGA PRINTZLAU,
Scenario writer, actress and musician.

A scene from a melodrama in which Miss Printzlau (in private life Mrs. Clements) and Mr. Clements were featured.

HAL CLEMENTS,
Actor and director, now playing in Lasky Paramount subjects.

TWO talented people connected with the motion picture industry are Hal Clements and Olga Printzlau, Mrs. Clements in private life. Both have been identified with the profession a number of years, following experiences with allied professions which have given them training valuable in this field.

Mr. Clements is an actor, director, and has been at the head of a film manufacturing company. Miss Printzlau is an artist, musician, actress and scenario authoress.

Mr. Clements was born in New York City thirty-eight years ago, and shortly after finishing his education he became affiliated with the theatrical profession in New York, where he played many engagements to his credit. Later he appeared on big-time vaudeville circuits in a headline act.

His first experience in the motion picture field was with the Solax Film Company, six years ago, where he began first as actor, and later served as director. From this company he went to the Kalem, where he remained for more than four years, serving as both director and actor.

Of the mementos he prizes most are letters from the officers of the Kalem company complimenting in very glowing terms the pictures he has produced, some being referred to as the best sellers.

After a four years' engagement with the Kalem company in Florida, where he remained with the producing company, he went to Santa Monica. Mr. Clements organized the United States Film Corporation, which opened a studio at San Diego and produced a number of pictures, some of which were released on state rights bases, and others through programs.

His next engagement was with the American company at Santa Barbara, where he played in a number of Mutual Masterpictures, the list including "The Lure of the Mask," "House of a Thousand Scandals," "Secretary of Frivolous Affairs" and "At the End of the Road." He is now fulfilling an engagement with the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play company, his first work for this organization being in support of Charlotte Walker in "Out of the Darkness." Since he has played in support of Blanche Sweet in "The Secret Sin" and is now taking part in the first Edna Goodrich Lasky subject.

Mr. Clements' years of experience in the motion picture field fully qualify him as an actor and director, and he is thoroughly competent to assume charge of the business end of a manufacturing plant. He is popular with photoplayers, and has a big following of friends in film circles.

MISS PRINTZLAU was born in Philadelphia in 1893, of Russian-Danish parentage; she inherits a literary taste from her father, a successful fiction writer, and she owes a musical and artist's talent to her mother.

Miss Printzlau began studying music when she was nine years of age, and at twelve gave musicales in Philadelphia which resulted in her parents deciding to educate her for a piano virtuoso. She went to California and studied art and opened a small studio, which she successfully conducted for some time, during which her ambition was to be a famous artist.

This ambition was swept aside by the motion picture industry, for Miss Printzlau decided that she could write scenarios, and in 1911 sold her first story, "The White Fawn," which was produced by D. W. Griffith with Mary Pickford in the name part.

To get a better insight into scenario writing, Miss Printzlau secured an engagement under Searle Dawley, head of the Edison company at Long Beach, where she acted and wrote several stories.

When this plant was purchased by H. M. and E. D. Horkheimer, Miss Printzlau was retained as scenario writer, and eighteen of her stories were filmed, including "Abide with Me," "Moth and Flame" and "The Path of Sorrow." The Majestic purchased several one and two-reelers by Miss Printzlau. She accepted a position as scenario editor of the Santa Barbara Motion Picture Company, where she remained for a number of months, and later joined the staff of the American. Her best story for this release was "Motherhood," which was, in the opinion of Miss Printzlau, her start as a scenario writer. Since, this company has produced "The Dream Baby" or "The Divinity of Motherhood," which is a sequel to "Motherhood." Miss Printzlau is writing a series of flower stories, in all twenty-five reels, in which Mary Fuller will be featured.

This series of scripts secured for Miss Printzlau an engagement by the Universal company as a staff author. Since taking up this work she has written "The Scarlet Sin," in which Hobart Bosworth was featured, and "Coral," another Universal Broadway feature.

Miss Printzlau is now engaged in writing a series of pictures of a strong dramatic character, which will be known as "The Heart Throb Series." Each subject will consist of three reels. The marriage of Miss Printzlau and Mr. Clements occurred in October, 1914, and the couple have a pretty little bungalow on Sanborn avenue, Hollywood. Miss Printzlau's recent success is the multiple-reel subject entitled "Nante of the Marshes," which has been sold to D. W. Griffith, of the Fine Arts Films Company.

WILL M. RITCHEY, SCENARIO EDITOR, BALBOA

WILL M. RITCHEY, scenario editor-in-chief, Balboa Amusement Producing Company, was born in Evansville, Ind., 1879, and attended the University of Wooster, Ohio. He studied medicine in the University of Western Pennsylvania, and at Northwestern University, but gave up this intended career to enter the newspaper field.

He was trained as a reporter and copy desk man on newspapers in Pittsburgh, Chicago and Fort Worth; was with the Times-Democrat, of New Orleans, for five years, as assistant city editor, then as telegraph editor; with the Evening Express, Los Angeles, for four years, the latter two years as city editor and news editor. He left the Express to take up photoplay writing.

His first engagement as scenario editor was with Western Lubin. He also contributed to the Selig, Vitagraph, Usona, Majestic - Reliance and other companies. He joined the Balboa Amusement Producing Company in 1914.

Mr. Ritchey has written hundreds of produced photoplays. A notable achievement is the authorship of the "Who Pays?" series, twelve three-reel problem plays produced by the Balboa company and released by Pathé. With the exception of one, the plots of these stories were original with Mr. Ritchey. The working scenarios of the rest were his own. Mr. Ritchey is now devoting all his energy to the creation of big productions, and organizing the scenario department of Balboa.

He is a member of the Phi Gamma Delta fraternity, and charter member of the Photoplay Authors' League, Inc.

SHERWOOD MACDONALD, DIRECTOR, BALBOA

SHERWOOD MACDONALD, director for the Balboa Amusement Producing Company at Long Beach, was born in New York City. He attended Yale University and graduated from the law department.

For seven years Mr. MacDonald practiced law, devoting a portion of his time to the writing of short stories which were published in leading periodicals. He has to his credit a number of playlets; the list includes: "Just in Time," "The Goal," and "The Phantom of Happiness."

Mr. Macdonald never had any stage experience, but on going to California in 1913 decided to enter the motion picture field. He was first affiliated with the Mutual Company as an actor and appeared in character parts for a year. He then went to the Balboa Company where for two months he continued as an actor and was then appointed director.

Since that time he has made a number of the best pictures coming from his studio, and in the long list the following are conspicuous: "Ill Starred Babbie," with Jackie Saunders; "The Message from Reno," with Ruth Roland; "The Adventures of a Madcap," and others.

In addition to directing, Mr. Macdonald has turned his attention to writing scenarios, and he has written and produced the following:

"Rose Among the Briars," four reels; "The Web of Crime," three reels (released through Selig); "Straws in the Wind," three reels; "The Maid of the Wild," and others, which will be released by Pathé. Mr. Macdonald is a very capable director and original in his scripts.

THEODOSIA HARRIS, SCENARIOS, HORSLEY STUDIOS

THEODOSIA HARRIS, photoplay writer and editor at the David Horsley studios, was born at Virginia City, Nevada, in 1880. She was educated at Denver, Salt Lake and Los Angeles.

Miss Harris is the author of "The Light Woman," "James Lee's Wife," produced by the Smalleys, "The House of Scandals," an American Mutual Masterpicture produced by Thomas Ricketts; the Fine Arts Films subject, "Martyrs of the Alamo," released by the Triangle.

Miss Harris has just finished a feature for the David Horsley studio which will be given a big production with an all star cast which promises much novelty, and has many decidedly original ideas, which are clearly discernible in her scenarios.

GEORGE RIZARD, CAMERAMAN, BALBOA

GEORGE RIZARD, cameraman Balboa company, Long Beach, is a native of Paris, who has been in America twenty years. He first became master of home portraiture and miniatures. When motion pictures were invented, he became a keen student of this phase of photography. He was with Pathe Freres for five years, and since with Masterpiece company.

HANS M. TEICHMANN, STUDIO TECHNICAL DIRECTOR

HANS M. TEICHMANN, studio technical director, has been connected with the motion picture industry since 1908. He is a native of Leipsic, Germany, born November 28, 1886, and was educated in Berlin. He was first with the Kinomatagraph company at Hamburg, Germany. In the United States he has been stage manager for Bosworth, Inc., and was with B. A. Rolfe Photoplay Company. For a time he served Bostock Film Company as technical director.

LORETTA BLAKE, LEADS, FINE ARTS-TRIANGLE

LORETTA BLAKE, leads in Fine Arts-Triangle subjects, was born April 17, 1898, at Akron, Ohio. Without previous experience she was chosen to play ingenue part in "For Those Unborn," opposite Blanche Sweet, a Majestic release, and later supported Walthall in "Ghosts," and "Pillars of Society," Mutual Masterpictures. In Triangle's "The Sable Lorcha" she played lead.

MARION WARNER, SELIG ZOO STUDIO

MARION WARNER, leading woman for the Selig company at Los Angeles, was born at Indianapolis, Indiana, 1893. Graduating from the public schools she attended St. Annis Academy at Victoria, B. C. Her first engagement was with the New York Motion Picture Corporation in 1912, where she remained until 1914. Since, she has appeared in Selig subjects.

THOMAS B. MIDDLETON, CAMERAMAN, AMERICAN STUDIOS

THOMAS B. MIDDLETON, cinamatographer for the American company, is a native of Lafayette, Ind., and was educated in the public schools of Brazil, Ind., and Crawfordsville High School and DePauw University.

When a young man he took up professional photography, conducted a number of studios in Indiana and Illinois, and has served twenty-four years in every branch of portrait making in all parts of the United States. He did his first work for the American company in 1912, and has been with them continually ever since. Among his noteworthy productions are "Jim," "Damaged Goods," "Ancestry," "Senor's Silver Buckle," "Out of the Ashes," "The Water Carrier of San Juan," "The Key to the Past" and others.

MAKE ALL CHECKS PAYABLE TO WID GUNNING TIMES BLDG. N.Y.CITY

IT PAYS TO KNOW!

You fellers what have ter pay lots of hard cash for features sure want to know which of 'em is worth making a fuss over—yes?

Well, by heck, lots of the boys what sent "five for a year" say as how they like the way I tell right out what I think about all the new filums. Let's get acquainted. Even though you have to play 'em all, as per contract, it's mighty good to know which ones to "go easy" on. Send me that dollar, tonight!

BETTER SATISFACTION

This notice is addressed to the minority of our subscribers who do not regularly answer advertisements.

The service described is, however, open and free to all who wish our help.

We do not wish to discourage you from writing direct to our advertisers; in fact, you do not do enough of it for your own good, but we do want you to get the proper goods to fit your needs.

There are many, perhaps you, who are too busy to write each company separately; therefore we are offering our co-operation, which means that you will receive full information on any subject which you may designate by merely filling out the coupon, designating by numbers the goods in which you are interested.

Your inquiries thus received will be forwarded to reputable manufacturers, even though the goods on which you wish information are not advertised in the "News."

Success

The successful man in any business is the one who finds out all he can about that business from all the authorities in it and applies that information in building his success.

Good Authorities are hard to find, particularly in the Projection, Musical and Building end of the Theatre business.

J. H. Hallberg
Ernst Luz

are the best in their lines in the business.

They are on the staff of the "News" purposely to help YOU.

They will answer through the "News" any and all questions you may ask.

The "News" is your paper—built for you—and is here to help you.

Have no hesitation in asking for this help.

No matter how hard or simple the problem, these authorities are ready to look into it and tell you just what you want to know.

Gain SUCCESS by increasing your KNOWLEDGE.

THE TECHNICAL PRESS, NEW YORK

IN THREE LANGUAGES!

The Selig-Tribune prints news titles in three languages, on the film, namely—English, Italian and German.

This is another innovation that endears the Selig-Tribune to the peoples of the world—they can view latest news pictures from their native lands and read explanatory texts in the mother-tongue as well as in English.

Just another incentive to view the Selig-Tribune, released twice weekly through the General Film Company.

Alice BRADY and Holbrook BLINN IN "The BALLET GIRL"

Adapted from the novel
"CARNIVAL"
by
Compton Mackenzie

Life's cross-currents with their treacherous undertow are strikingly and fearlessly shown in this ultra-modern photo-drama of a beautiful girl's fight for "her place in the sun".

JENNIE RAEBURN'S problem the world old one of love or ambition's fulfillment furnishes in it's working out, an absorbing story of New York stage and society life.

ALICE BRADY in the most captivating and compellant role of her dramatic career.

Triangle Applause Continues

From North and South, East and West, the stream of congratulatory letters and telegrams praising TRIANGLE Service continues. Sometimes a big-city millionaire theatre owner wires us of the wonderful results TRIANGLE Plays are bringing him, and then a letter is received the same day from a little fellow in a small town advising that his business is better than ever. The big and the little alike are pleased with present results and are enthusiastic over the outlook for further profits in the future.

Here is a telegram from Turner & Dahnken which every exhibitor should read.

San Francisco, Cal.
January 16th, 1916.

Triangle Film Corporation,
71 West 23rd Street
New York City.
All San Francisco records shattered with TRIANGLE opening at Tivoli Opera House today. TRIANGLE Plays enthusiastically received. Thousands turned away.

Turner & Dahnken.

Unsolicited praise of this kind from people of this high standing should be the very best proof that a prospective TRIANGLE exhibitor could possibly desire. No amount of selling talk or enthusiasm displayed by a salesman over the merits of TRIANGLE Plays is as convincing as the many recommendations which have been received from hard-headed business men.

January 30th Triangle Releases Will Crowd the Box Office

There's an indefinable something about TRIANGLE Plays which draws the crowds back to the box-office window and compels returns.

This week Orrin Johnson in "The Price of Power" gives a wonderful characterization of the strong working man who set out to win a fortune. Nothing deterred him and he won the victory, but the price he paid makes a story that your patrons will surely appreciate. Seldom has there been a play of such strength —a play that arouses hate for the man as he exercises his power and sympathy in his troubles. This is the kind of a play that will make your first-performance patrons increase the number of people who attend the second show.

As for the second picture, no stronger drama—no play dealing more intimately with the rocks on which so many matrimonial bargains are wrecked has yet been seen than "The Green Swamp," in which Bessie Barriscale and Bruce McRae appear. Every husband and wife will appreciate this true story of domestic American life. It's a tale that holds the interest throughout and never lets a moment lag.

As for the Keystones, there are a couple of corkers this week— "He Did and He Didn't" and "Love Will Conquer." Fatty Arbuckle and Mable Normand appear in the first play and Fred Mace in the second. These three popular Keystone stars will keep your house alive with laughter.

ON THE STREET OF MAKE OR BREAK

The West Side, meaning Broadway and Riverside Drive, between 77th and 110th Streets, is the residential section of New York's most representative citizenship.

Here live the better-than-average substantial people—the class with incomes of $5,000 or better—a class not too fastidious to appreciate capably produced film dramas, but so discriminating that only the best will tempt it.

Exhibitors in this district probably must exercise greater care in the selection of their features than any other in the United States. Their houses are grouped so near that prospective patrons may pick that which most appeals to their taste. In addition, these managers have the fiercest competition in the world—that of New York's theatrical district—only a minute's ride away.

Sunday is the biggest day in the week in these theatres, and New Year's Sunday, naturally, one of the biggest of all.

On January 2nd last, of the nine theatres in this area, V-L-S-E features were exhibited in four. The fact that the pictures displayed in the other five houses were the product of five different companies is of added significance. In other words, Big Four had but one less booking than all other feature organizations combined.

That this is not an exceptional representation is best evidenced by the fact that the forty-six features released by the V-L-S-E from May 1st, 1915 to January 1st, have had so far all told 214 bookings in the nine theatres of this district.

The Riverview Theatre, for instance, has run forty-three out of the forty-six subjects and repeated on many of them. The Adelphi Theatre has shown twenty-two, some of them for two and three days, an uncommon occurence in New York City, and, as Manager Wolf says, "expect to take the rest of them right down the line." The Olympia has featured twenty-six of them and is rapidly extending its bookings.

Here, then, is the crucible of film features, and the record which V-L-S-E productions have made in it.

"A wise success-seeker", some one has said, "profits by the experience of those who have camped along the trail before him."

Are you one of these?

Dear Sir;----------

It is a pleasure to book the features of "The Big Four". Their drawing power in my theatre is greater than any other features that I have ever booked. The people have come to realize that your features combine excellent photography, good acting and stories with worthwhile and consistent plots. Your features send the people home satisfied which is an assurance that they will come again. Capacity houses are the rule for all your bookings. The last three,"The White Sister", "The Rosary" and "The Island of Regeneration" have established your features in the hearts of Spencer people.You may be sure of my future patronage.

Very truly yours,

Your patrons want
Paramount Pictures
THEY have read in the Ladies' Home Journal, Saturday Evening Post, Woman's Home Companion, Ladies' World, American Sunday Magazine and the leading newspapers everywhere, how they can determine the kind of pictures they want.
They see the criticism slide on your screen.
They know the Paramount Theatre Manager fills out a criticism blank after showing a Paramount Picture, marking thereon how his audience liked the picture. These blanks come in daily, from thousands of theatres, are tabulated, and the future program is built accordingly.
This is why the Famous Players Film Co., Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Co., The Oliver Morosco Photoplay Co., and Pallas Pictures are making Paramount Pictures today—they are 90 per cent pictures.
Give your patrons 90 per cent plus pictures and they will give you their support.

BOX OFFICE RECORDS SMASHED!

EXHIBITORS from coast to coast proclaim "The Girl and the Game" the most stupendous box office success of all their experience. Their telegrams, hot off the wires, and letters are jammed with "capacity" reports. Read some of this titanic testimony about this electrifying serial, the definite thrills in each chapter of which are guaranteed by President Hutchinson

This Telegram Tells!

All records broken on The Girl and the Game. Wonderful picture. Wonderful photography. In fact great. Keep up good work as established in first chapter and success will be yours. If succeeding chapters are on par with first, all series or serials will fade in oblivion.

RALPH KRETZER, Colonial Theatre, Springfield, O.

Turned Them Away!

At the first presentation of "The Girl and the Game" on last Monday evening, our only regret was that our house was not twice its present size as its capacity would even then be taxed with the number we turned away. Notwithstanding a vaudeville house situated directly across the street with a seating capacity of 1500 seats gave a first night performance, and three other picture houses in the next block were all bidding for the business.

CHAS. WALKER, Mgr., Academy Theatre, Pittsburgh

Attendance Marks Shattered!

For your information the Jitney Theatre, Minneapolis, played to 3100 people on the opening night of "THE GIRL AND THE GAME." This breaks all records for attendance at this theatre on opening night for any serial or series photoplay.

L. E. DAVIS, Representative.

Biggest and Best Serial!

I must say that this undoubtedly is the biggest and best serial ever produced. Helen Holmes is at her best and the first glimpse of the picture assures you that the photography is the same, the standard of perfection the Signal Film Co. has always adhered to. We turned them away last night and in closing will say—let me talk to any exhibitor who is afraid to tackle this money getter.

S. E. BUETTELL, Amuse Theatre, Dubuque, Ia.

Showing To Packed Houses!

This great serial is simply immense and we are showing to packed houses every Thursday — Thursday has always been my quietest day, but the way this picture has stimulated my business is wonderful,

GEORGE LAENHARDT,
Varsity Theatre, Champaign, Ill.

Be sure to mention "MOTION PICTURE NEWS" when writing to advertisers.

Ran 1st Episode of "THE GIRL AND THE GAME" Tuesday to the largest crowd that ever attended theatre. Started show at 6:15 p. m., and held them out until 10 minutes of ten. The most remarkable feat was that it was raining so hard. It was just pouring down and I had them standing to the car tracks.

SYLVESTER GUETLE, Mgr.
Center Theatre, Cincinnati, O.

Thousands of Theatres Book Big Profits!

Line up the big crowds at your box-office. Start this half-million dollar serial now—fifteen two-act chapters—one chapter released each week. Every chapter a terrific thriller! Chapter Six now appearing—shows daring Helen Holmes' fearful leap from open jack-knife bridge!!

Show to big money. "The Girl and the Game" nights are enormous payers—establish enthusiastic patronage. Act now—clinch record receipts for fifteen weeks!

With the Gloves Off

THE Federal Censorship bill and what has grown out of the Washington hearings present a crisis of greater import than any situation which has ever faced the industry.

If every exhibitor and producer who thinks at all upon matters of common interest doesn't think so, he had best begin thinking at once.

The situation is grave, so grave that in handling it the gloves should come off.

WHEN the Hughes bill lifted its head this year, there were exceedingly few in this industry who saw or foresaw it. If it had not been for the Board of Trade there would have been very few at Washington to oppose it.

To be more specific, there would have been a few self-sacrificing exhibitors, a few trade-journal editors and one or two producers—nobody else.

The Board of Trade obtained a hearing and led a movement to Washington which put up a large and united front—and did things.

ALL credit to every sincere and hard-working man who fought this bill and its common menace; but it is a fact that before unity of action developed at Washington, there were very few in the industry among those who journeyed there who knew what the bill was and why it was wrong.

Also—and most importantly—only now do we know what we want instead of censorship.

We want something—something else. We want it for the sake, the practical sake of the industry as a whole.

We want it for ourselves as well as for the picture and the public.

That something is—regulation.

WE are all agreed, it would seem, upon this point: that regulation is essential and that regulation is bound to come. We not only must have it; we will have it.

The only point we may not be clear upon is the ways and means by which the best possible regulation can be had.

RIGHT here let us get down to bed-rock: when we say, "we want regulation," what do we mean?

Is it not just this: that the reputable and respectable producer who makes sound, decent and legitimate pictures wants the good name of the business and its standing with the public protected against the harm the maker of indecent and obscene films can do, if he is allowed to market his product side by side with the responsible producer?

EVERY business has faced a similar problem at one time or another—the problem of protecting the health of the business against the unhealthy elements in it.

And every one in this business is agreed upon regulation to this extent and for this end.

But upon the form the regulation shall take comes the conflict.

We have two courses open:

Regulation, with protection, under Section 245 of the Federal Penal Code, as amended; and censorship.

REGULATION under Section 245, gives you these guarantees:

(1) That you, as a producer, are presumed to be a maker of decent pictures, and are permitted to transact your business unmolested, until competent evidence to the contrary is lodged against you.

(2) That anyone who charges you with making an obscene picture must prove his case, according to the rules of evidence, in a court of law, where you and he are equal in the eyes of the law.

(3) That your judges will be men trained in the weighing of fact and the interpretation of law, and competent to appreciate the merits of your case.

(4) That you as a reputable producer, are entitled, through your Board of Trade or any similar body, or as an exchangeman, or an exhibitor, through your local associations, to demand that the Federal District Attorney's office in your district proceed against any one in the business you know to be making or marketing indecent or obscene pictures.

(5) That all this entails no cost to you, but is a part of the State's service to you as one of its tax-paying citizens; and that the man who pays is only the man who is proven to have violated the law.

WHAT does censorship guarantee you?

(1) That every one of your pictures is presumed to be obscene until the censors have satisfied themselves they are not.

(2) That whether clean or unclean, you must pay a stipulated fee per picture, for the examination of them by the censors.

(3) That the censors have all the authority of a court of law, while you are deprived of all the rights and privileges of a defendant on trial, even though you are charged with a crime.

(4) That the censors are not chosen by any standards of fitness or eligibility to their position, and that you shall have no voice whatever in naming them, or in recommending candidates for those offices.

(5) That in passing upon your pictures, they are enforcing no specific provisions of a law, but are merely authorized by the law to make their private, personal opinion of your picture, binding upon you, regardless of your intent in producing it or of the original from which it was taken.

(6) That no matter how arbitrary, or narrow, or biased, or at variance with facts their judgment of your picture may be, you have no redress except in a court of law; and that this will be an added expense to you, besides the licensing fees you must pay.

(7) That when your business and property is put in jeopardy, instead of having the benefit of judges trained by both education and experience to weigh the merits of the facts in such cases, and exclude all external and immaterial considerations, you are at the mercy of a miscellaneous group of untrained private citizens armed with unlimited authority, and acknowledging no kind of restraint; and that their hastiest, most careless decision is as binding upon you as the carefully considered verdict of the gravest magistrate of the bench.

WE admit that the condition against which censorship is aimed exists in this business to some extent.

But we will not concede that censorship is the weapon with which it should be fought.

Censorship is the most dangerous means conceivabe to the end desired.

It is inflicting a greater evil upon the business to stamp out a lesser one.

That censorship can stamp it out is uncertain. What is terribly certain is that once censorship is fastened upon the motion picture, is can never be shaken off.

Even those who favor censorship admit that the condition of affairs they wish to change is only temporary; that in the natural evolution of the business it will disappear.

Then why open one's arms to a permanent evil for the sake of eradicating one that is admittedly temporary?

IT is as if a householder should one day find a valuable building of his infested with vermin, and, instead of fumigating it or calling upon the regularly constituted Board of Health, he should apply a torch to it and burn it to the ground.

The vermin may be exterminated—or they may escape. But of the fate of the house there is no doubt.

Where Many Directors Fail

BECAUSE the screen is a magnificent medium for story telling, directors ought to be very sure that in building a picture they are really telling a story. Appallingly few pictures show that their directors have any comprehension of what a story is.

Most pictures are weak in dramatic contrasts. They keep one line of action going, to be sure, but as for contrasting, by means of parallel action and cutbacks, the vital elements of the plot—here most of them fail.

That the screen needs genuine, gripping stories is an undeniable fact. But the best story in the world can be reduced to a mere shadow by incompetent and careless direction.

The players may be the highest type of screen artists. Their individual acting may be ever so convincing. But unless the director knows when, how and where to parallel and cutback, the work of his players will be individually brilliant, and his picture as a whole will be a failure. Surprisingly few directors, as yet, have mastered these two divisions of screen art. When they attempt to put them into play, they end by making the plot confusing, disjointed and unconvincing.

The parallel and the cutback are not the whole story, by any means; but until a director learns how to employ them, he is in danger of spoiling every plot given him for production.

We assign failure along this line to directors rather than to scenario writers, because it is the director nowadays who, more than anyone else, is responsible for the photoplay as it appears in its final form.

"Germanophobia" and Pictures in Canada

WE have seen hysteria in various forms, but we have yet to look upon any manipulation of it more pathetic or unworthy of rational human beings than that displayed by the censors and officials of British Columbia during the last few months.

First it was "Judy Forgot." Some nervous and suspicious British official read the word "Heidelberg" in a subtitle, and banned the film as a piece of German propaganda.

Then it was "Carmen"—the Farrar "Carmen." The picture itself was not attacked, but the Canadian officials remembered that Farrar had been a favorite in German musical circles, had made her debut and her first success in Berlin—in short, was pro-German.

Instantly mayors, newspaper editors, exhibitors, officials join in a "hymn of hate" against the prima donna. They take pleasure in forbidding to allow "Carmen" to be shown, in refusing to book it, in writing nasty and vitriolic letters to the press about it.

It's too bad. Pitiful enough when it shows itself in one individual, it is ten times so when a whole people sink to such contemptible puerility.

Evils of Federal Censorship Made Evident to House Committee by Motion Picture Board of Trade

Many Who Went to Hearing on Smith-Hughes Bill Favoring Enactment of the Measure Change Opinions After Speakers Against Proposed Law Present Their Arguments—This Action Is Rendered Conspicuous in the Case of Congressman Towner, Who Finally Introduced Measure Embodying Recommendations Made by the Body Representing the Industry

Special to Motion Picture News

Washington, D. C., Jan. 22.

THE series of hearings granted to the Motion Picture Board of Trade on behalf of the industry, by the House Committee on Education, in connection with the Smith-Hughes censorship bill, came to an end last Wednesday evening.

The dramatic features of the closing sessions were, however, overshadowed by the definite news, twenty-four hours after the termination of the hearings, that Congressman Horace M. Towner, of Iowa, had introduced into the House the measure embodying the recommendations made by Motion Picture News through the Board of Trade, consisting of the amendment of Section 245 of the Federal Penal Code, bringing motion pictures specifically within the provisions of the act.

This measure is known as House Bill No. 5921, and has been referred to the Judiciary Committee of the House.

Throughout the hearings, Congressman Towner has been foremost in his questioning of the witnesses offered by the Board of Trade. Consequently his act in introducing the substitute measure came as a distinct surprise to many who had been present.

Towner Wanted the Facts in the Case

In an interview with the representative of Motion Picture News, Congressman Towner disclaimed any preconceived hostility to the motion picture and declared his sole object in his searching cross-examinations had been to arrive at exact facts.

He added that his introduction of the bill amending Section 245 should not be construed as aligning him with either side in the censorship struggle.

He believed, he said, that whether the Hughes bill became a law or not, Section 245 of the Federal Penal Code should be amended as the Board of Trade had suggested.

The section of the Federal penal code under question, as it would read if amended, is herewith reprinted from an earlier issue of Motion Picture News, the amending words being printed in italics:

Amended Section of Penal Code

"Whoever shall bring, or cause to be brought into the United States or any place subject to the jurisdiction thereof, from any foreign country, or shall therein knowingly deposit or cause to be deposited with any express company or other common carrier for carriage from one state, territory, or district of the United States or place non-contiguous to but subject to the jurisdiction thereof, to any other state, territory or district of the United States or place non-contiguous to but subject to the jurisdiction thereof, or from any place in or subject to the jurisdiction of the United States through any foreign country to any place in or subject to the jurisdiction thereof, or from any place in or subject to the jurisdiction of the United States to any foreign country, any obscene, lewd or lascivious, or any filthy book, pamphlet, picture, motion picture film, paper, letter, writing, print, or any other matter or indecent character . . . or whoever shall knowingly take or cause to be taken from such express company or other common carrier any matter or thing, the depositing of which for carriage is herein made unlawful, shall be fined not more than $5,000, or imprisoned not more than five years, or both."

Two dramatic episodes broke the even current of the sessions. The first was the speech of Martin W. Littleton, of New York, denouncing the Hughes bill.

It was pronounced one of the most stirring pieces of oratory ever delivered in a Congressional committee room.

Arguing that the individual states have both the right and the power to regulate what their people shall see and hear, he asked: "Why attempt to wrench this power from the state? Why try to pull the whole police power of the state through the knot hole of interstate commerce?"

Attacking the method which the advocates of Federal censorship of motion pictures are attempting to invoke Mr. Littleton said:

Congress Must Not Leave Matter to Commission

"If Congress acts in a matter of any importance it is obliged to translate into specific law, as nearly as may be, the will of the people.

"Congress must not impose the burden of finding out what the will of the people is upon an appointive, irresponsible commission.

"If we have come to the point as a nation where we are willing to enter upon law-made censorship of what we shall see and read and hear, then Congress must act as the medium through which the people express their will and not set up an oracular oligarchy of five bureaucrats as the medium for the expression of the will of the people.

"What is an immoral picture or film? Who can answer that question? If Congress is speaking for the people, will it write into the law an answer to this question, or will it remit us to an appointive board for an answer?

"If Congress cannot define what is or what is not an immoral picture and cannot write a law which will fix a standard, then how can we say that five nominees of the President will be blessed with the wisdom or endowed with the genius to strike the line of cleavage between a moral and an immoral picture?"

Friend Appears for Paramount, World, Equitable and Metro

The other incident which partook of the dramatic was the appearance of Arthur S. Friend, general counsel for the Lasky company, representing the Paramount Pictures Corporation and Famous Players Film Company and, semi-officially, the World Film, Equitable Pictures and the Metro Pictures Corporations.

The film men had scored their point and the curtain was just about to come down upon the reformers when Mr. Friend made his entry and introduced evidence that would tend to show that censorship was a necessity. A letter from R. A. Rowland, president of the Metro Pictures Corporation, addressed to W. W. Hodkinson, president of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, he offered in evidence. The letter read as follows:

"Dear Mr. Hodkinson:

"We have been opposed to the spirit and essence of censorship because it places on the few the responsibilities of judging for the many, because censorship is often construed as an invitation to censoriousness and because in operation it bears fruit in rulings that are hampering, petty and needless. Such a condition makes against progress in any art.

"On the other hand we welcome regulation, not censorship, that will protect the producer of clean and entertaining pictures from the competition of salacious pictures.

"In our opinion such regulation should in plan and operation be broad, sympathetic and designed solely for the protection of the public and the manufacturer against pictures that are indecent, obscene, or inciting to crime.

"The regulation should be free from the influence of the professionally virtuous, free from the whims of politics, and operative in so hard-headed and sensible a manner as to solve the problem for the entire country.

"We hope that this makes our position clear on the subject.

"Yours very truly,

"R. A. Rowland,

"President, Metro Pictures Corporation."

There was a hush in the hearing room while Mr. Friend delivered his address on censorship. Then the lawyer offered to lend his aid, and that of the companies interested, in formulating a law for the "regulation of motion picture films." His remarks were made capital of by the proponents of the bill in an effort to offset those of previous speakers in defence of the industry.

That the motion picture men had the bill practically defeated was evidenced by the fact that at the final session Dr. Crafts offered an amended bill which, in his belief, offset the objections of the film men. He read it in haste and thrust it upon them for consideration almost at the closing minute.

Crafts Proposes Salaries of Censors Raised 100 Per Cent.

He omitted the feature of seals and certificates; raised the proposed salaries one hundred per cent. that there might be assurance that capable men could be obtained to act as censors, entered a clause permitting the board to meet at such place or places that might be most convenient in their work, and made it imperative that if after the expiration of six months it was found that the cost of inspection could be lowered, that course be taken.

He increased the amount of the initial appropriation to $80,000, entered a clause that required the prompt inspection of all films offered for censorship by a manufacturer or importer, and provided that from time to time the commission shall make a report containing recommendations of pictures particularly suitable for children, and suggestions regarding the recreational and educational uses of the films.

The film men had the adherents sparring for time for Canon Chase followed with further recommendations that news pictorials be relieved of censorship; that a provision be made for appeal to the courts, either in the United States District Court in Washington, or in the court of the district in which the film was produced, and he would give the commission the power to make rules and regulations for carrying the law into effect.

The film men left the city, however, feeling that they had put up a good fight and while they were unable to say that their testimony would cause the bill to die in committee, yet they were sure that they had been successful in bringing about a division of opinion within the committee so that if the bill does come up for serious consideration, the chairman will find among the members those who are unalterably opposed to any type of censorship.

Noticeable Change in Attitude of Committee Members

When the hearings were recommended last week there was a noticeable change in the attitude of some of the members of the committee.

At the hearing the previous Saturday evening Mr. Rucker, of Missouri, plainly announced his opposition to the bill, and on the following Monday, Mr. Powers, of Kentucky, showed his friendliness towards the motion picture interests by the questions he propounded which allowed of the insertion in the record of very favorable testimony.

Congressman Towner's name and fame will go down into history as the man who had the courage to openly state that the press should be censored and would be censored were not its power so greatly feared, and intimated that the censoring of motion pictures was favored because no such fear was present.

The feature of Monday evening was the dramatic recitation of W. Stephen Bush, who held his audience spellbound when he outlined "The Resurrection," and told of how little such a play could affect the mind of a child. He literally pulled to pieces the testimony of some of the opposition and did much to change the opinion of the committee.

Congressman Towner Slaps the Press

In referring to the controversy that if there is need for censorship of motion pictures there is a greater need for the censorship of the press, Congressman Towner said: "Everybody recognized that the press ought to be consored, but they fear doing it.

"The fear that you have and that I have is that perhaps such a board of censorship might prove more of a harm than good, but you think there is no question about it."

The possible political misuse of censorship was brought out by Mr. Bush in calling attention to the fact that with a partisan board motion pictures might be used with powerful effect by the party in conrol of the destinies of the country in the advocacy of its principles as against those of the opposing political party.

His remarks were supplemented by those of Congressman Powers. There could be no fairness, for there is no provision for an appeal to the courts from a decision of the commission—the appeal would be only to the Secretary of the Interior, a Presidential appointee and naturally a follower of the party in power.

"The passage of this bill would only multiply boards," declared J. W. Binder, who led the fight of the motion picture men.

"When this bill had been introduced, I asked this specific question of Governors Capper of Kansas and Brumbaugh of Pennsylvania, both states that have state censor boards: 'If Federal government enacts a censorship law covering motion pictures would your state accept its findings and abolish your local boards?'

" 'If the Federal government censors pictures in line with Kansas ideas, the Legislature might repeal the state law. At present Kansas cannot accept rulings of outside boards,' wired Governor Arthur Capper of Kansas.

" 'Pennsylvania prefers to maintain its own censorship of motion pictures,' is the answer made by Governor Martin Brumbaugh of Pennsylvania."

Helen Varick Boswell, of New York City, chairman of the Committee on Education of the General Federation of Women's Clubs of the United States, and president of the Women's Forum of New York City, said:

"This commission would be forced to sit on one horn or another of a dilemma. Either it would be so liberal that the persons creating it would rebel or it would be so narrow that states, cities and towns would laugh it out of court. It is impossible to criticise films both for the mature and the immature. Children's pictures must be selected and exhibited under positive, constructive plans and not by censorship. The parents of the land have shirked their duty, heretofore, and have given a foolish liberty to their children. It is their responsibility, not that of the nation, to formulate safeguards."

Mrs. Howard S. Gans, president of the Federation for Child Study of New York concurred.

From the Edison laboratory at Orange, N. J., came the following terse telegram: "We are opposed to the principle of all governmental censorships."

From Rev. Thomas Dixon, Jr., noted author: "If I write a book no censorship board asks to see the proofs. If I convert the same ideas into a play and keep within the bounds of decency provided by the common law no censor can interpose his 'I forbid.' Get rid of this censorship bugaboo and let the motion picture realize the brilliont future before it."

David Horsley, of Los Angeles, Cal., telegraphs: "I protest vigorously against the tearing down or hampering of the wonderful work being carried forward by motion pictures through professional reformers who will no doubt carry their reform ideas into the next world when they go and sit around criticising the quality of the coal instead of doing their share of the shovelling."

Dissatisfaction with Pictures an Exaggeration

The Rev. Dr. Abram Simon, of the Eighth Street Temple, of Washington, also appeared in opposition of the bill. "I must admit to a change in my whole attitude towards this question," he said. "I was one of the very violent attackers of the 'movies' a short time ago. I have learned several things. First, I have learned to feel that the dissatisfaction with them is an exaggeration. I do not believe the country is so stirred up as we are led to believe about the immorality of the pictures. I believe we have a good deal of 'movie hysteria' and I am honest enough to admit that I was hysterical some years ago."

Canon William Sheafe Chase, representative of all sorts of societies for the prevention of crime, etc., led the attack for the advocates of the bill. He said that from thirty-three to forty per cent. of the attendance at the theatres was by children. These must be protected.

He declared that he had read that obscene pictures made the best business and that the legitimate pictures felt this sort of competition to a great extent. The Hughes bill, if enacted into law, would protect the industry and cure this condition.

At the Tuesday hearing Canon Chase took exception to the remarks previously made by Dr. Brady to the effect that the movement for censorship originated with the church and that there was a desire to bring about a union of the church and state.

"In my opinion," he said, "one of the most foolish things the manufacturers could do would be to resist this movement, because if they resist more and more censorship is going to grow in the states. Already a bill has been drawn up in the State of New York and in order to get it through it is necessary to have some financial consideration for the passage of the bill. They will not have a bill that will put any more expense on the state, but if a tax can be gotten from the industry the bill is going through."

Federal Censorship the Alternative, Canon Chase

Canon Chase stated that the alternative was Federal censorship. "Instead of that bill going through all that would be necessary would be to say that 'no picture shall be shown in the State of

Los Angeles Attitude Toward Film Makers Changes

Following the Formation of the Motion Picture Producers' Protective Association to Combat the Unwarranted Attacks of the Authorities on the Industry, and the "Hold-up" Abuses of Many Merchants Having Dealings with Picture People, City Adopts Conciliatory Policy

ACCORDING to Jesse L. Lasky, president of the Jesse L. Lasky, Feature Play Company, who arrived in New York last week, the recent unsatisfactory attitude of the citizens and government of Los Angeles toward motion picture producers located there, has changed to one of co-operation.

Some of the producers went so far as to contemplate removing their interests to other cities. Many of them admitted they had received generous offers to locate elsewhere.

This lack of co-operation, which took various forms, led the producers to form the Motion Picture Producers Protective Association. The object of the organization is to protect its members against the unwarranted attacks and interference of meddlers, the exchange of ideas to prevent a continuance of "hold-up" abuses, including contract jumping, and to work for the general betterment of mutual interests.

Friction Between City and Studios

For a long time, it appears, there has been considerable friction between the manufacturers and the city folk. The manufacturers assert they were hindered by the "hold up" schemes of merchants, red tape methods of city employees, and objectionable censorship of pictures by self-constituted moralists.

The spark of discontent was fanned to a flame the other day when a Los Angeles clergyman denounced motion picture studios in the city as places tending to immorality.

Stirred by the possibility of losing a commercial asset worth at least $25,000,000 annually to the city, Mayor Sebastian appointed a joint committee, composed of representatives of important civic, industrial, and financial organizations, forming the Motion Picture Conservation Association to meet the producers' committee, comprising David W. Griffith, Jesse L. Lasky and David Horsley. The meeting was held in the City Council Chambers on January 4.

David Horsley, one of the speakers, pointed out that the producers would be willing to carry a credit line, "Made in Los Angeles," on films where the illusion would not be destroyed thereby. Los Angeles booster organizations have sponsored a movement to have the credit line appear on all films produced there.

Mr. Horsley declared that the producers were not receiving fair play from the city. He told of the abuses heaped upon the industry by so-called moralists; how the producers had been annoyed in their work by petty police regulation and red tape methods; how the city building department had persecuted the producers by injudicious tactics; how merchants had pursued "hold up" arrangements, etc.

Fair Play Lacking from City

If any producer had been guilty of any unlawful acts, the process of law should be invoked against him, Mr. Horsley asserted. The entire industry should not be indicted for one man's offense, if there were any offense.

As a result, the Motion Picture Conservation Association adopted the following resolution:

"Resolved, That it be the sense of this meeting that the various civic bodies of Los Angeles be requested to indorse this organization, and also indorse its activities in shielding the motion picture industry and the motion picture producers of Los Angeles from the attacks of sensation mongers."

The newspapers of Los Angeles took up the matter with much gusto, presenting Mr. Horsley's long speech in full, and called on all citizens for a proper appreciation of the industry's worth in their midst.

Horsley Points Out Abuses

The following day, January 5, Mr. Horsley was the principal speaker for the producers at the Realty Board Luncheon. He backed up his remarks of the evening before by specifically naming instances of unfair treatment.

Upon his arrival in New York, Mr. Lasky, discussing the ideas back of the producers' new organization, said:

"One of the association's first steps in the big city coast organization in and around Los Angeles will be the elimination for all time of the constantly recurring difficulties between the studios over players who disregard contracts.

"With the Eastern manufacturers, also members of the association, this adjustment can be made to cover all the companies. Contract jumpers, so called, present only one problem that has arisen as a result of the rapid and extraordinary growth of the motion picture industry.

"Members of the association also believe that with such an organization some equitable solution will be reached in the salary question.

"I do not hesitate to say that at the present time the salaries received by some of the stars are wholly out of keeping with good business and sound growth.

Film Colony Numbers 15,000

"During one of our first meetings it was estimated with some degree of correctness that there are approximately in Los Angeles fifteen thousand persons actively engaged each day in the motion picture industry.

"It is also estimated that approximately twenty-five million dollars annually is spent by the film companies in and around Los Angeles. I think this is a modest estimate.

"About a year ago there developed in Los Angeles, a feeling of hesitancy in extending co-operation to motion picture manufacturers. I should like to say, however, that now, partly as a result of the newly formed organization and because of other causes, the people and the city government of Los Angeles are inclined to meet the producers more than half way.

"For this reason, I feel that if any eastern producers contemplating moving to the West have hesitated about doing so, I may give them every assurance that the present conditions in this respect are splendid.

"When it was first reported that there was a certain dissatisfaction among the Los Angeles producers, it was interesting to note the cordial invitations which were extended to the film companies by other cities.

"These invitations which came to the Lasky studio probably are good illustrations of invitations received by others as well.

"One community in California even went so far as to offer the Lasky company a large tract of land and a studio built and equipped after designs drawn by us if we would move from Hollywood and produce near their city.

"The proposition was so attractive that we gave it investigation and also discovered that if we moved it would have meant the emigration from Hollywood of approximately fifteen hundred men, women and children representing our employees and their families.

"Needless to say, in view of the improved conditions, we refused the invitation."

L. A. QUILL JOINS GOES LITHOGRAPH FORCE

L. A. Quill, recently connected with the "Universal Weekly," has left that company and is now managing the New York office of the Goes Lithograph Company. Temporarily, Mr. Quill is making his headquarters 206 Broadway.

He is, however, planning to open an uptown office in the very near future. The most recent paper which has been turned out by this office is that of the Raver Film Company on their recent picture "The Other Girl."

AUGUSTUS PHILLIPS JOINS "U" FOR PART IN "WHY MRS. KENTWORTH LIED"

Augustus Phillips, late Edison star and director, has joined Universal. Manager Julius Stern has assigned him to a strong part in "Why Mrs. Kentworth Lied," which Director Matt Moore is producing and also appearing in making two directors in the acting cast of one picture.

George Kleine Elected President of General Film

George K. Spoor Becomes Vice-President, Frank J. Marion, Secretary, and Paul G. Melies, Treasurer—P. L. Waters and W. N. Selig Are Two New Members of Directorate

THE annual election of the General Film Company took place Wednesday, January 19, following the annual stockholders' meeting. New officers were elected as follows: George Kleine, president; George K. Spoor, vice-president; Frank J. Marion, secretary, and Paul G. Melies, treasurer.

Mr. Kleine is one of the best known and most successful film manufacturers in the industry. He is one of the group of men who has made the motion picture business what it is today. He succeeds J. A. Berst, who resigned to return to Pathé Freres as vice-president and general manager.

George K. Spoor, now vice-president, is president of the Essanay Manufacturing Company, and represents that organization upon the board of directors of the General Film Company.

Frank J. Marion, who was formerly vice-president, and who is now secretary, is president of the Kalem Company, another of the group of manufacturers who distribute their products through the General Film Company. As in the past, Mr. Marion represents the Kalem Company as a director of the General Film Company.

The new treasurer of the General Film Company is Paul G. Melies, who is president of the Melies Manufacturing Company.

The executive committee, it is announced through the officers of the company, 200 Fifth avenue, will consist of President Kleine, Frank J. Marion, and Albert E. Smith. Mr. Smith is treasurer of the Vitagraph Company of America.

At the directors' meeting which preceded the election of officers, but two changes in the directorate were made. P. L. Waters, of the Biograph, succeeds J. L. Kennedy of the same organization; and Col. W. N. Selig, president of the Selig-Polyscope Company, becomes a director.

The complete board and the manufacturing organization which each director represents is as follows:

George Kleine, Kleine; Frank J. Marion, Kalem; Paul G. Melies, Melies; W. N. Selig, Selig; Ferdinand Singhi, Lubin; Albert E. Smith, Vitagraph; George K. Spoor, Essanay; P. L. Waters, Biograph; and C. H. Wilson, Edison.

It is stated authoritatively that there will be no changes in the policies of the General Film Company.

Paramount Furnishes Novel Paper with Bray Films

Posters and Press Matter Will Shortly Be Issued with the Burton Holmes Travel Pictures —Sheet Devoted to "Colonel Heeza Liar's Waterloo" Designed by Gil-Spear

THAT the short reels obtainable through the Paramount Pictures Corporation must come up to the high standard set by the Famous Players Film Company, Lasky Feature Play Company, Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company and Pallas Pictures in the production of long photoplays is one of the strongest contentions of the Paramount executives.

For this reason such men as J. R. Bray have been chosen to produce films which will lend variety to the program of any high class house and the Paramount Pictures Corporation has done its share by furnishing with the productions of the Bray Studios Inc., and the Bray-Gilbert Films, Inc., the best lithographs and press aids to the exhibitor obtainable.

While the same thing applies to the Paramount—Burton Holmes Travel Pictures if anything to an even greater extent, the paper for the latter is not yet ready, and therefore cannot take its place in the accompanying illustrations, which show clearly the kind of material Paramount is offering.

The sheet devoted to "Colonel Heeza Liar's Waterloo" was designed and executed by Gil-Spear. White letters on a purple background make a beautiful and unusual effect, while the still of the funny little colonel cannot but attract the eye.

"Inbad the Sailor," the first Silhouette Fantasy produced for Paramount by Bray-Gilbert Films, Inc., is represented by an unusually artistic drawing made by C. B. Falls, the celebrated artist. White lettering on a dark blue background with the figure of the witch in black is extremely effective and decidedly out of the ordinary.

For "Farmer Alfalfa's Cat-Astrophe," by Paul Terry, a production of the Bray Studios, to be released on February 5, Joseph Edelman, of the Sterling Advertising Service, has prepared an especially attractive design, and executed it in his striking manner.

While the three sheets are entirely different in idea and coloring, yet there is a certain distinctive quality which marks them all.

WALTER EDWIN DIRECTING A THEATRE SCENE FOR "OUR LADY OF LAUGHTER" (Kleine-Edison)

F. LUMSDEN HARE, WORLD, PLAYED WITH PROMINENT STARS

A new World Film acquisition is F. Lumsden Hare, a leading English actor well known to the legitimate stage. He was born in Tipperary, Ireland, and educated at Saint Dunston's College in London.

LUMSDEN HARE

He followed the sea four years before going on the stage. In London he appeared in such important roles as "Ben Hur," "John Storm" in "The Christian" and "The Admirable Crichton."

He has also appeared in South Africa and throughout the Orient, landing in America in 1904. Since then he has played leads with John Drew, Ethel Barrymore, Fay Davis, Amelia Bingham, Billie Burke, Gertrude Elliott, Maude Adams, and Grace George.

He is an ardent golfer and motorist and is a member of the Lambs' and Players' Clubs. His favorite hobby is fruit farming on his Long Island estate.

Mr. Hare is playing the leads in two World Film features, "Love's Crucible" with Frances Nelson and "As in a Looking Glass" in support of Kitty Gordon.

"SALAMANDER" STATE RIGHTS SOLD FOR NEW YORK, NEW ENGLAND AND SOUTHWEST

During the past week B. S. Moss has disposed of "The Salamander" for fifteen states. Among the concerns which purchased territory were the Amalgamated Feature Photo Company, for New York City, New York state and Northern New Jersey; Union Film Supply Company of Boston, for the New England states; Central Film Company, Chicago, for Illinois and Indiana; L. Santikos, for Texas and Oklahoma; and Edward Nussbaum, for California, Nevada and Arizona.

The rights for Australia and New Zealand have been absorbed by the Australasian Film Company, Ltd., Millard Johnson, the New York representative, engineering the deal.

The Press, Press Representative and the Picture—XVII

Well, Well! What Do You Think of This? A Buffalo Manager With an Implicit Faith in "Circus Methods" Hits Upon the Idea of Importing a Press Agent Formerly with P. T. Barnum to Load Up City Editors with (Stuff They'll Never Use)—Rational Copy and Good Photos Get Results

A BUFFALO, N. Y., manager, in voicing his ideas on the "right kind of publicity and publicity directors," made the following statement: "I am going to bring a man from Toronto to take care of my advertising. This man used to be with P. T. Barnum and knows how to get big stuff across in the papers. I wouldn't give a cent for a press agent that could not get a theatre business."

Shades of P. T. Barnum! What talk from a 1916 manager of an up-to-date house. First of all if that man does come from Toronto and try to put over "circus stuff" in Buffalo, he will never get his copy further than the city or the dramatic editor's desk, as the case may be. Buffalo newspapers have long since "tabooed" so called "circus advertising" in connection with theatrical publicity.

Space has become too valuable in present day newspapers to waste on stories which a few years ago found columns in the press. White paper is literally kept in the safe these days and orders have gone out from the proprietor's office to "cut everything to the bone, slash it and trim it."

Theatrical publicity today must be dignified. Tales about such and such a star being a devotee of snake culture, or taking his daily milk bath, are noticeable by their absence.

There is not one Buffalo paper, and there are six of them, which will use this matter. And this is the kind of copy that the manager mentioned expects to put across in Buffalo through his "P. T. Barnum press agent."

Must Be Real News

When special stories do get into print in Buffalo they must be of extraordinary interest. For example, the coming to Buffalo of Geraldine Farrar in motion pictures was a good excuse for some extra space and the local papers were very liberal in granting it.

However, all the copy on this subject was written in a dignified manner, told of Miss Farrar's entrance into the silent art, why she entered and some of her experiences in the West while appearing before the camera—so on and so forth.

Now if our P. T. Barnum press agent had gone to the city desk with a story of how Miss Farrar had started a craze in Los Angeles for bouquets worn on the ankle, putting the fact that she was going to Buffalo in a filmization of "Carmen" or "Temptation," the story would have been accepted by the editor, but accepted only to get rid of the press agent, and when said press agent had made himself "persona non grata" that story would have found its way with many others like it, into the waste basket.

Managers should not be deluded by the idea that just because the motion picture is sweeping the country with a wave of popularity, that the press will accept any old thing as long as it refers to some phase of the film business, especially "circus copy."

As a matter of fact as soon as an editor sees that the copy refers to motion pictures or is from a motion picture theatre he marks at the top of the copy "Cut," or "slash it."

This is because, in the first place, some theatre managers believe that when they give the business office a one inch single column ad, they are entitled to a column writeup free. And this is just what, a few months ago, caused several of the local business managers on papers to get "up in arms," and put a damper on special stories.

Newspapers Compelled to Draw Line

Every time an ad was inserted the manager expected his press agent to get across a special story. This, of course, was fine from the manager's point of view, but such a proposition was greeted with "42-centimeter" growls by the business manager.

The result was that the papers faced a situation that when one theatre got a story, another rival house which was also placing ads immediately demanded one also, until the columns became clogged with this matter and, at last, a "good thing" became a "bad thing."

At last one local business manager announced that no theatre would get a line outside of the Sunday notice, the Tuesday criticism and the Thursday midweek notice.

The theatre managers were shocked, several quite seriously. But that order stood and still stands. Other local papers followed suit and today there is a noticeable absence of "special stories."

Just as this situation has reached a climax, the writer was unfortunate enough to hear about the manager who was going to bring his "P. T. Barnum press agent" from Toronto to get across something big.

Therefore, this story just had to be lifted from the writer's chest. If Buffalo motion picture houses want to get copy into the papers there is only one way to do it and that is by consistent, daily and weekly advertising, day in and day out, the year around.

This sort of advertising establishes confidence in the theatre by the paper and added space in writeups is the result. This coming along with a one inch ad on Sunday and expecting a big writeup for it is ended and that is as it should be.

Exit All "Circus Copy" from Papers

Papers are printed to make money, theatres are built for the same purpose and at present both have big expenses to face. So why not both be fair. Buffalo papers no longer stand for "circus copy," they want readable matter. A theatre gets just as much space in writeups as it gives in advertising.

In fact that system is in vogue in local editorial rooms. A list is sent to the editorial department at the end of each week, upon which is shown in black and white the amount of avertising matter placed by each and every theatre using that paper. That list decides the amount of reading matter and the position given in the makeup of the dramatic page.

It is understood that this same manager is authority for the remark that "Photographs are of no value in theatre publicity." This statement requires no answer in 1916, because it is an established fact that the right kind of a photograph is invaluable.

Few people can resist the temptation to look at an interesting picture. And it might be mentioned that there is a noticeable improvement in the class of photographs which manufacturers are sending to the desks of motion picture editors.

The old blurry photos are disappearing with the substitution of artistic photographs. This move is a most commendable one. Real pictures of real stars usually find space in real illustrated sections. There they do unlimited good in a publicity way for the house which is fortunate enough to have its name in the cut line over or beneath that picture.

The writer hopes that someone will disillusion the manager who is going to bring his circus press agent to Buffalo, before he makes the move, and later finds that he must send him home.

The theatre that plugs along every day is winning out in Buffalo and it is noticed that in the regular notices they are getting just as much space as the legitimate theatres. It is the every day advertising that counts.

But circus copy has met its Waterloo in Buffalo, and photographs are still firing away their messages. Selah!

COCHRANE WILL PRODUCE SUBJECT FEATURING CARMEN PHILLIPS FOR "U"

George Cochrane, brother of Robert H. Cochrane, vice-president of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, who for the past few months has been acting as assistant director to Sydney Ayres, was this week placed at the head of a dramatic producing company of photoplayers at Universal City.

The first picture which he will make is a one-reel story adapted for screen purposes by F. McGrew Willis from the story by Laura Oakley. In it Carmen Phillips and Douglas Gerrard plays the leading roles.

The Evening Telegraph, the first Philadelphia paper to carry a "Right Off the Reel" page, celebrated the New Year by a special picture edition.

F. M. Armato, photo play editor, had several pages of local ads., crisp interviews, histories of prominent film folk and other interesting matter.

Berst Is Elected Vice-President of Pathé Company

New Official Returns to Company in Which He Held the Same Position for Several Years—Knows the Industry from Manufacturing to Selling

AT a meeting of the Pathé board of directors, held last week, J. A. Berst, president of the General Film Company, was elected vice-president and general manager of the Pathé Exchange, Inc., to succeed L. J. Gasnier, who resigned last week. Mr. Berst, who for years has been one of the big men of the motion picture industry, thus again allies himself with the organization in which for years he held the same position to which he is now called.

Pathé's new vice-president was born in Paris, France, and up to December his entire business career was bound up with the house of Pathé. His first position was that of Pathé's only employee, way back in 1896, when he was called upon to do everything from manufacturing to selling.

In 1904 he was sent by Charles Pathé to the United States to develop the market for Pathé films here. The stock of films he brought with him was small and some of them were as short as fifteen feet. Mr. Berst rented offices on Twenty-third street, New York, and marketed the films himself at prices that seem very low nowadays.

His infant business prospered—so much so that he engaged a cashier and office boy. Each year saw such increases that in 1908 it was decided to install a factory equipment at Bound Brook, N. J., where the main Pathé American factory has ever since been located.

The year following the big studio in Jersey City was built, and Louis J. Gasnier, also for many years identified with Pathé interests, came over from France to be chief studio director. At this time was begun the production of Pathé American dramas and comedies, and the stock company formed, which later was to contain such players as Pearl White, Henry Walthall, Gwendoline Pates, Paul Panzer, Crane Wilbur, Octavia Handworth, Lillian Wiggins, the late Joseph Graybill, Charles Arling, Francis Carlyle, Eleanor Woodruff and Irving Cummings.

The all-around experience which Mr. Berst had received in the Pathé factory and office in France, united with his selling experience in this country, stood him in good stead and took concrete form in the phenomenal growth of the business. In telling of those early days Mr. Berst mentions the fact that the first long Pathé picture in any way comparable to the modern features was the four-part Passion Play which was brought over from France in 1906.

In December of 1913, Mr. Berst resigned and became treasurer of the General Film Company. Early in 1915 he was proffered and accepted the position of vice-president and general manager of the Selig Company. Several months ago he resigned to accept the presidency of the General Film Company, which office he now resigns to go back with Pathé.

Mr. Berst knows the film business as do few men. With all its branches of manufacturing, producing and marketing he is thoroughly familiar. He has made a most enviable record as an executive and business builder, and the news that he again is with the organization which he so materially aided in bringing to its present importance, will interest the entire film world.

Mr. Gasnier, whom he succeeds, will very likely become the Pathé director of production, that end of the business which has always been the nearest to his heart.

BROCKWELL SCENARIO, "A LAW UNTO HIMSELF," ACCEPTED BY HORSLEY FOR WILBUR

David Horsley has accepted from Lillian V. Brockwell, actress, literateur and photoplaywright, an original scenario entitled "A Law Unto Himself," which is now being picturized in five acts for release as a Mutual Masterpicture, De Luxe Edition. Crane Wilbur is the player featured in it.

Miss Brockwell, who has had extensive dramatic and literary experience, has been writing scenarios successfully for the past three years. Her theatrical service covered a period of years, during which time she appeared under the management of J. B. Haviland, and Billy Mack; in stock at the Lafayette theatre in Washington, D. C., and as leading "heavy" woman in Charles Frohman productions for three years.

She gave up the stage in order to take up literary work, toward which she had always been inclined. Among the periodicals to which she has been a prominent contributor is Everybody's Magazine.

Three years ago she wrote her first scenario, which was produced so successfully that she had devoted most of her time to that occupation ever since.

STATE RIGHTS BUYERS ATTRACTED BY QUALITY OF STAR COMEDY CARTOONS

The Star Comedy Cartoons, which are being sold on a state-right basis by the Herald Film Corporation of 126 West Forty-sixth street, New York, are meeting with such success wherever shown that the demand for these cartoons by the independent state-right buyers is very flattering considering the short time these cartoons have been on the market; and the territories are being disposed of very rapidly.

These cartoons, which are being drawn by John C. Terry and H. M. Shields for the Movca Film Service, Inc., of San Francisco, California, differ from the ordinary run of cartoons in that they depict the actions of the most popular moving picture stars of the day.

Each reel, which runs from five hundred to six hundred feet in length, requires from two to three thousand drawings to give it smoothness of action and to give its story a proper balance.

The twenty subjects now ready include the celebrated "Charlie" series, pronounced by all to be the best cartoons yet produced. Mabel Normand, who saw several of these cartoons, said: "They are the greatest cartoons I have ever seen."

OTTO LEAVES WEST COAST TO MAKE "U" FEATURE IN EAST

Henry Otto, Western Universal director, who recently completed "Undine," has been sent to New York by President Laemmle, where he is to direct feature productions for the Big U organization.

Otto will proceed directly to the new studios of the Universal company at Leonia, N. J., which have just been completed at a cost of a half million dollars, and which are known as "Universal City Junior."

Otto, who has gained a reputation as an artistic director, has been looking forward to returning to New York where, five years ago, he was an exponent of the spoken drama under the management of Henry Savage. He is a member of the Friars' Club and other Gotham organizations.

IRVING CUMMINGS JOINS IVAN FOR "THE IMMORTAL FLAME"

Ivan Film Productions, Inc., has secured for the male lead in their next subject the services of Irving Cummings, star of the Mutual serial, "The Diamond from the Sky."

The vehicle in which Mr. Cummings is to be starred is entitled, "The Immortal Flame," an original drama conceived especially for the screen by Ivan Abramson.

A strong cast is being assembled by Director Abramson to support Mr. Cummings in his forthcoming feature. It is expected that work on this new story will commence within a week and that the entire company will shortly go to Washington for the locale of several of the exterior settings in the new production.

"WOMAN'S LAW" WILL BE FIRST ARROW-PATHE

The first Arrow Gold Rooster play in the Pathé program, to be released in March, is "The Woman's Law," in which Miss Florence Reed is starred. Duncan McRae is seen in a dual role opposite Miss Reed.

"The Woman's Law" was adapted for the screen from the famous novel of American society life by Mrs. Maravene Thompson. The five reel scenario was written by Harvey F. Thew and Albert S. LeVino. Lawrence B. McGill is directing the picture.

Some of the prominent members of the cast, which is a comparatively small one, are Miss Anita Scott, Miss Lora Rogers and Master Jack Curtis.

HAMILTON, "HAM," OF KALEM SIGNS LONG-TERM CONTRACT

The Kalem Company announces that Lloyd V. Hamilton last week affixed his signature to a long-term contract that assures his continuing as a star in the "Ham and Bud" comedies for a long period.

This announcement sets at rest rumors that "Ham" might be giving consideration to luring offers from other companies which he is known to have received since returning to active screen work recently.

Since his return from the hospital "Ham" has completed three or four subjects, so that he will make his return bow on the screen some time in February.

JULIUS STEGER FINISHES FIRST METRO FEATURE IN JACKSONVILLE

Julius Steger, the well-known stage star, who recently signed a contract to appear in Metro productions, has just finished his first five-part feature, "The Blindness of Love."

The final scenes for the Metro play were made in and around Jacksonville, Fla., which is fast becoming a center of motion picture making for exterior scenes during the winter season.

While in Jacksonville, Mr. Steger and members of the Metro organization were extended most unusual courtesies by the city officials, including the mayor. Permission was asked to rope off and use part of a street when the company first arrived.

The mayor replied that they could have anything they wanted, and that he would call out the fire department, or entire police force, if they wanted to use them in a picture. Director Charles Horan availed himself of this opportunity to obtain some novel and remarkable results.

Arrangements Completed for Board of Trade Dinner

First Annual Banquet, at Which President Wilson and His Bride Will Be Present, Will Become Notable as Event Marking New Era of Full Recognition to Industry

THE officers and committees of the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America have completed tentative arrangements for the board's first annual dinner, at which President Woodrow Wilson will be a guest and the principal speaker. The latest announcement is that the President's bride, formerly Mrs. Norman Galt, will honor the affair by her presence, occupying a balcony box with a party of friends from Washington and New York.

This will be the initial visit of Mrs. Wilson to New York as the First Lady of the Land, and that fact alone will make the dinner one of unique interest, especially in view of the fact that it has been decided to invite ladies to occupy seats at the tables on the floor.

The great ball room of the Hotel Biltmore, seating 850 people, will be entirely filled, the tables being occupied by from six to ten persons. The dinner itself will not vary greatly from the annual affairs to which New York is accustomed, such as Chamber of Commerce dinners and those of the other large commercial and civic organizations. The positive statement was made that there will be no "stunts" or other special features. The speeches will be the thing.

The affair will mark the full recognition of the motion picture industry as one of the most substantial in the country from the standpoint of capital invested and the character of the men engaged in it.

"The future is veiled to a certain extent, of course," said J. W. Binder, executive secretary of the board. "But the recent past has shown what can be done in the way of upbuilding and broadening. The public realizes that the motion picture is one of the three or four great forces in the moral, intellectual and social life of America. The visit of the President and Mrs. Wilson as our guests is auspicious and significant."

Commodore J. Stuart Blackton will be the toastmaster. Other than the President and Mr. Blackton, the speakers chosen are Judge Samuel Seabury, of the Court of Appeals; the Rev. Cyrus Townsend Brady, Senator Henry A. Ashurst of Arizona, Collector of Port of New York Dudley Field Malone, Martin W. Littleton, Dr. Stephen S. Wise and, it is expected, Thomas A. Edison and Governor Martin G. Brumbaugh of Pennsylvania.

Governor Whitman and Mayor Mitchel are on the guests list, and others who have been asked to occupy seats at the guest table are Cardinal Farley, William F. McCombs, Admiral Robert E. Peary, Admiral Charles B. Sigsbee, Major General Leonard Wood, George Eastman, Melville E. Stone, Governor Arthur Capper of Kansas, Governor Frank B. Willis of Ohio, David Bispham, Robert J. Collier, Roy Howard, Edwin Markham, Hudson Maxim, Robert Adamson and George H. Bell.

The committees in immediate charge of the affair are made up as follows:

Invitations—J. Stuart Blackton, Vitagraph; J. E. Brulatour, Eastman Kodak Company; William A. Johnston, Motion Picture News; J. W. Binder, ex officio.

Arrangements—Walter W. Irwin, general manager V-L-S-E; John R. Freuler, president Mutual Film Corporation; J. A. McKinney, Universal Film Manufacturing Company; Watterson R. Rothacker, president Industrial Motion Picture Company of Chicago; Paul Gulick, Universal; J. W. Binder, ex officio.

Secretary Tumulty and Dr. Cary Grayson will be in the presidential party and will have seats near Mr. Wilson. Secretary Tumulty long has been a friend of the motion picture and is an appreciative patron of the picture theatres in Washington.

According to officers of the board, there was never any question of the wives and other feminine members of the motion picture men and their guests attending the affair.

The dinner will start at 7:30 o'clock, and it is expected that the arrival of President Wilson and the White House party will not be long delayed.

EDESON CAST FOR OUIDA BERGERE PLAY FOR PATHE UNDER FITZMAURICE DIRECTION

The motion picture adaptation of "Big Jim Garrity," the A. H. Woods Broadway success, which was purchased by Pathé, has been finished by Ouida Bergere and the working script turned over to George Fitzmaurice, who will produce it.

Work will begin shortly in the Jersey City studios, and while the entire cast is not yet ready to announce, it is known that Robert Edeson has been signed, through Miss Bergere, to play the lead.

PITTSBURGH LEAGUE BRANCH ADDS MEMBERS EACH WEEK

Secretary Delves, of the Pittsburgh local of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America, states that the organization is enjoying a healthy growth and that new members are being added each week to the membership. The organization here is in better shape than at any time in its career.

New members are being taken in at each meeting and the exhibitors of this section are taking a more lively interest in its work with each succeeding week.

The motion picture exhibitors are slowly awakening to the fact that there is safety for all in co-operation and the time has come when they need protection against adverse legislation which will be brought up at the next session of the state legislature.

This organization is taking a most active interest in the business end of the exhibition work and so far valuable assistance has been rendered by its officers and membership to many of the exhibitors who are not on its rolls.

ELSIE MACLEOD IS NOW A STAR WITH VIM

Elsie MacLeod is now in comedies with Vim. Miss MacLeod has done much dramatic, as well as comedy, work, having begun her moving picture career with the Edison Company, playing child parts and shortly afterward becoming the youngest leading lady with that concern.

The opinions of her admirers are varied, for while all agree on her aptitude for the humorous, her recent portrayal of Michaela in "Carmen" for Fox will long be remembered.

ELSIE MacLEOD

When Twcedledum, whose name is on the lips of every European screen patron, and whom now is with the Vim Company, at Bungles, came to this country a few months ago, Miss MacLeod played with him in his first American film.

His vast experience has taught him to recognize intrinsic value in an artist immediately; thus it happened that they have played together since then. With the banner of the Vim Company flying over them, it is only reasonable to expect startling results from them in the not far distant future.

Claridge Films, Inc., Enters Field with Mrs. Cobb

Vice-President and General Manager of the Company, Identified with the Industry for Seven Years, Announces Policy—Organization Planning to Supply State Rights Buyers

CLARIDGE FILMS, INC., a new state rights organization, of which Mrs. Agnes Egan Cobb is vice-president and general manager, has entered the field.

The announced policy of the company is to offer state rights buyers and exhibitors clean, strongly dramatic pictures with well known stars and good stories.

MRS. AGNES EGAN COBB

The first release, "The Heart of New York," features Robert T. Haines, and was directed by Walter McNamara.

Mrs. Cobb has been identified with the motion picture business for the past seven years. She has held secretarial and selling positions in about ten of the leading film companies of the country, and has thus been brought into relations with exchange men, state right buyers and exhibitors.

She will leave immediately for a trip which will take her to state rights and exchange centres throughout the country.

Discussing the policy and plans of the Claridge Company, Mrs. Cobb said:

"Claridge Films are chosen with the utmost care and deliberation to suit the needs of the exhibitor whose aim it is to attract to his theatre a class of people who love clean pictures with heart interest stories well acted by stars and companies whose reputations are universally known.

"Our first release has a strong story and the production has been staged with careful attention to detail. The paper is very striking, without bordering on the repellently sensational.

"The picture is offered on the state rights plan. We have ready a number of releases the names of which will be made known at once."

A nationwide publicity campaign will be promoted by the company, it is announced and Mrs. Cobb's tour will further this plan.

The company's offices are in the Longacre Building, Forty-second street and Broadway, New York City.

One Thousand Jamaica Children as Gnomes in a Fox

Groups of Youngsters Representing Fishermen, Millers, Boatmen and Shepherds Rehearsed Separately for Weeks Before—All Appeared in Cast at Once

ONE of the largest casts of child actors ever used in any theatrical or screen offering is seen in the William Fox million-dollar photoplay, starring Annette Kellerman,, which is being made in Kingston, Jamaica, by Herbert Brenon, director-general of the Fox studios in Jamaica.

One thousand Jamaican youngsters, ranging from two to nine years of age, took part in the scenes of the Gnome Village, which is claimed to be one of the most unique fantasies in connection with the Kellermann production.

The Gnome Village itself was built on the banks of Roaring River, one of the beauty spots of the West Indies. A force of sixty carpenters and masons labored three weeks in its construction.

The setting called for the erection of innumerable thatched huts to serve as the domiciles of the gnomes; raised bowers in which the gnomes might make love; giant toadstools on and under which they could disport themselves; and mills and shops in which they were supposed to ply their respective trades.

The Gnome Village was built in miniature. The huts, fences, bridges and other objects in the setting were made of a size in keeping with the stature of the gnomes, and the properties, such as casks, wheelbarrows, sacks and so forth, were also made on a small scale.

The children who took part in the scene were drilled for several weeks before the making of the scenes was attempted. They were divided into groups, with a supervisor for each group, and the groups were divided vocationally.

Certain children were assigned to play the part of fishermen, millers, boatmen or shepherds, as the case might be. They were rehearsed in the business of their respective parts, and then the entire cast was rehearsed collectively.

The gnomes were dressed in little brown jerkins, wore peaked caps, and were made up to have long, gray beards, white eyebrows and fawn-shaped ears. Two make-up specialists were employed for the children until it was discovered that the children first made up bore little resemblance to gnomes by the time the finishing touches had been added to the faces of the others. Consequently the make-up force was increased to fifty persons.

The cost of the Gnome Village was $22,000, part of which sum was expended in temporarily diverting Roaring River from its beaten channel. The total cost of the scene, figuring in salaries to the performers and the value of the costumes, was $29,000.

LILLIAN WALKER WEARS FASHION CREATIONS FOR PICTORIAL

Lillian Walker, the Vitagraph "Dimples," is spending her spare moments these days, while waiting to appear in photoplays, by wearing the latest fashion creations from noted modistes and having her picture taken for the Hearst-Vitagraph News Pictorial.

Having Miss Walker's smiling face to watch, the male film fans find a new interest in these fashion shows which are meant primarily for women. The Vitagraph star adds a great deal by her personality, besides displaying the gowns to their very best advantage.

Kalem's "Hazards" Will Appear as Two Reelers

Railroad Pictures Featuring Helen Gibson Bring Complimentary Letters from Exhibitors to Officials of the Company, Which Buys More Railway Equipment for New Stunts

REPORTS from the Pacific Coast of increased activity at the Kalem studio producing railroad pictures have been explained by the announcement this week that the "Hazards of Helen" will soon become a two-reel series.

The "Hazards" have now been running for well over a year as a single reel series, and this latest announcement, taken in connection with the recent purchase of a considerable quantity of railroad equipment, indicates a strong belief in the future of the pictures, which already hold the record for longevity in the series field.

In explaining the decision to increase the length of the railroad pictures a Kalem official explained that it was made after a serious discussion with exhibitors in all parts of the country and because of a desire to do the railroad pictures full justice.

"A number of exhibitors," says this official, "have written us declaring that they find the "Hazards" among the most popular offerings on their programs, and that while they feature them strongly now, the series would offer even greater advertising possibilities if produced in two reels.

"This has had considerable to do with our decision to make the change. Then again, as we increased the equipment and otherwise strengthened the company, and secured better and better stories, we found it becoming more difficult to do the subjects justice in the single reel length.

"For instance, Helen Gibson, who was well known as a circus rider before we enticed her to pictures, has been continually urging us to allow her to show some thrilling feats on horseback in the pictures.

"At different times we have introduced some scenes of this kind in the single reel pictures but with the series produced in two reels, Helen, who is as reckless on horseback as she is in railroad stunts, will have full opportunity to prove the claim that she is 'the most daring actress in pictures.'

"I wish that I were at liberty to tell you some of the thrilling exploits that she has suggested in letters to us and others that the authors have laid out for her.

"Our railroad atmosphere in all of our pictures is authentic, for in addition to having the stories written by railroad men, we have always had the hearty co-operation of the railroad companies in staging the pictures."

The date of the change and the release of the first two-reel "Hazards" has not yet been announced.

Whartons Now General Producers on Large Scale

Expansion of the Plant at Ithaca, N. Y., Enables Them to Handle Subjects for Other Companies Than Pathé, Who Had Practically Taken Their Entire Output for Sometime

THE Wharton brothers, Theodore and Leopold, announce that henceforth they are to be general producers of motion pictures, operating at their plant at Ithaca, N. Y.

From the time they launched into the contract producing business, three years ago, their output has been contracted for exclusively in advance.

They have increased their equipment so extensively that they are no longer obliged to decline contracts that hitherto they have been prevented from accepting. They now throw open the doors for general business from substantial distributing firms.

The Wharton plant has grown steadily until it covers some forty-five acres of land at Ithaca. The Whartons have been picture producers for many years. Theodore began with the Edison Company over ten years ago, after a long career in theatricals. He was subsequently identified with Kalem, Pathé and Essanay.

Leopold Wharton began producing about eight years ago with Pathé and remained in the employ of that company until he embarked in business with his brother at Ithaca.

General contract producing on a large scale, involving the taking over of a play for complete production from beginning to end, has been carried on for some time by the Whartons.

Pathé has been taking practically the entire output of the plant. The plant has now grown to such proportions, it is announced, that more film can be turned out than any one firm can use, hence the invitation to reputable film distributing companies to take advantage of the facilities of the Wharton plant.

The plant is set in twenty-five acres of beautiful park land. It formerly was known as Renwick Park, an amusement resort that was owned by the Ithaca trolley company, and lies at the shore of Cayuga Lake, just outside of Ithaca.

The park was taken over intact with its wharfage, boats, buildings, its miniature railway, roller coasters, bridges and arbors.

ELECTION ORDERED IN TEXAS TOWN TO SETTLE SUNDAY OPENING

The city commissioners of Waco, Texas, have ordered an election to be held to determine whether or not picture shows can run on Sundays. Strong opposition to the election has been waged by the church people and the election may be restrained by a court injunction.

NO CHECK BY FIRE OF ACTIVITIES IN TRIANGLE STUDIOS

Notwithstanding reports circulated in New York of a fire stated to have occurred in an important studio of the Triangle Film Corporation at Santa Monica, California, H. E. Aitken, president of the corporation, said yesterday:

"The reports have been grossly exaggerated. The fire was a comparatively minor affair, occurring in the cutting room of the studios and covered by insurance. No negatives or stock of any importance were destroyed.

"We have just received a telegram from the studios from Mr. Ince, saying that he is personally at work on production. Mr. Ince states that some employees were slightly injured but the occurrence will not in any case affect the output of Triangle plays nor hamper in any degree the operations of this company."

MILWAUKEE EXHIBITORS LIBERAL ADVERTISERS IN SENTINEL

Milwaukee's first real photoplay section has been inaugurated by the Milwaukee Sentinel with very good results. Not only have the advertisers responded liberally, but the section, which is now a few weeks old, has proven a valuable circulation builder.

The work of J. W. Martin and Newton Levi, when they were press-agenting the Rothapfel visit to this city, is said to have much to do with the inauguration of this section. The section, however, was the idea of Earl Stumph, of the Sentinel, and it was due to his enterprise that the idea has successfully been put over.

The section, which is in four pages, is printed on a special blue paper and is attractive. At the present time the amusement and the music are carried in the section, but it is expected that the photoplay end will soon outgrow its present limit of two pages and, and that this section will then be enlarged or the drama and music transferred to another portion of the paper. It is expected that a number of other papers will soon follow the example set by the Sentinel.

TWO SHOWS FOR THE PRICE OF ONE ADMISSION

The Arcade and the Gem theatres at Paducah, Ky., are under the same management. On certain days recently the public has been given "bargains" by the management in that the theatre patron was enabled to see a show at each theatre for the price of one admission.

The innovation has proven so successful that these "bargain" days will be given from time to time. A patron may buy a ticket at either the Arcade or Gem, and then go and see the other show on the same piece of pasteboard.

CANADIAN UNIVERSAL ISSUES LIVE WIRE FOLDER

The Canadian Universal Film Company, Ltd., Toronto, has issued a neat folder entitled "Getting After the Business," containing live wire stunts that have proven successful. Most of the ideas are taken from this department in MOTION PICTURE NEWS and full credit is given to the paper for them.

This is a good piece of exchange advertising, and will be of service to Canadian exhibitors. W. A. Bach, who prepared it, deserves credit for his enterprise.

MERRILL THEATRE, MILWAUKEE, WIS., ISSUES GOOD HOUSE ORGAN

A program that shows the possibilities of a combination program and house organ is the program of the new Merrill theatre, Milwaukee. This program which is in eight pages, not only contains the cast of the week's attractions, but four pages of news of coming attractions, is gotten up in a newsy manner and with regular news heads. The program is gotten out by the Press Publicity Company of Milwaukee, under the direction of J. W. Martin and has caused much favorable comment among theatre-goers in Milwaukee, who are keen critics of such matters.

GETTING SUGGESTIONS FROM PATRONS A GOOD LIVE WIRE STUNT

"Stage and Screen," house organ of the Columbia theatre and Bath Opera House, Bath, Me., carries on the first page of its first issue a column under the heading "Suggestions Wanted," asking patrons to make suggestions for the improvement of the theatres.

This sort of personal appeal is a good thing to emphasize in the house organ. Exhibitors ought to make it their business to find out just what their patrons think of their pictures and their houses. Of course, every exhibitor does work along this line to some extent, but he ought to systematize it, and find out what as many patrons as possible think about every picture he runs. The only way to do this successfully is to keep reminding patrons that this information is desired.

SPECIAL BOOKLET FOR TRIANGLE THEATRE

With the installation of the Triangle program at Moore's Garden theatre, Washington, D. C., a neat special booklet has been issued which is pretentious in the color scheme of the cover. With a background of black the central ornamentation is a triangle of yellow in the lower point of which is the trademark of the Triangle corporation in red and green with the central T of white. This is surmounted within the yellow triangle by the mask of laughter.

The inscription "Triangle Plays produced under the supervision of D. W. Griffith, Thomas H. Ince, and Mack Sennett" forms the most conspicuous read-

SCREEN GOSSIP

Bits of Information About the Plays and Players to Be Seen Here

The screen production of Denman Thompson's "Old Homestead," which will be seen at the Columbia, January 31 and February 1, is said to th many ways excel the stage production.

Charles Frohman's great comedy "Jane" is the Paramount feature at Columbia tonight.

When the Paramount feature, Lou Tellegen in "The Unknown," appeared for the first time in New York last month, the New York Times selected it as the best feature photo play appearing in New York City that week. This picture comes to the Columbia next Monday and Tuesday.

Everyone is anticipating the coming to Columbia of Macklyn Arbuckle in "The Reform Candidate" on January 24 and 25.

Bath people are fortunate in being able th see "Trilby" on the screen. It comes th the Bath Opera House the last half of next week with Wilton Lackaye in his old role of Svengali. The picture will do a tremendous business.

One of the greatest features yet produced according to "Variety," the standard theatrical weekly, is the Paramount picture "The Explorer" play company. This vehicle is a fitting one for the introduction of Miss Collier to Paramount patrons, for it affords her an excellent opportunity of displaying her many qualifications.

Anita King, the Paramount Girl, will make her next screen appearance featured th "The Travelling Salesman," in which Victor Moore is th star, soon to be seen at Columbia. It was found advisable th delay the production of the Paramount Girl's first starring vehicle, founded on her transcontinental trip, until the weather and the roads are more propitious.

Mae Murray, the beautiful Lasky-Paramount star, has begun rehearsals for the production of Marion Johnston's famous story, "To Have and th Hold," under the direction of George H. Melford, of the Lasky staff of directors. This picture will be a feature at Columbia Theatre.

Cecil B. De Mille, the Lasky Company director general, has taken up rehearsals for the appearance of Charlotte Walker th the photodramatic production of "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," a Paramount picture. It was in this play that Miss Walker made such a great success on the speaking stage, and it was secured especially for her by the Lasky Company. Patrons of Columbia await its coming with interest.

Alan Hale, who has been with the Biograph for so long, playing leads, has left that company and has been engaged by the Lasky-Paramount Company.

Fanny Ward has just completed the taking of the photodramatic version of Bret Hart's famous story, "Tennessee's Partner," a Lasky-Paramount picture, and will shortly be seen at Columbia in this piece.

Anna Held, the celebrated French comedienne, who is soon to be seen at the Columbia in the Paramount picture, "Madame La Presidente," produced by the Morosco Company, sent over 3,000 New Year's postcards to soldiers in the French trenches and hospitals, where, prior to her coming th America, she had spent a great deal of time.

"The Cheat," the Paramount picture produced by the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, and which comes to the Columbia January 31 and 32, has received no end of favorable comment from every section of the country. Max Spiegel, of the

EXCELLENT FILM DEPARTMENTS IN TWO NEWSPAPERS

A single day's mail brings us specimens of the photoplay departments of the Toledo Blade, and the Sunday Times-Union, Jacksonville, Fla.

The Blade's department consists of cleverly written gossip in short paragraphs and a theatre directory. The editor has taken the press agents' patter and boiled it down to a sentence or two in each case. For example:

"Valli Valli will appear soon in a new play directed by William Nigh. It is 'Her Debt of Honor.' Nigh is the man who produced 'The Yellow Streak' for Lionel Barrymore, so you may look for something good."

Reducing publicity items to their lowest terms enables the editor to get in a lot of them. That is, it enables him to tell the news, and omit the adjectives. Incidentally, this sort of publicity does the exhibitor more good than stories of half a column. People will read short items, particularly if they are crisply written.

Which leads us to remark that exhibitors ought to keep urging manufacturers to feature the short item in the publicity which goes to the newspapers.

The Times-Union's department covers nearly two pages, is embellished with cuts, carries a calendar of the week's features at Jacksonville theatres, and is interesting throughout. We note that the Times-Union prints a large number of long synopses of plots. This, we think, is a mistake. Synopses are most effective when they are presented in brief.

But in all other respects the Times-Union's department is excellent. The cuts are nearly all made from "stills"—far more effective than reproductions of personal photographs. Jacksonville has a film colony, and the editor works in several human interest items about it. Why not set aside a department in the photoplay section devoted exclusively to the film colony? Few editors have this chance, and it seems to us the Times-Union could make its photoplay section genuinely distinctive by playing up news of the screen people and activities in and about its city.

"TIRED SHOPPER" ADVERTISING IS BUSINESS GETTER

Manager Schlank, of the Hipp theatre in Omaha, did extensive "tired shopper" advertising recently. He urged tired shoppers to pay a dime, sit in a comfortable soft seat and see a fine show. The signs attracted attention, as did newspaper advertisements. The idea made the holiday week, generally somewhat slow because everyone was busy doing something besides seeing shows, one of the best of the year.

GET THE NEWSPAPER TO REVIEW YOUR PICTURES AND USE ITS COMMENTS IN YOUR ADS.

LAST week we suggested to exhibitors that they get their newspapers to print reviews of features, when features are shown more than one day.

On this page you will find a specimen newspaper review of a photoplay. It is reproduced from the Philadelphia Evening Ledger, which runs picture reviews regularly. Note the excellent style of this review: the names of the cast head it, you notice, and there follows a criticism of the picture written from the newspaper reader's point of view.

After you get the newspaper to review your pictures, utilize its comments in your newspaper advertising. If you book a picture for two days, say, see that the newspaper has a representative at the first afternoon or night showing. In your ad. the next day, run a sentence or two, or even a paragraph from the review. Select the favorable comment, of course. Let it speak for itself. When you do this, you double the pulling power of your newspaper advertising. The newspaper reader has confidence in his paper. He will listen to it when he won't listen to anybody else. Get the newspaper to tell your story for you—that is, after you have done preliminary advertising.

There is no surer way to win the newspaper completely to the cause of motion pictures than to make it feel you value its criticism. If the newspapers in your town have photoplay editors who are not running reviews of your pictures, go to them with the suggestion that they start printing reviews now. And use their comments in your ads.

THE KING PLAYS A CLEVER GAME

George Probert, Assisted by Pearl White and Sheldon Lewis, Slips One Over

By the Photoplay Editor

"THE KING'S GAME"—Pathe-Gold Rooster film in 5 parts. Written by G. B. Seitz. Produced by Arnold Daly. Released Friday.
The Grand Duke of Kiev.....Stanley Dark
The young Duke, his son } .....George Probert
Percilev, the Nihilist }
Count Dardinilis .....Sheldon Lewis
Catherine, his daughter.....Pearl White

What would our novelists and scenario writers do without that old standby of "a double" or mistaken identity? Where would our Rudolph Rassendaels have come from? Such popularity would have been lost to world if this most useful idea had never been found. Certainly "The King's Game" would not have existed to have given the ladies a chance to fall in admiration before James K. Hackett in the legitimate drama, nor now George Probert as the Grand Duke and the Nihilist.

"The King's Game" is a story of the Prisoner of Zenda—Graustark—Princess Dehra, kind with nobility, nihilists, intrigue and love all rolled together. There is no end to it all until suddenly our hero triumphs and our heroine falls into his arms. The picture must end here because no more need be told.

Yet this particular sample of the ever popular style of story is exceptionally well told and still more exceptionally well acted.

It serves to reintroduce Elaine—I beg her pardon, Pearl White—who after a vacation returns more lovely to look upon than ever. As Catherine she has a role which gives her plenty of opportunity to look well and act little, a most decidedly "Whitish" part.

Sheldon Lewis, as Count Dardinilis, is remarkably good, and shows what a truly versatile actor he is by the clever change from the dashing young officer in the first reel to the desperate criminal in the last four. His makeup is excellent, and his whole characterization finely drawn.

George Probert (poor man, he is awfully hard worked) is quite remarkable in the manner in which he depicts the pleasure-loving, irresponsible, happy-go-lucky Grand Duke and the fanatic, half-crippled nihilist. As the young ruler he supplies moments of the most delightful comedy, a thing you would hardly expect if you had only seen him in "The Lure," or with Pauline Frederick in "Innocent." The whole picture goes with lots of "pep" and interest never lags. The photography is uniformly good throughout.

CHILDREN'S MATINEES DRAWING CARD FOR ANOTHER THEATRE

He has just inaugurated the plan, and reports that it is working out well. He shows pictures suitable for children, and uses his regular Saturday bookings for his afternoon and evening performances.

The O-At-Ka is a small theatre in a town of 3,600. That it is conducted along the right lines, the photograph witnesses. The lobby display is refined, and the theatre front presents a neat appearance. Mr. Rice writes that he gives close attention to projection and ventilation.

We should like to see a copy of the O-At-Ka's house organ, if Mr. Rice publishes one.

MOORE POLISHING "OVAL DIAMOND" FOR THANHOUSER FILM

The Thanhouser company, located in Jacksonville, Fla., under Eugene Moore's direction, is at work filming "The Oval Diamond," a five reel Masterpicture adapted from the novel by David Skatts Foster.

Harris Gordon is cast in the featured part and numbered in his support are Barbara Gilroy, Boyd Marshall and Mr. Moore himself.

The southern forces are also at work completing a series of comedies to be released as Falstaffs. Louise Emerald Bates, the Falstaff girl is playing the leads directed by William A. Howell.

BALSDON, JR., L. J. BAMBERGER

A CONVENTION of the V-L-S-E branch managers and representatives of the New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Washington offices was held on Sunday, January 15, at the home office, New York City.

General Manager Walter W. Irwin and Assistant General Manager A. W. Goff defined in detail the company's policies of personal screen inspection, minimum and maximum price ratings, open booking, and the block and quota system, and then placed these subjects before the meeting for frank, open discussion from the exhibitor's viewpoint.

It was pointed out that the only objections that could possibly arise from the minimum and maximum policy would be due to the fact that either the exhibitor did not fully understand the advantages that accrue to him by booking a subject on its box office drawing power—and not what it cost the manufacturer to produce—or that a salesman made the mistake of selling film instead of showing the exhibitor how the minimum and maximum policy assures him of a profit, whether a picture is good, bad or indifferent.

"In other words," said Mr. Irwin, "the minimum and maximum policy resolves itself in selling the exhibitor any feature he wants at the maximum price at which he can make money, as measured by his house and the average business he does."

The flexibility of this plan as outlined plus the advantages of the open-booking policy (which allows an exhibitor to book what he wants, when he wants it, and as long as he wants it) brought forth the consideration of the possibility that the exhibitor in the large towns might have a shade the better of the small town exhibitor, because of the circumstances of booking the film over which no one has control.

To obviate this possibility, V-L-S-E is inaugurating a system of rapid turnovers, which keeps the prints constantly working for the best interests of every exhibitor.

Special emphasis was laid on the "block and quota" system which brings the individual salesman in constant touch with every exhibitor in his territory, and which allows him more time to give to the needs and problems of each exhibitor in his "block."

A "quota," while it does not intimately concern the exhibitor, is a method the organization has of keeping the salesmen jacked up to top-notch efficiency, which means that the exhibitor receives more effective service.

Particular stress was laid upon the standardization of features to attain a continuously consistent program which, in other words, brings the test value of each production right into the hands of the public and will ultimately make the motion picture patrons their own booking clerks.

Those of the home office who participated at the convention were: General Manager Walter W. Irwin, Assistant General Manager A. W. Goff; L. J. Bamberger, manager of the Sales Promotion Department; E. L. Masters, advertising and publicity director; V. M. Shapiro, assistant advertising and publicity director; A. I. Siegel, secretary to Mr. Irwin.

The Boston contingent headed by Manager George Balsdon, brought representatives Brady, Butler and Reardon. From Philadelphia came Manager J. S. Hebrew and his salesmen, Moyer, Mowery and Heenan.

The Washington sub-office was represented by Frank B. Spurrier and Mr. Bachrach. The New York branch had present F. F. Hartich, assistant branch manager; George Balsdon, Jr., and Salesmen Farber, Erichson and Clark.

GRIFFITH PICTURES MARKETED BY ALL-FEATURES AGAIN

Beginning with Monday, January 24, the All Feature Booking Agency, of 71 West Twenty-third street, New York City, will again assume exclusive control of its nine Griffith productions for Greater New York and New England.

These features include "The Avenging Conscience," with Henry B. Walthall; "The Escape," with Blanche Sweet, and seven other Griffith masterpieces to be worked in conjunction with four spectacular Pawnee Bill pictures, "Right off the Bat" and the new two-reel production, "Sarah Bernhardt at Home."

A new plan of booking has been inaugurated whereby a theatre can give a complete week's program of D. W. Griffith productions with all the famous Griffith stars appearing throughout the week, as well as take advantage of the new service arrangements on the other features.

GENERAL IN OMAHA, UNDER TAYLOR, MADE BUYING HEADQUARTERS FOR NEBRASKA AND IOWA

C. W. TAYLOR, until recently manager of the Mutual exchange in Omaha, after a week's absence from the city has returned to be manager of the General Film exchange in Omaha.

The General exchange under his charge will be made from a branch into a buying headquarters.

This will cover the big territory of Nebraska and western Iowa.

Until this change the main buying has been done at Des Moines, but the rapidly growing territory of Nebraska, with scores of new theatres every week, led to the enlargement of the Omaha exchange which had come none too soon.

Manager Taylor is one of the efficiency experts when it comes to managers in the West, having established an excellent system at the Mutual. The General offices, in the Bromley Building, at 208 South Thirteenth street, will be enlarged, better equipped and arranged under his able charge.

The new purchase of films will be ready for distribution on February 7, by which time the office changes will be made. With the coming of Mr. Taylor there were changes in the office force. With him from the Mutual exchange went J. E. Flynn and Thresa Bomberg, bookkeepers; Gertrude Bell, cashier; Julius Rachman, solicitor; Roy Malcum, manager of the poster department, and there will be more join him from the Mutual exchange.

"They are people I have seen increase in efficiency. I know what they can do, and I am sure we can enlarge the volume of sales for the General in Omaha," said Mr. Taylor.

J. H. Mergener, formerly manager of the Milwaukee office of the Mutual, is the new manager of the Mutual exchange in Omaha since the resignation of C. W. Taylor. Splendid new offices for the Blue Bird exchange, 1122 Farnam street, Omaha, Neb., are almost completed. Jake Mitchell, formerly advertising manager for the Laemmle Film Service in Omaha, will be the manager.

Mitchell has been in the business for nine years, is equipped with knowledge of the film industry in nearly every capacity and tells exhibitors they may be assured of every possible courtesy when they deal with him.

W. F. Lynch, special representative of the Essanay Company, on a recent visit to the General exchange in Omaha in the interests of "The Mary Page" serial, declared that serials were far from losing their popularity, and that conditions over all the Middle West were highly satisfactory.

F. C. Aiken, Western representative of the General Film Company, was in Omaha recently aiding C. W. Taylor in perfecting arrangements to make Omaha a buying exchange. When a recent blizzard tied up traffic out of Omaha it necessarily delayed a number of film deliveries. Without exception the exchange managers granted credit to the exhibitors.

"Although we consider the film in the exhibitor's hands after it leaves our hands at the express office, we realize the exhibitor is not to blame for the weather and we stand the consequences of such a tieup," was the explanation of one manager.

They all declared such assistance invariably made a friend of the exhibitor.

"V-L-S-E PALS" PRINTS LIST OF "BIG FOUR" REVIEWS

Tom North, Seattle manager of V-L-S-E, and managing editor of "V-L-S-E Pals," prints in the January 15 issue of that excellent exchange house organ a list of "Big Four Reviews," containing the names of the pictures, the name of the trade paper in which each was reviewed, and the name of the reviewer.

Motion Picture News is placed first in the list. The dates when each review appeared are scheduled.

DENVER PARAMOUNT SUPPLIES SMALLEST TOWN IN THE COUNTRY USING PICTURES

The above is the office force of the Notable Feature Film Company, Denver, who handle the Paramount productions in that territory. They claim to supply the smallest town showing pictures in the United States, using two features per week, and challenge any exchange to show that it has a smaller hamlet on its list.

The name of the town is Vanadian, Colo., having a population of seventy-five people, and a theatre with a seating capacity of seventy-five. It makes money at that. Who will challenge Manager Cohn?

GENERAL, MUTUAL, PATHE AND "U" IN DENVER FEEL BUSINESS INCREASE

Manager Louis Goldstein, of the Denver Universal Exchange, is still leading Universal forces through the inter-mountain territory in quest of new business, and has recently added another recruit, namely, M. J. Courson, to act as roadman.

With Courson on the road, Goldstein has one of the liveliest salesmen in that territory.

H. L. Knappen, manager of the Pathé exchange in Denver, has just returned to Denver from an extended trip through western Nebraska, and reports a great increase in business.

Mr. Knappen also stated that conditions with the theatres in general have increased remarkably in Colorado since the first of the year, and gives us as his reason "the State of Colorado is going dry."

The General Film office, Denver, reports that Manager W. H. Cree left last week to meet Western Division Manager H. H. Hicks at Salt Lake.

He is expected back in Denver at an early date.

Joe Ashby's friends will be pleased to know that he is connected with the Swanson-Nolan Supply House at Denver. Ashby was former manager of the Universal exchange, Denver, and has many friends among the exhibitors in his extensive territory.

The Mutual Film Exchange, Denver, under the management of J. R. Scott, reports a steady increase in business since the first of the year.

LEVISON LEAVES PITTSBURGH FOR OFFICE IN NEWARK, N. J.

Leo F. Levison, former manager of the World Film Corporation exchange in Pittsburgh, has left the city to become manager of the Newark, N. J., office. The Pittsburgh exhibitors are sorry to see Mr. Levison leave, as he is considered one of the best exchange managers in the Pittsburgh district.

Several months ago Mr. Levison left the city to take charge of several offices of the company which were being started. He returned to Pittsburgh two months ago and had charge of the office of the New Film Corporation office in Fourth avenue, but recently he left Pittsburgh to take up his new duties in New Jersey.

By his leaving the city the Pittsburgh Screen Club will lose a valuable worker. He was one of the prime movers in the club and was most active in keeping it alive at a time when there was a big chance that the club might not survive, though it is now active again.

EXCHANGE MEN IN TORONTO HOLD MEETING

The exchange men of Toronto held a representative meeting recently at the Famous Players Company's office in Toronto to discuss various marketing problems.

Several important decisions were made which will be made public later. It is believed that a greater feeling of unity among the exchanges will result from this last meeting.

MANY PHILADELPHIA HOUSES NOW USE TRIANGLE; FAMOUS PLAYERS MANAGER ON STATE TRIP

ROBERT LYNCH, former manager of the New Film Corporation's exchange in Philadelphia and previously manager of the Electric Theatre Supply Company, has become manager of the Fairmount Features, which will in future handle the output of the new Blue Bird program as well as the serials of the Universal and the recently named Red Feather brand of the same company.

The selection of Mr. Lynch was made after carefully considering the field, on account of his unusual qualifications for the work of launching a new, high class program, such as the Blue Bird aims to be.

Besides his experiences in the exchange line, Mr. Lynch was one of the first exhibitors in Philadelphia, having at one time three picture theatres under his care. His first essay in the feature line was the inauguration of the Pekin Feature Film exchange about four years ago.

Extensive improvements are being made in the Fairmount Building, which when completed will make this one of the model exchanges in the city.

Marcus and Newman, comprising the Eastern Booking Office, which has the territorial rights for many well-known successes, have added the Premier program to their output. The exact date of the first release has not been definitely announced as yet.

In a few days it will be decided where the new offices of the booking company will be located, as it has entirely outgrown its present quarters at 1237 Vine street.

Herbert Given, of the Famous Players exchange, is taking an extensive trip through Pennsylvania, visiting all exchanges and theatres handling Paramount subjects.

Philip S. Greenberg has been appointed manager of the New Film Corporation, whose offices are at 1335 Vine street. This, the latest exchange established in Philadelphia handling the older releases of the World output, is already doing such a large amount of business as to surprise those who are wont to believe that only new releases are profitable.

Mr. Greenberg has inaugurated an extensive mailing campaign differing from those heretofore attempted. Every exhiibtor is personally approached with a knowledge of his particular needs in view.

L. S. Paletou, owner of the Chadlee Film and Supply Company, is taking a trip through his territory in the interest of "Guarding Old Glory," which he has lately acquired.

Since Harry Schwalbe, of the Electric Theatre Supply Company, purchased the Philadelphia rights to the Triangle releases many of the neighborhood theatres have added Triangle to their weekly programs with much success.

The last count showed the following theatres as Trianglers: Arcadia, Alhambra, Arcade, Benn, Bellevue, Broadway, Eureka, Frankford, Grand, Great Northern, Girard avenue, Garden Victoria, Imperial, Iris, Jefferson, Lafayette, Logan Auditorium, Lehigh Palace, Orpheum, Overbrook, Palace, Paschall, Point Breeze, Ridge, Ruby, Susquehanna, and the Wishart. The Arcadia shows the Triangle program entirely, having the first run of all releases.

The hearty congratulations of his many friends were showered on George Dembow, when it was announced that he had been selected as manager of the Fox Film office in this city.

After a meeting of Fox managers in New York, Harvey Day, Eastern district manager, and Samuel Dembow, Southern district manager, went over to Philadelphia and announced the "glad tidings."

This well deserved promotion makes George Dembow the youngest exchange manager in the country. As he has been assistant manager ever since the Fox office was opened in that territory, nearly two years ago, Mr. Dembow has all details of the business at his fingers' end.

It is confidently predicted that the "youngest manager" will carry forward to a still higher altitude the already great prestige enjoyed by Fox pictures in that region.

MUTUAL IS SETTLED IN ITS NEW PHILADELPHIA HOME

The Mutual has settled down in its new home at 251 North Twelfth street, Philadelphia. While the noise of the carpenter is still in the land, the offices are now in trim. Without any frills, they are light, spacious, well arranged and admirably adapted to the fast growing business of the exchange.

Three stories are utilized, the basement for storage; the second floor for projection room; the ample floor space of the first floor for the offices proper and poster room.

Three new employees have been added in the past week. This brings the force up to twenty-eight, including Manager Powell and Assistant Manager Pope.

The regular program lot of the Mutual is filled for about sixty days. The only chance a new exhibitor has is when a cancellation happens. An Allentown, Pa., exhibitor had this experience the other day. Disappointed at not being able to play his desired Mutual date he sat around, Micawber like, waiting for something to turn up. It did. An Atlantic City man hesitated over one of his dates, and the cancellation is snapped up by the Allentown man.

Mr. Powell's method for exploiting the Mutual Masterpictures de Luxe, which start their first release on January 17, is to work the whole weekly output—two five-reelers, one three-reeler and nine one-reelers—on one circuit. Many of the present patrons on the regular program are going to use this stunt.

"She Devil" and "Society Wolves" are the latest two Mutuals to be turned down by the censors.

Mr. Powell, realizing that the subjects were utterly at variance with the Pennsylvania board's ideas, made no fight.

REICHERT IS IN CHARGE OF METRO AT SAN FRANCISCO; INCREASE IN FOX BUSINESS

The San Francisco branch of the Metro Pictures service on Jones street has been placed in charge of L. Reichert, who was sent to San Francisco from New York to fill the position.

Mr. Reichert is no stranger in the film exchange field, having been connected with some of the largest firms in the business, and has quite an extensive acquaintance on the Coast.

He is now busily engaged in getting acquainted with exhibitors, learning their needs and is making preparations to launch a strong campaign for Metro.

The Independent Film Exchange, operated by George Chamberlain, has been moved from 116 to 124 Golden Gate avenue, San Francisco. This exchange does a large business with old releases at moderate prices and is making a specialty of furnishing films to schools, churches, societies and other organizations where subjects of an educational character are desirable.

The business of the William Fox Company at San Francisco has shown such a great increase of late that a number of changes have been made necessary in the arrangement of the exchange in order to handle this in the manner desired.

Elevators are being installed, new counters added, and other changes made. Fox films were recently added to the program of the Orpheum theatre at Oakland, and it is declared that in spite of the almost incessant rain since the first of the year the attendance at that house has broken all records for the season.

District Manager Harry Leonhardt was in San Francisco last week from Los Angeles and he reported that the studio there is getting in shape for a very busy season. After spending a few days in San Francisco looking over the field in that city he left for a visit to the New York office of the company.

James A. Sciaroni, manager of Mile Bros., Inc., one of the oldest firms in the San Francisco producing and renting field, is seriously ill and his many friends in San Francisco are eagerly awaiting news of an improvement in his condition.

NORTON MAKING HEADQUARTERS AT GENERAL IN LOS ANGELES

D. T. Norton, who is representing "The Strange Case of Mary Paige" series in the Los Angeles territory which was manufactured by the Essanay Company, is making his headquarters at the General Film Company's office in Los Angeles.

Mr. Norton recently arrived in that city from Chicago.

MURPHY TAKES OVER ASSOCIATED FOR NEW ENGLAND

Fred B. Murphy, who has just taken over the Associated Service in New England, acting from his Boston office at the United Film exchange, reports that the Associated is being met with a strong demand throughout the territory.

Looking Ahead With The Producers

WORLD ENGAGES HOUSE PETERS FOR NEXT PICTURE, IN WORK AT ITS PEERLESS STUDIO

THE World Film Corporation has obtained the services of House Peters as the star for the next picture to be made at the Paragon studio in Fort Lee, N. J.

Mr. Peters will appear in a five-reel drama written by Arthur Stringer, an author well known for his dramatic scenarios. The picture is entitled "The Hand of Peril" and the series of adventures which Mr. Stringer puts his hero through are said to be unique in character.

Maurice Tourneur, the World Film director who has become general manager of the reorganized Paragon studio, will direct the picture in person. Work will start this week. Mr. Peters' leading woman is to be June Elvidge.

Under the direction of Edwin August, "The Yellow Passport," a new Russian picture in which Clara Kimball Young will make her next appearance, is rapidly nearing completion. Only a few minor interior scenes remain to be taken at the Peerless studio.

A shipload of effects and workmen sailed from New York last week to begin the erection of the World Film Tropical Annex near Santiago, Cuba, where Miss Young and her company will be transferred as soon as her Russian picture is finished.

While in Cuba Miss Young will prepare two big feature plays in which there are numerous tropical scenes.

Holbrook Blinn, Director Barry O'Neil and a big company of film favorites are hard at work at the Peerless studio, producing a new feature temporarily entitled "The Unforgivable Sin."

This picture was put ahead of another big production for which plans had been laid to begin work at once in the South.

This is a drama of social life in New York City and affords Mr. Blinn the opportunity to add another powerful characterization to the long list of his screen successes.

After ten weeks' work the big feature in which George Beban is to star has been finished by Director Tourneur. The title is still undecided but so far the picture has been identified as "The Genius-Pierre." It is from an original story by Beban himself, who was the author of his two previous screen triumphs, "An Alien" and "The Italian."

"Love's Crucible" is the title picked for the film version of Jules Eckert Goodman's play, "The Point of View," in which Frances Nelson is to make her debut as a full-fledged star.

Director Emile Chautard has nearly completed this picture, which is slated for release on February 14.

GARRICK PICKS CAST FOR "DRIFTER"

Director Richard Garrick has assembled his cast for the five-reel feature, "The Drifter." This is a Mutual Masterpiece, de luxe edition. The two leads are played by Lucile Taft and Alexander Gaden, while Iva Shepard, James Levering, John Mackin, Alan Robinson, Mr. Garrick's assistant, Mathilde Baring and Virginia Perry will be in supporting roles. Albert Macklin, Gaumont's clever juvenile man, has a strong part, while Mr. Garrick, quite as fine an actor as he is a director, will also appear. "The Drifter" will be released February 7.

"SWEET CHARITY" FIRST NEW DREW COMEDY FOR METRO

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew, the popular fun makers of motion pictures, who recently signed a contract to appear exclusively on the Metro program, have begun work on their first feature, "Sweet Charity." The comedy, one reel in length, was written by Mr. Drew.

Besides writing the story Mr. Drew is directing his own feature. As the author he did not neglect to give himself a good part in the comedy, appearing in thirty-four of the thirty-five scenes.

The scene where Mr. Drew does not appear is where a maid answers the door. But the next shows Mr. Drew entering, and from then on he is the center of a riot of wholesome fun.

Mrs. Drew is also prominent in the feature. Their second feature will probably be "The Swooners." These features, which will be released on the Metro program, will be known as the Metro-Drew comedies.

OVEY COMEDY IS REPLETE WITH WIDE VARIETY OF SETS

Rapidly occuring comedy scenes, intermingled with thrilling incidents, and set in locations that range from a modern back alley to all the splendor of a Roman court in the days of Caesar, together with George Ovey are dominant factors in making "The Girl of His Dreams," a one reel Cub Comedy which was released January 21, on the Mutual program.

The regular Cub stock company, including Jefferson Osborne, Belle Bennett, Louise Horner and Janet Sully, support Ovey in this release, directed by Milton Fahrney.

HYPNOTISM IS DOMINATING ELEMENT IN "RULING PASSION," ORIENTAL PLAY FOR FOX

HYPNOTISM, which always furnishes an ever absorbing element of interest to a story, dominates "The Ruling Passion," the William Fox release announced for January 30, featuring William E. Shay and Claire Whitney.

It was produced in Kingston, Jamaica, under the personal supervision of Herbert Brenon, assisted by James McKay, and is oriental in theme and treatment.

William E. Shay, who plays Prince Ram Singh, Rajah of the Indian Province of Mawar, made an exhaustive study of the manners, customs and secrets of the Hindu mystic before venturing a portrayal of the character.

To this end he spent two months in the house of a Hindu, but recently arrived at Kingston, Jamaica, and absorbed rather than learned India's religions, her social life, her costumes and above all no little about her seers and far-famed practitioners of legerdermain.

It was an interesting study for Mr. Shay. His familiarity with the characteristics of the Hindu of caste shows in his portrayal of the Indian Prince.

But the story of "The Ruling Passion" itself is unusual, its scenes being laid first in the slums of London and then in various parts of India.

The topography in and around Kingston, lent itself admirably to the scenes that necessitated Indian backgrounds, adding materially to the attractiveness of the picture.

Special attention to native costumes, absolutely correct in every detail, also lends realism to the Indian atmosphere that pervades "The Ruling Passion."

The story tells of a young girl, born in one of the poorest quarters of London, who, upon the death of her mother, goes to India to live with her aunt. Here she meets a British officer who marries her.

She unconsciously attracts an Indian Prince who has knowledge of hynotism and its wonderful power and uses it to make her do his bidding. Unable to overcome this influence she becomes a member of his harem.

She soon learns to dread the approach of her much married husband and conspiring with one of the native women, whom she had befriended, escapes to an isolated cabin where she becomes the mother of a child.

She finally makes her way to her old home, where she learns that her husband had been killed in an engagement in which the Prince's troops figured conspicuously.

Director Brenon, in selecting a cast to portray the various characters in "The Ruling Passion," chose, besides Mr. Shay and Miss Whitney, Harry Burkhardt, Stephen Grattan, Edward Boring, Thelma Parker and Florence Deshon, together with a number of Island natives representing Indian troops and servants.

IVAN'S "A FOOL'S PARADISE" READY FEBRUARY 1

"A Fool's Paradise," a five-part drama by Ivan Abramson, has just been completed at the Frohman studio. Christine Mayo and Paula Shay are the dual stars of this new Ivan production. They are supported by a cast headed by Joseph Burke, Jack J. Clarke and James Cooley.

Joseph Burke, as the sentimental financier, has an opportunity to portray the role of an old man on the point of second childhood attempting to hold the love of a scheming young woman.

Chrystine Mayo, as Maxine, the medium, and erstwhile fortune huntress, depicts a type of adventuress different from the ordinary. Paula Shay acts as the foil of the adventuress in the role of the financier's loyal daughter.

"A Fool's Paradise" will be the regular Ivan Film Productions monthly release for February.

DOROTHY GISH PRESENTED BY TRIANGLE IN NEW ENGLAND DRAMA, "BETTY OF GRAYSTONE"

DOROTHY GISH, who has been seen in "Old Heidelberg" and in "Jordan Is a Hard Road," will soon be presented by the Triangle Film Corporation as the heroine of a New England romance.

Miss Gish in the play is a caretaker's daughter wandering in and about Graystone Gables, the summer home of a young New York dilettante and dabbler in art.

Her home life is particularly hard after the death of her amiable father, for the mothers reweds, and the step-father and his two grown-up sons are of the brutal type.

The later scenes of the play show Betty Lockwood, the heroine, transferred to New York and getting an insight into the life of artists and models. The pretty story ends happily in the marriage of Betty and the owner of Graystone Gables, ending with Betty's reconciliation to her mother.

Allan Dwan staged the play at Riverdale and Fort Lee, and on up-State and Connecticut locations. George Fawcett, himself a star, appears in the role of Betty's stepfather. Owen Moore is the hero.

Grace Rankin, Macey Harlam, Eugene Ormonde, Leonore Harris, Kate Bruce and Albert Tavernier are seen in various of the other roles. Even the illustrious Kid McCoy, who gained his first fame by battering the human countenance, and later added much to the gaiety of the nation as cafe proprietor and vaudeville comedian, is congenially cast in the role of Betty's pugnacious step-brother.

"THE CROWN PRINCE'S DOUBLE" MEDIUM FOR COSTELLO

The Vitagraph Company has completed a five-part Blue Ribbon Feature under the direction of Van Dyke Brooke, that provides a splendid vehicle for Maurice Costello. It is "The Crown Prince's Double."

VITAGRAPH LIST FOR WEEK OF JANUARY 21 HEADED BY A MAY ROBSON COMEDY

IN the Vitagraph releases for the week of January 31, May Robson heads the cast in a new Vitagraph Blue Ribon comedy, that in turn heads the releases of that company for the week commencing January 31. "A Night Out," is the vehicle in which Miss Robson is expected to endear herself to photoplay fans.

Among the other releases for that week is a Broadway Star Feature, "Bill Peters' Kid," that will send thrills through even the most hardened man. Mary Anderson, sweet and girlish, kills a rabbit and proceeds to skin it with a nonchalance that belies the tumultuous emotion in her heart.

"Jane's Bashful Hero," gives a new view of Edith Storey as the village belle in a one part comedy. "The Wrong Mr. Wright, another comedy release features Jewell Hunt, "The Dance Girl of the Movies."

"A Night Out," written in collaboration by Miss Robson and Charles T. Dazey, who is known for his "In Old Kentucky," presents situations that enables Miss Robson to demonstrate her art. She is cast as Granmum to whom a girlhood has been denied, and whose youthful heart is still filled with love of play and excitement.

Her austere daughter acts the part of a "wet blanket," but even then fails to dampen Granmum's ardor. Two grandsons are her boon companions.

The play is all that the title implies. Granmum and the two boys sneak from their house to spen an evening at a notorious cafe. The police raid it and complications ensue that cause Granmum much trouble and worry.

Miss Robson instills her youthful vigor into the role of Granmum, who tangoes, runs and even climbs up an ivy vine to surreptitiously enter her home after the escapade. Assisting here is a cast of Vitagraph comedians, including Hughey Mack, Kate Price, William Shea, George Cooper, Arthur Cozine, Belle Bruce and others. George D. Baker produced the film, which is in five parts.

"Bill Peters' Kid," a three-part comedy from the coast company of the Vitagraph is released on Saturday, February 5. It is a simple story told under Rollin Sturgeon's direction, and shows Mary Anderson as a child of the desert.

Edith Storey, whose versatile talents have won for her fame and fortune under the Vitagraph standard, is seen in a new role in "Jane's Bashful Hero," released as a one-part comedy on January 31.

Miss Storey is Jane and Donald MacBride is Willie, a bashful young man. He is lacking in the nerve necessary to "pop the question," so Jane helps him out with the aid of a dummy silhouetted on the window blind.

In "The Wrong Mr. Wright," Miss Jewell Hunt plays the part of the daughter of a Mr. Wright, who gets into the hotel room of another Mr. Wright. The comedy was directed by C. Jay Williams. It will be released as a one-part comedy on Friday, February 4.

"BEHIND CLOSED DOORS" WILL BE RELEASED ON EQUITABLE PROGRAM JANUARY 31

THE newly arranged schedule of releases of the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation opens with "Behind Closed Doors," in which Marie Empress makes her debut on the Equitable program. This was to have been released December 10, and will be the regular release for January 31.

Following "Behind Closed Doors" will come Alice Brady in "The Woman in 47," a most extraordinary story of virile dramatic intent, in which Miss Brady is seen in a role entirely dissimilar to that portrayed by Miss Empress, and yet is as sustaining in interest and suspense as it is possible to make a dramatic tale.

"The Woman in 47" will be seen on the regular Equitable program February 7.

Roy L. McCardell's first contribution to the Equitable story staff will be noted in "The Question," which comes to the screen from Equitable on February 14 and which affords Marguerite Leslie her first opportunity in the silent drama field.

Miss Leslie, formerly leading woman for Sir Henry Irving, Sir Herbert Tree, and other famous actors, will portray the role of the woman, undecided between a baby and her dog, who chooses the latter.

"The Question" is different in every form from either "Behind Closed Doors," "The Woman in 47" or "The Clarion," which is the release for February 21, and which will see Carlyle Blackwell in his first Equitable picture.

"The Clarion" is based on Samuel Hopkins Adams' great journalistic tirade against patent medicines, which occupied the columns of important daily papers for several years, and which was instrumental in the introduction of Dr. Wiley's pure food and drug act. Mary Boland, formerly co-starring with John Drew in many of his biggest stage successes, will be screened February 28 in the Triumph Film Corporation's production of "Three Pairs of Shoes," in which she will be supported by a cast of well-known stage and screen players.

Frank Sheridan, Arthur Ashley and a cast of noted artists follows on March 6 in "The Struggle," which is now being produced by John Ince and in which sensational climaxes run rampant. On March 13 Gail Kane, the leading Equitable star, will make her second appearance on the program in "Her God."

"Passers By," C. Haddon Chambers' story, comes on the program March 20, with the star who originated the leading role in the stage production, back in the part. Bruce McRae has replaced Emmett Corrigan in "The Chain Invisible," which will be seen March 27, and which will be Frank Powell's first contribution to Equitable.

Contrary to previous reports, Irving Cummins will not be co-featured in support of Jane Grey in "Man and His Angel," it having been decided to place Henri Bergman in the role.

MIX IN ANOTHER DARING ROLE FOR SELIG

Tom Mix, the Selig cowboy star, accomplishes another one of his daring feats in the Western drama, "The Passing of Pete," soon to be released in General Film service.

Mix, in this drama, takes the role of a Western desperado. Real bullets are used which kick up the dust on all sides of the bandit.

Finally a bullet is supposed to hit "Pete" and he pitches headlong down the side of a steep declivity. Tom Mix does the headlong tumble.

TERWILLIGER IS NOW AT WORK ON "EXPIATION" FOR LUBIN

"Expiation" is a five-reel feature photoplay written by Frances Melbourne and is soon to be released by the Lubin Manufacturing Company. The story in brief is as follows: Cagan, a Russian nobleman, is forced into the army against his will, and in one of the raids made by his fellow officers upon a captured village, goes through an experience the memory and results of which follow him through life.

In a moment of folly, he commits a crime which he bitterly repents and his whole life is spent in trying to right the wrong which he has done innocent people.

E. K. Lincoln is featured in this thrilling production and Director George Terwilliger has instituted several original effects of his own in the picture.

Among the supporting cast is Margaret Adaid, who portrays a child of the tenements that is afterwards adopted by Cagan, and finally comes, through education and refining influences, to occupy a foremost place in society. Director Terwilliger is enthusiastic over the film. The exact date of release will be known later.

EDITH STOREY IN NEW COMEDY ROLE FOR VITAGRAPH

After a girl takes the trouble to ensnare a man into her house, even though he is only a tramp, lock him in a closet, send for a minister and marry him, it is somewhat disconcerting to have her newly-made husband say he "hopes his wife does not find out about this."

This is the new comedy role just completed by Edith Storey for the Vitagraph Company. The play, which is released as a one-part comedy, was written by Elizabeth R. Carpenter, and produced by George D. Baker.

Miss Storey has been working in a number of rural comedies recently and regards it as relaxation from such strenuous efforts as her portrayal as the French danseuse in "The Prince for Folly." Thomas R. Mills, a new face among Vitagraphers, gives a good account of himself as the unwitting and bigamous tramp.

PICTURE WITH MIDDLE AGES SETTING COMPLETED BY AMERICAN

A picture of medieval times, "The White Rosette," has been produced by the American Film Company, at Santa Barbara, Cal. To make this picture thoroughly realistic, the directors spent a fortune to construct an actual old-time castle with a moat around it, and to furnish the actors with ancient armor and relics collected by famous connoisseurs.

The prominent parts are taken by E. Forrest Taylor, Helene Rosson, Harry Von Meter and Eugenie Forde.

QUALITY-METRO CO. GOES SOUTH WITH BALSHOFER

Another Metro company, headed by Fred J. Balshofer, director in chief, has gone to Jacksonville, Florida, where exteriors will be made for a big production, as yet unnamed.

There were fifteen persons in all in the party, including Marguerite Snow, the Metro star; Zella Call, formerly leading woman with Al Jolson in "Dancing Around"; John Goldeworthy, leading man in several Metro productions, and Howard Truesdell, who will assist Mr. Balshofer in the direction of the new photoplay, and also play a leading role.

The Balshofer feature will be produced by the Quality Pictures Corporation for the Metro program. Miss Snow will be starred in the production, and there will be a large supporting cast. Most of the interior scenes were made in the Rolfe Photoplays, Inc., studio before the company left for the South.

GAUMONT COMPANY SIGNS MILDRED GREGORY

To be able to fill any part from the ranks of its own players, Gaumont is constantly strengthening its Jacksonville, Fla., stock companies. Here only five-reel features are made, to be released as Mutual Masterpictures, de luxe edition.

MILDRED GREGORY

The latest addition to Gaumont forces is Mildred Gregory, well and favorably known as a screen player of parts requiring youthful impetuosity and feminine fire.

Miss Gregory began her photodrama work with Lubin, four years ago. At that time Edwin Middleton, now a director of Mutual Masterpictures for Gaumont, was directing for Lubin.

With Lubin, Miss Gregory's talent was soon recognized, and it was not long before she was acting as leading woman for Romaine Fielding. Practically her whole career has been with this one organization.

In the interim between her Lubin and Gaumont engagements, Miss Gregory appeared as the "dope fiend" in the Kleine production of "Bond Women," and with Cyril Scott in "Lords of High Decision."

MACKENZIE FINISHES "PRECIOUS PACKET" FOR PATHE

Donald Mackenzie, the Pathé producer, has finished his Gold Rooster play, "The Precious Packet," and showed it privately in the Pathé showrooms.

The picture made a favorable impression and will probably be placed upon the program at an early date. It is adapted from the book by Fred Jackson and features Ralph Kellard and Lois Meredith.

HE "STEALS" A CIRCUS FOR AN AMERICAN SUBJECT

"The Extra Man and the Milk-Fed Lion" is a three-reel comedy belonging to the Buck Parvin series, produced by the American Film Company, Inc., at Santa Barbara, Cal.

When the Buck Parvin company started to make this unique picture it was discovered that a wild animal circus was needed, but was not obtainable.

A big one in Los Angeles offered the right opportunity, but neither money nor persuasion could induce the owners to have their precious charge pose.

Arthur Howard, who is a man of resource, undertook to steal the circus. He could not carry it off bodily, but he did take a lot of it away in film form.

"DEAD ALIVE," GAUMONT, WITH MISS COURTOT, NEARLY FINISHED

Director Henry J. Vernot and his assistant, Edwin Vail, have almost completed Mr. Vernot's screen drama, "The Dead Alive," Gaumont starring Marguerite Courtot.

Final scenes will be taken this week, including the spectacular dash of a big seven-passenger automobile, holding a chauffeur, Miss Courtot and companion, into the St. John's River from the Main street ferry dock.

The scene is to be taken last in the picture, owing to the possibility of some unforeseen effect upon the players of the dip into the water. Every precaution is being taken by Mr. Vernot in planning the scene, both for the safety of the players and the excellence of the film picture.

"The Dead Alive" will be released February 17.

FOX STARS GIVE "ROMEO AND JULIET" FOR CHARITY

Robert B. Mantell and Genevieve Hamper, who are starred in the William Fox production, "The Spider and the Fly," recently gave an open-air performance of "Romeo and Juliet" in Jamaica, where "The Spider and the Fly" is being made.

The Shakespearian performance was in the interest of a local charity.

"MY OLD KENTUCKY HOME" BASIS OF A FOX

The story of "Fighting Blood," in which William Farnum, the William Fox star is at present working at the Edendale, California, studios, was inspired in part by the song "My Old Kentucky Home."

It is being produced under the direction of Oscar C. Apfel, the author. Supporting Mr. Farnum is a cast that includes Dorothy Bernard, Fred Huntley, Henry J. Herbert, H. A. Barrows and Dick Le Stranger.

Cincinnati Begins Hard Fight Against Federal Bill

PLANS for an extensive campaign in which the screens of all Cincinnati theatres will be used in an appeal to the public to protest against the Hughes-Smith federal censorship bill, now pending in Congress, are being made by the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce.

This organization has a membership of about ninety individual exhibitors representing more than one hundred theatres in metropolitan Cincinnati. The campaign will be launched in a few days at a special meeting of the organization and will be part of the general campaign throughout the state and the nation against this measure as well as the activities of the Ohio Board of Censors.

H. Serkowich, managing secretary of the organization, has sent the following telegram to members of the House of Representives, Nicholas Longworth and Alfred G. Allen from the two Cincinnati Congressional districts and Senators Warren G. Harding and Atlee Pomerene from Ohio:

"The Motion Picture Exhibitors League of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce strongly urges you to use your influence against House Bill Number 456, known as the Hughes-Smith Censorship Bill.

"If this bill is enacted it will ruin the motion picture business in this section of the country. Exhibitors are thoroughly aroused and are preparing to start a campaign, using their screens in an endeavor to enlist the aid and influence of their patrons."

Meeting to Work Out Campaign Details

In addition to this a meeting is to be held shortly at which definite plans for the campaign will be worked out. Every one of the Cincinnati exhibitors is pledged to fight unceasingly against this bill, and it is predicted that at the same time a campaign of equal extent through the state against state censorship which is now the most momentous problem faced by the exhibitors.

A set of resolutions protesting against the Congressional measure and endorsing the action of the exhibitors will be presented to the board of directors of the Chamber of Commerce by the exhibitors league in the near future. Favorable action on these resolutions is expected as the Cincinnati league is a branch of the commercial body.

The fight against state censorship, it is declared, will be the direct result of the refusal on two occasions of the state board to allow the Griffith film "The Birth of a Nation" to be exhibited in the State. Attorney Joseph W. Heintzman, of Cincinnati, representing the Epoch Producing Company, of New York, several days ago filed suit in the Federal Court at Columbus, O., asking for an injunction against the Ohio State Board of Censors, restraining that body and the Ohio Industrial Commission of which it is a part, from interfering with the exhibition of the photoplay.

The essence of the petition is that the board abused its discretion in refusing to admit the film. The action is assailed as "oppressive, unreasonable, unlawful, unfounded in fact and arbitrary."

The petitioners presented contracts by which they were to show the picture in a large number of Ohio theatres.

Action of Board a Boomerang

"The action of the State Board of Censors in barring the "Birth of a Nation" from the State is the boomerang which will sound the death-knell of state censorship," declared Charles Weigel, of Cincinnati, one of the prominent exhibitors of this city, who for a long time was in favor of the state censorship plan.

"I was as sincere in favoring state censorship in the past as I am now in opposing the actions of the censors," he said. "I believe the best interests of the exhibitor would be conserved by this body, but I was mistaken. I am heart and soul in the campaign against legalized censorship of all kinds.

"When the Ohio censors refused to allow this film to be shown in the state, they demonstrated that this body, which should at all times be most fair, will use its influence to serve political policy. The "Birth of a Nation" was barred from the state because political leaders feared it would offend the negro race. This in itself demonstrated that the censors will make rulings to serve the interests of certain classes, while their work should be so broad in its scope that it would consider the wants and the needs of the whole people irrespective of any class."

The vacancy that exists in the censor board because of the expired term of Mrs. Maude Murray Miller, newspaper woman who was appointed by Governor Cox, is to be filled, according to the latest news from Columbus, by the appointment of Mrs. Charlotte Price Shea, daughter of Judge Price, of Bellefontaine, whose name was presented to the Industrial Commission by Herbert L. Elliott.

Although the two other members of the commission voted for the re-election of Mrs. Miller, it is understood that Mrs. Shea has the endorsement of Governor Willis, and will ultimately get the political plum.

NO LICENSE NEEDED TO OPERATE MINIATURE MACHINES IN NEW YORK

Assemblyman Perlman, of New York, has introduced a bill in the lower house of the New York legislature which amends the general city law, section 18-a, by providing that no permit or license shall be required for the use or operation of any miniature motion picture machine for educational, social, lecture or similar purposes, using only an enclosed incandescent light and cellulose acetate or other slow burning film of a size and perforation differing from the standard as used in theatrical machines.

LAW AIMED AT "NATION" IS UP IN KENTUCKY ASSEMBLY

A bill relating to alleged race antagonism in pictures has been introduced in the Kentucky General Assembly by Representative Hobbs of Lexington. It seeks to make it unlawful "to present plays based upon antagonism alleged to exist formerly between master and slave or those that are likely to excite race prejudice."

The proposed law is evidently aimed against "The Birth of a Nation," which is scheduled to be shown in Louisville in February.

HEALTH INSPECTORS VISIT THEATRES IN INDIANAPOLIS

Dr. Herman G. Morgan, secretary of the city board of health of Indianapolis, has ordered eighteen sanitary inspectors of the board of health to enforce the city ordinance against expectorating on the sidewalk, street cars or in public buildings.

The ordinance provides a fine of one dollar and costs for each violation. The men were given orders to visit motion picture theatres.

EXHIBITORS MAY SEGREGATE COLORED PATRONS IN PENNSYLVANIA IS DECISION OF HIGHEST COURT

A FINAL knock-out blow has been administered by the Pennsylvania Supreme Court to the Negroes who were making a prolonged fight for "equal rights" for the black and white races in the motion picture theaters and other places of amusement in that state, when the court refused to review the decision of the Superior court, which on October 11, ruled that proprietors have the right to seat negroes apart from white patrons in theaters.

The Superior Court ruling in favor of the theaters accordingly stand.

The fight centered on the suit that was brought by several Harrisburg negroes more than a year ago against Athens George, proprietor of the Victoria Motion picture theatre in Harrisburg city, after Mr. George had refused to seat colored men, who bought tickets to his theater, on the first floor of the house.

The negroes contended that under the state "equal rights" law passed in 1887 the theatre man was required to seat them wherever they chose or else be subjected to a heavy fine.

Mr. George aggressively opposed this contention. The testimony submitted when the case was first heard in the Dauphin County Court showed that Mr. George had posted at the box office a sign informing negroes that any of them who bought tickets would have to sit in the gallery. The colored men who brought the suit testified that they bought tickets and took seats on the first floor and were ejected. Judge McCarrell, of the county court, upheld the negroes and imposed fines and costs upon Mr. George that aggregated something more than one hundred and fifty dollars.

The theatre manager at once took an appeal to the Superior Court of the State, which body, after reviewing the testimony, reversed the lower court. Justice John W. Kephart, who wrote the Superior Court opinion, said that while negroes have civil rights in which they must be protected they do not have equal rights with white persons, and that it is legal to "maintain regulations making the distinction between the races in matters concerning their social relations."

Justice Kephart further pointed out that Mr. George had not barred negroes from his theater but had simply sought to prescribe certain restrictions separating the races within his theater. This it was the theater man's right to do and the court therefore directed a retrial in the county court but only so that the judge of the lower tribunal could direct the jury to find a verdict of "not guilty" against the defendant so that the records of the county court would not indicate that Mr. George had been convicted.

As soon as the Superior Court's decision was announced, the negroes filed an appeal with the Supreme Court but that body declined today to review the Superior Court ruling and the latter's decision is thus made final, leaving it clearly defined that a theater manager in Pennsylvania can require colored patrons to sit apart from white patrons.

The Dauphin court will therefore be required to order a verdict in favor of Mr. George and he will escape the fine and costs, payment of which had been stayed pending the final adjudication of the controversy.

The result of the announcement of the Supreme Court's refusal to review the case finally disposes of a question that has caused a great deal of annoyance to theater men of that state for years. The question cannot now be raised again in Pennsylvania, unless there is a new law on the subject passed by the Legislature. An "equal rights" bill, very much more drastic than the act of 1887, under which the suit was brought against Mr. George, was passed by the Legislature of 1915, but it was vetoed by Governor Brumbaugh because of technical errors in its construction, so that the victory won by Mr. George today is a sweeping one of vital importance to all motion picture men in that state—which has a very large colored population.

CHICAGO NOT IN FAVOR OF TEN CITIES CENSORSHIP

Chicago does not view with enthusiasm the proposal made by John M. Casey, head of the license bureau in Boston, that the mayors of at least ten cities form a board for standardizing motion picture censorship.

Chicago wants to do its own censoring in its own way, and it is not believed that standards could be set which would apply to all cities.

Chicago's regulation of its screen entertainment is so strict that the censors are proud of it. They point to the increasing demand from the stockyards district and similar sections for better pictures.

When the people of these sections were served with the old sensational films, they wanted them. Now that the standard has been raised, they want more of the better films.

Now the local censors believe that this strict censorship is setting up standards in Chicago for the country. It is said that more and more films are being sent to Chicago for first showing. If they can get through Chicago, argue the producers, they can pass muster almost anywhere else.

FRISCO DECIDES AGAINST CENSORSHIP; AMENDMENT TURNED DOWN AND OLD LAW MAY BE REPEALED

THERE will be no amendment made by the Board of Supervisors of San Francisco to the present ordinance regulating the showing of motion pictures in that city. This was definitely settled at a public meeting of the police committee held last week to secure an expression of opinion of those in favor and those opposed to the proposed measure.

While this matter will come up at the next regular meeting of the board there will be no recommendation for the passage of the measure on the part of the police committee and it will die a peaceful death.

In fact, instead of passing this measure, the proposition that will be discussed will be the repeal of the present censorship ordinance.

The credit for this most satisfactory turn in affairs is due almost wholly to the energetic part that has been played by the newspapers within the past three weeks. Some of the daily publications have not let an issue pass without an editorial on the censorship question, or an item touching upon the "nation" case.

Without an exception the San Francisco papers have gone on record as opposing the censoring of film productions, expressing the belief that if this is allowed to continue the principle will be extended and that they will soon find their right throttled.

A feature of the present fight against censorship has been the total lack of action on the part of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of San Francisco, and indeed of any of the individual exhibitors, except a few of the largest.

The Allied Theatre Managers' Association was represented at the committee meeting by Irving S. Ackerman, of the firm of Ackerman and Harris, and the association of publishers was represented by Walter Rothschild.

The proposed amendment to the present ordinance, which was designed to prohibit the showing of any film that might arouse race hatred, was disposed of in short order, its proponents even asking that it be withdrawn, and a sharp attack on the legality of the existing ordinance was made.

It was pointed out by Attorney Rothschild that Ordinance No. 761, dealing with the regulation of the moving picture business, had been drafted at a time when immoral pictures were shown in Barbary Coast dives, and that since this abuse had ceased it was no longer needed.

It was shown that the San Francisco Board of Censorship is not really an official body, as only three of its membership of five are appointed by departments of the city government, and that the board at present has but three members, two members being away, making its powers all the more concentrated.

It was also stated that the continuance of the board might serve to keep away from the city many producers of moving pictures who are planning to go to San Francisco because of unreasonable restrictions in other places.

In addressing the committee on the subject of Section 4, of Ordinance No. 761, which provides for a board of censorship, Attorney Rothschild said:

"This section is against the spirit of the Constitution of the United States. It is unique among all San Francisco ordinances and its legality never has been presented to the courts of the state.

"If the courts should, by a stretch of constitutional law, decide that this section is constitutional, this committee still has left to decide whether it is wise to continue such a law. A policy of practical wisdom at this time demands that the section be repealed, and we hereby ask that it be repealed."

Mutual's Plan of 6 Features a Week Brings Changes

Wilbur and Clifford Will Be Seen Only in Masterpictures De Luxe, and a Masterpicture De Luxe Company Is Organized at Signal Studio

EXPANSION of the Mutual Film Corporation's output to take in six features a week—three Masterpictures, De Luxe Edition, and three three-reel features—has required a series of changes and readjustments in the studios and among the producing forces.

Many new names have been added to the Mutual's roster of players, new directors have been engaged, and the workshops of several companies have undergone enlargement.

The Gaumont Company has three companies at work in Florida on the output of Masterpictures De Luxe. They are directed by Richard Garrick, William Haddock, and Edwin Middleton. The Gaumont Flushing studio continues the editing of "The Mutual Weekly"; the half reel scenic, "See America First"; and Harry Palmer's half reel cartoon, "Keeping Up with the Joneses."

Crane Wilbur and William Clifford, the chief Horsley stars, will be seen henceforth only in Masterpictures De Luxe. Horsley will also continue to contribute the George Ovey comedies, released Fridays, to the Mutual's list.

The American Film Company, Inc., which recently added a big glass studio to its plant, will be represented in this new scheme by four weekly releases, aside from Masterpictures De Luxe. A three reel Clipper drama and a Mustang Western of three reels will appear Tuesdays and Fridays, while one reel Beauty comedies will be issued Wednesdays and Sundays hereafter.

Thanhouser's increased producing activities will be represented by two weekly Falstaff comedies, a three reel Thanhouser drama, and Masterpictures De Luxe at intervals. One company of the Thanhouser contingent is in Florida making a five reel picture, "What Doris Did," starring Doris Grey.

A new Masterpicture De Luxe Company has been organized at the Signal Studios in California, where the Mutual railroad serial, "The Girl and the Game," is also made.

Vogue Comedies, Inc., the sixth of the Mutual producing companies, will continue its release of two Sammy Burns comedies a week. They are meeting with great success.

January 17 saw the introduction of the Mutual's new feature regime, but a short period of reconstruction is necessary before Mutual releases will stand in their correct weekly schedule.

The week of February 2 will usher in the new three Masterpicture, Edition De Luxe, three reel feature policy complete. From then on Mutual films may be grouped as follows: Masterpictures, De Luxe Edition, Mondays, Thursdays and Saturdays; three-reel features, Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Fridays; seven weekly comedies, a Clipper on Tuesdays, a Thanhouser on Wednesdays, and a Mustang on Fridays; seven weekly comedies—Falstaffs on Tuesdays and Thursdays, Beauties on Wednesdays and Sundays, Vogues on Thursdays and Sundays, and Cubs on Fridays; split reel scenic on Sundays and a topical on Thursdays.

"ON AGAIN, OFF AGAIN, FINNIGAN," AT WESTERN "U"

Joe Brandt, general manager of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, has announced the following additions to the Western Universal companies:

Guy Hedlund, general stock; Lillian Peacock, C. Conklin and M. Morante, the Curtis Company; Harry Morris, Thomas Jefferson, Thelma Francis, Billy Human and W. F. Musgrose, general stock; Bess Meredyth and Calder Johnstone, scenario department, and Gilbert Warrenton, cameraman.

The following discontinuances have been announced from Universal City companies of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company by General Manager Brandt:

Barney Furey, Worthington company; Walter Rogers, Jane Waller, Dixie Carr, Sydney Ayres, general stock; Edythe Sterling and E. B. Jackson, Hunt company; W. H. Carr, Helen Reaume and Rex Hodge, Smalley company; B. A. Molter and Joe King, Madison company; L. T. Clapham, Ford company, and Robert Rose.

"U" Buys Stories and Novels of Well Known Writers

Rights to "The Honorable Peter Stirling," by Paul Leicester Ford, Is Obtained as a Starring Vehicle for King Baggot, Under Direction of Henry Otto

THE Universal Film Manufacturing Company announces the purchase of several stories and novels by well known authors. These will be picturized and released on the Universal Program as Red Feather productions.

The selection of proper vehicles for Universal stars was left to H. J. Shepard, head of the scenario department, and he has been busy for some weeks exploring the literary market.

The rights to Paul Leicester Ford's novel "The Honorable Peter Stirling," a best seller of its time, has been obtained and will be a vehicle for King Baggot, who will be directed by Henry Otto. It will be released as a five-reel Red Feather photoplay.

Ben Wilson will begin work at once on a detective series by Eustace Hale Ball, entitled "The Voice on the Wire." This will be done in five episodes of two reels each, each episode a separate story, but each contributing to the serial as a whole. Wilson will have the role of the detective. The serial will be syndicated through the Hearst chain of newspapers.

Mary Fuller will be provided with two fetaures, the first being an adaptation by Wallace Irwin from his book "Thrown to the Lions." It will be a five-reel Red Feather.

The second will be an adaptation of "The Huntress," from the pen of G. Vera Tyler, granddaughter of President John Tyler.

Reginald Wright Kauffman's novel, "The Ivy and the Oak," will be the vehicle of a prominent star. Harry Benham will put on by direction of John Harvey a two-reel comedy, "Held for Damages," while King Baggot will appear in Jacques Futrelle's "Diamond Master." Other works which have been bought for release during the next few months include "The Social Buccaneer" and "Black Friday," by Frederick Isham, "The Texas Ranger," by McLeod Raine, and "The First Lady of the Land," by Acton Davies and Charles Nirdlinger.

The Universal has eliminated its staff of scenario writers and substituted in its stead "continuity" writers, whose chief duty will be to adapt stories, books and ideas which have been and will be purchased.

In and Out of West Coast Studios

By J. C. Jessen

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, Jan. 19.

MOTION picture producing has been practically at a standstill in the Los Angeles field since December 29, due to "unusual" weather. During the period between the above date and January 15 there were two clear days that pictures could be made without artificial light, and two or three other days when companies could work between clouds.

This stretch of rain and bad weather, according to the producers who have been here since the first motion picture studios were opened, is the worst film makers have had to contend with in the past five or six years. Every organization is prepared to work on Sundays to make up for the time lost.

MARY ANDERSON (VITAGRAPH) SKI-ING AT BEAR VALLEY, CAL.

For the past four weeks the Biograph company, directed by J. Farrell Macdonald, has been working on the three reel subject "The Guilt of Stephen Eldridge." It is a story of a partner double-crossing the other member of the firm, thus forcing him to pay the penalties by imprisonment.

The party, however, becomes conscience stricken, and cares for the widow and family. Gretchen Hartman, Vera Sisson, Raymond Nye and Ivan Christie are the principals in this.

The Walter Coyle-Biograph Company is filming a two reel comedy drama entitled "What Happened to Peggy," with Vola Smith appearing in the name part supported by Clara McDowell and Jose Reuben.

The Biograph scenario department have completed the working script from "The Mysteries of Orcival," the masterpiece of Gaboriau, the French author, and this will be made in three reels. Another story prepared will be made under one of two titles, "Randolph's Son," or "Alias Jimmie Barton." This will be of two reels and is of the nature of a dramatic comedy.

Space Needed for Vogue and Signal

It has been found impossible for both the Vogue and Signal producing companies to work at the Pasadena avenue studio because of space needed, and the Vogue organization has leased the studio at Gower and Santa Monica boulevard, Hollywood, where Director Jack Dillon is in charge.

In the past three weeks they have made the one reel subject, "She Wasn't that Kind of a Girl," a burlesque melodrama, and another under the fanciful title of "Iggorrottes Crocodiles and a Hat Box." At the present time they are filming "Bungling Bill Butler," and will next take up "At the Devil's Ball." The stock company of the Vogue has undergone several changes, and is now composed of Paddy McGuire, Louise Owen, Priscilla Dean, Russ Powell and Creighton Largey as assistant director.

Jim A. Crosby, late head of the Universal photographic department, has been engaged by the Rolin Film Company to act in the same capacity.

During the making of a scene for the last current Phunphilm for the Pathé release, Harold C. Lloyd, leading man of the Rolin company, narrowly escaped suffocation when he was placed inside the engine compartment of a large racing car with a smoke pot and the hood securely fastened. On opening the hood at the completion of the scene Mr. Lloyd was said to be found unconscious. A physician was immediately called in, and Mr. Lloyd was able to continue with his work the following day.

Completes NYMP Scenes

William S. Hart and his company of fifty NYMP players are completing the last scenes for the big Canadian Northwest production, which are being made in Topango canyon. Monte M. Katterjohn, of the Ince scenario staff, is now preparing the next William S. Hart story, which will be of unusual character.

Dorothy Dalton, who played the part of the wife of William S. Hart in "The Disciple," a recent Triangle feature, has returned to the Ince plant, and will appear in the coming Hart production.

The Woolworth building of Hollywood has been discovered. In making known this fact it is well to state that Hollywood has a population of approximately fifty thousand, one-fifth of which is said to be connected with the motion picture industry.

The highest building in the suburb is but two stories, consequently when the Lasky

Feature Play Company built a three story concrete and steel laboratory building, they caused everyone to look up.

Kenneth McGaffey, Lasky publicity humorist, before making the claim that the Lasky company was entitled to the distinction of owning the most conspicuous building, made a tour of the entire city to be sure there would be no mistake—a most unusual act for a publicity writer, yes?

DeMille Company at Lasky Ranch

Director William C. DeMille and a company of Lasky players headed by Blanche Sweet have been spending the past few days at the Lasky ranch making exterior scenes for "The Blacklist," an original scenario by Mr. DeMille and Marion Fairfax.

The Lasky organization filming "To Have and to Hold," under the direction of George Melford, has been at the beaches during the past week, where Mae Murray, the star, was initiated into the thrills of sea scenes.

Miss Murray wandered away to pick wild flowers or shells, and became lost among the sand dunes, the first day on location, and it required a half-hour's search on the part of the company to locate the recent Broadway addition to the Lasky forces. When found it is said she was on the verge of hysterics.

Anita King, the Lasky-Paramount girl, was honored recently when she, by an invitation to preside at the opening of the new Coliseum theatre at Seattle, which invitation she accepted. One day she edited the motion picture page of a leading newspaper there, and at the request of telegrams to the Lasky company from other theatre owners in Spokane, Portland and Tacoma, she paid these cities a visit.

Jesse L. Lasky departed for New York Tuesday of this week on a business trip pertaining to the Lasky company, but principally as representative of the Los Angeles Civic organizations.

Recently the pastor of a local church denounced the motion picture producing companies studio forces here as "camps of immorality," and his sermon was widely quoted in local and foreign papers, all of which reflected on the whole industry of Los Angeles, while in reality he was referring to one or two organizations.

Always Ready to Think the Worst

For a few days it seems to the motion picture people that the entire city was pleased to accept the charges as definite, which caused much indignation to the producers, and plans were partially made for the removal of studios from this city.

At this point, the most prominent civic organizations took the matter in hand, investigated and later refuted the preacher's charges.

Fearing that the Eastern officers of the motion picture companies would gain the wrong impression regarding the Los Angeles attitude toward the industry, the civic organizations induced Mr. Lasky to go East and explain that this city held the members of picture companies in the highest regard.

While in the East Mr. Lasky will also represent the recently organized Motion Picture Producers Protective Association, formed here by the heads of studios.

The purpose of this will be to regulate both local and foreign conditions detrimental to the motion picture interests, and will also make it possible to take an active part in politics should conditions warrant same.

Ford I. Beebe, who has been publicity writer for Universal Film studios for the past eighteen months, has been discovered to be a scenario genius by Director Otis Turner, who is now filming Beebe's first story for the screen entitled, "Get the Boy."

This will consist of five reels and features Carter DeHaven, supported by Flora DeHaven, Maude George, J. Hope, Harry Carter, Bert Grassby, and Harry Holland. The script calls for a number of excellent comedy situations caused by a grandfather willing all his property to his grandson, and designating that the party with whom the boy is living at the age of eighteen shall be custodian of the estate until the lad reaches his majority.

The parents have separated, and at the time are engaged in a divorce suit while the boy is at a boarding school. Both father and mother attempt to secure the lad by means fair or foul, but he eludes them until his eighteenth birthday, when he marries the daughter of a widow, who furnishes the school with butter and eggs.

Nestor Makes Comedies on Footage Basis

The Al. E. Christie Nestor companies now making comedies on a footage basis for the Universal, are very fortunately located at the old Quality Pictures Corporation studio, Sunset and Gower streets, and they are continuing with their merry little fun makers.

Al. Christie is filming "Her Friend the Doctor," where the grocery clerk's sweetheart returning from receiving a polish at college, arouses his jealousy by writing to Doctor Bonner. She carries the joke even farther by inviting the doctor to come to see her, and there after arousing more jealousy, introduces her sweetheart to the Ph.D., who wears skirts.

The Rex Universal Company is filming a five reel subject entitled "The Altar of Friendship," which will portray incidents in the life of society people of a city. One husband through misunderstanding believes his wife in love with another, while in reality the husband is merely aiding the wife, who is in difficulties, owing to having been deceived prior to her marriage.

These complications cause the wife of the benefactor to think her husband untrue. A child part of much importance has been written into this subject, and will be played by Georgie French.

The principals of the cast are Agnes Vernon, Hayward Mack, Margie Ellison and Lon Chaney. The direction is in charge of Joseph DeGrasse.

Story of Circus Life by Dowlan

A refreshing story, partially of circus life, is being made by Director William C. Dowlan, which is adapted from a story by Isabella Ostrander, entitled "Livina Comes Home." An aged couple who have spent their life on a farm attend the circus that comes to the county seat, and there see a girl performing a bare back act whom they believe to be their daughter who was washed away years before in a flood.

They are mistaken in this, but the girl is persuaded to deceive the old people for the sake of the circus getting a number of good stories in newspapers, it being arranged that she is to return to the sawdust ring at an early date.

The deception of the girl is soon discovered by the woman, but she keeps it a secret in order to add happiness to her husband. The girl finds the quiet life the happiest she has ever known, and the climax is reached when the farmer sells the circus man a trained pig, when he comes for the girl and the "daughter" promises to be the bride of a neighboring young farmer. Marcia Moore plays the name part, Thomas Jefferson and Helen Wright the supposed parents, and R. Sterling the role of the country lover.

It having been definitely decided not to send a producing company to the Orient for the present, Henry McRae has again taken up the making of 101 Bison subjects, with a company composed of Edwin N. Wallock, late with the Selig company, Lee Hill, who for a time was with the Chaplin Essanay, and later director of Vogue comedies; Marie Walcamp, G. A. Williams and Jack Curtis.

The first subject to be made is entitled "The Strife of the Iron Trail," from scenario by F. M. Wiltermood. This story has to do with rival railroad companies trying to build into the same city, through a mountainous section. Among the thrillers for this will be a fight between the two rival construction crews on a fast moving train of flat cars, the leaping from a fast running locomotive into a river eighty feet below by the heroine, and the dynamiting of a mammoth railroad bridge.

Throughout the story there is a love interest between the disowned son of one of the railroad magnates and the girl who serves as operator at a station near where the fighting takes place.

"Crippled Hand" a Two-Reel Subject

"The Crippled Hand" is a two reel subject being produced by Robert Leonard and David Kirkland, wherein Ella Hall is featured as a little crippled shop clerk whose dreams of finding a prince as did Cinderella comes true when she tries on a slipper on display in a theatre lobby, and thus secures a place in the newly organized opera company.

There she prevents the prima donna from being shot by jumping between the woman and a crippled man who had formerly been a celebrated violinist playing in concert with the singer, and jilted by her after he had been injured in an accident when he saved her from injury.

A prominent part is that taken by Robert Leonard, the role of the angel of the show. This story is by Calder Johnstone, formerly scenario editor at Universal City, who for the past six months has been with the American. Mr. Johnstone returns to Universal staff the first of this week.

George Cochran, who was recently added to the producing staff at Universal city, has completed the filming of the one reel story "Shackles," from story by Laura Oakley. The principals in this are Douglas Girrard and Carmen Phillips.

The Allan Curtis Joker Company is filming "Love Laughs at the Law," and the second Joker company featuring Victor Potel is busy in the making of "When Slim Was Home Cured."

The Ford-Cunard Company is filming a one reel drama entitled "The Bandit Wagon." The cast for this includes Jack Holt and Neal Hardin.

At the Universal zoo "The Toll of the Jungle" in two reels is being filmed by Director Jay Hunt and company. The leading parts in this are taken by Rex Roselli, Yona Landowska, Colin Chase and T. D. Crittenden.

Jaccard Making "Wedding Guest"

The Jaccard Western Universal Company is busy with the making of "The Wedding Guest," adapted from the story by Lucia Chamberlain. As in previous western subjects made by this company, Harry Carey, William Gettinger, Olive Golden and Peggy Coudray play the principal parts.

"The Journal of Lord John" serial company has taken up the filming of the fifth episode of the story by the Williamsons. The title of this is 'The League of the Future." The same cast that has appeared in previous numbers is playing in this.

The Joseph Hatton story "John Needham's Double" has been adapted for the screen by Olga Printzlau, and Tyrone Power will be featured in the name part of the production to be made by the Smalleys.

Ernie Shields and Roy McCrae have completed the filming of a one reel comedy, "Time Flies," and Lynn Reynolds and company, composed of Myrtle Gonzalez, Frank Newberg, Val Paul, and others are filming a one reel drama entitled "Lonesomeness."

F. McGrew Willis has prepared a scenario adapting the Houghton Townley novel, "The Gay Lord Warring" for the screen. This is being made by Director Harry Carter, under the supervision of Otis Turner. Jack Kerrigan is playing the name part in this subject.

The William Worthing Universal Company upon the completion of the one reel drama, "After the Play," it is said, will take up the making of a serial. The title of this has not been made known, but it is stated that it will be of the nature of a mystery story with Herbert Rawlinson featured in the leading part, that of a young man who has many very unusual adventures.

Change in "Graft" Serial

Another change has been made in the "Graft" serial producing company, in that Hobart Henley has been transferred to the Eastern studio. Now Director Richard Stanton is to step in and play the role of adventurer through the remaining episodes.

He will take the part of an attorney who is a member of the Larnigan family, and will continue to flay the various organizations of graft to avenge the death of other members of the family who have gone before.

The Vitagraph company has returned from Truckee, where they made the three reel drama, "The Other Way," using snow scenes available there. In this Fred William Hillar, the German champion skiier, performed in a number of scenes before the camera. Included in the cast for this were Corrine Griffith and Anne Schafer.

The Rollin Sturgeon company which has been at Bear Lake securing snow stuff for "God's Country and the Woman" for the past two months, save for a few days spent here during holiday time, arrived home the first of this week, having escaped from the mountain retreat just in time to prevent being snowed in.

Should the latter have happened, the players would have had a very undesirable experience in that the hotel did not have provisions of sufficient quantity to entertain them for more than a week or two. Local papers carried many wierd tales of hardships of this party of photoplayers, but none seem the worse for the experiences.

A number of extensive improvements are to be made at the new Vitagraph studios at once. These include the enclosing of the entire grounds, which consists of thirteen acres, and the building of attractive bungalows on each side of the entrance, which will serve as offices for the organization.

The laboratory, cutting and assembling departments are now housed in new quarters, a building 35 x 100 feet having been erected. Work will be taken up at once on the building of another stage of the same size as the present one, 80 x 150 feet.

It is the plan of Director General Sturgeon to beautify the grounds with lawns, gardens and hedges.

Wing Completes Three-Reeler, "Ashes"

William E. Wing has juts completed two three reel scenarios for the Vitagraph company which will be made into Blue Ribbon subjects featuring Mary Anderson. One is entitled "Ashes," and the other "Little Miss Adventure."

A feud of the Kentucky type between the families of Ham and Bud served as the basis for another Ham comedy now being made. Gordon Griffith, a boy actor, was cast to play the part of Ham when a lad, and all the members of each family were represented in the fight that lasted for years. Porter Strong in this appears as the father of Ham.

VITAGRAPH WILL OPEN NEW THEATRE IN NEW YORK

Announcement has been made by the Vitagraph Company that as soon as it secures a suitable new playhouse to take the place of the Vitagraph theatre which closed Saturday night last, it will arrange to show Vitagraph films in new quarters.

The company is negotiating for one of several theatres that have necessary seating capacity and equipment, modern enough to permit presentation of films in the best manner possible.

The closing of the Vitagraph theatre was due to the fact that the owners would grant no more than three months' cancellation clause, which precluded the possibilities of having any alterations made. During and since the run of "The Battlecry of Peace," the theatre has played to capacity houses.

It may be possible that the Vitagraph company will decide to build a large moving picture auditorium in the theatre zone, with a seating capacity of two thousand.

Film News From Foreign Parts

Paris, Never Downcast, Sees Pictures as Usual

Special to Motion Picture News

Paris, Jan. 10.

"WHAT do you think of Paris; how do you find our gay city after two years' absence?" I enquired from my friend Mr. Kogan, who has just returned from the States.

"Before I left New York for Paris," he said, "I was strongly advised by a friend who had been there not long ago, not to bring more luggage than I could carry comfortably from the station to an hotel.

"I was told that there are few railway porters or taxis in Paris. He was right about the porters. I had to join a syndicate of chance acquaintances of the compartment in exploiting the services of a man caught red-handed in the act of looking for work.

"He justified his position with honor, and put each of us with our luggage inside a taxi within the space of five minutes.

"Paris is alive, the story of there being a shortage of cabs belongs to prehistoric times.

"I am prepared to affirm that you are even now, when crossing a street, taking an even-money chance that a tax bowls you over. What struck me mostly is the disappearance of Paris into those high, white houses, at eight o'clock.

"The dinner-hour, I found, is now much earlier and it is surprising to see, that although the authorities permit the restaurants to keep open until eleven o'clock, all the diners are leaving a good half-hour before that time.

Old Animation on Boulevards

"Along the main boulevards, which of course look rather dark, the old animation is going on, especially when the theatres and kinemas, which I see are doing splendid business, turn out their audiences. Paris is again what it was before the war.

"Paris of course is at its best from noon to six. The streets are alive with people. The overwhelming majority are women. I have seen very few young men. The men I have seen in the streets are either too old or too young to be at the firing lines.

"But what really make a big difference on the boulevards is the large number of officers and soldiers one meets. I have already seen English, Russian, Italian and even Servian officers.

"Paris has not changed for the worse, Its streets are quieter now. The note of color has changed. Nature helps but little with color in January, and the loss of tens of thousands of men is being mourned. I noticed that there is not one orchestra at any of the restaurants. This is a great improvement. You can talk to a friend and hear what he says. This is my impression of Paris. Am I right or wrong?"

"What about the kinemas?" I enquired

"Well, it just reminds me that on my arrival one of them was offered to me. I went to have a look and bought the place. I invited my friend Mr. Kogan, who had only just arrived and had already bought a kinema, to go round to see some of the shows. We started with the kinemas on the main boulevards.

"At the Pathé Palace, the big film was 'Mystères de New York,' at the Aubert Palace, 'L'Heure de Rève,' an artistic film of Gaumont, one of the very best seen for a long time, and two good Vitagraph comedies.

"The vaudeville is still running 'Cabiria,' and doing big business. The Gaumont Palace, Aimer, Pleurer and Mourir, were using good films.

"The Omnia Pathé, Kinerama, Tivoli, Cinéma and Ciné Palace, were running 'Mystères de New York.'

"Mysteres de New York" Big Drawing Card

"We could have kept on visiting twenty more kinemans showing 'Mystères de New York,' but we thought that we had seen quite enough of 'Mystères de New York,' and so my friend Kogan decided to open his kinema with 'Mystères de New York,' as it is the only film to draw all Paris to the Kinemas just now."

Edna May has completed her first, and it is said, her last engagement as a picture actress, for which she has received 500,000 francs. She is by no means enamored of the work of a picture actress, and only the offer of such a large sum, which she is giving to Red Cross and other charities, tempted her.

This week at the general show-rooms a few good American films were shown to the exhibitors: Vitagraph, "Tempete bienfaitrice"; Keystone, "Exposition de San Francisco, Polyte assure toi and Do-ré-mi Boum," and Lubin, "Bibi Policier."

I have had the pleasure of meeting Sergeant-Major W. F. Martin, who told me how a kinema show is run by two "Tommics" for "Tommies."

He was asked if he knew anything about kinema work, and as he did he went with another man to a firm in Paris, where they got a complete outfit and opened seven miles behind the lines.

Theatre Near Zone of Fire

"Several times we heard the shells whistle over our heads during the performance," he told me. "If it got particularly hot, I would go on the stage and say, 'Well, boys, the shells are coming nearer. Are you going out?' and there would be a unanimous shout of 'No.'

"We got big houses. Our hall, which was formerly a grain warehouse, is fitted up like any picture palace at home. We even have afternoon tea served by two Belgian girls. We charge half a franc for admission, and this, together with the proceeds of the café, goes to the French Comfort Fund or whatever other object is decided upon by the officers.

"All the picture agencies in France are lending us their best films. We specialize, of course, in comics, particularly Charlots.

"They like anything but the war. We have five-hour shows every day but Monday. I often get so many films offered me that I don't know what to do with them. My assistant, Corporal H. Cook, is an electrician and takes charge of that department of the work.

Madame Sarah Bernhardt has this week made her first appearance at the London Coliseum, and was granted a most cordial reception by the audience.

PATHE'S "HUMAN MOVEMENTS ANALYZED" MAKE HIT

"Human Movements Analyzed" and its sequel "Animal Movements Analyzed," two single reel educational subjects, have received larger bookings than any Pathé one reel pictures in years.

The newspapers everywhere have united in declaring them to be as interesting and instructive as any films that have ever come under their observation.

William A. Johnston,
President, Motion Picture News,
New York City.

My dear Mr. Johnston:

I have noted with ever-increasing admiration the growth of Motion Picture News, but of this week's issue (Jan. 29) I have but one comment—it's incomparable.

As a volume for reference purposes it is without equal in its kind, and in saying so I am doubtless but reiterating the sentiments which your subscribers everywhere are expressing.

Wishing you the success that you so richly deserve, I am,

Very faithfully yours,

TENSE MOMENTS IN CHAPTER SIX OF THE SIGNAL-MUTUAL SERIAL, "THE GIRL AND THE GAME," WITH HELEN HOLMES

FOUR FAMOUS PLAYERS AT STRAND IN ONE MONTH

A new Broadway mark was established by the Famous Players Film Company during the last month, when four of that concern's features were shown in succession at the Strand theatre in New York.

These four productions were "Lydia Gilmore," "The Foundling," "Mice and Men," and "My Lady Incog.," in which Pauline Frederick, Mary Pickford, Marguerite Clark and Hazel Dawn were respectively starred.

Though this company, as well as other producers, have had simultaneous exhibitions of two features on Broadway at different theatres, this is the first instance in which the foremost motion picture house in the country has been devoted to the productions of any one concern for an entire month.

SELIG-"TRIBUNE" BRINGS TELEGRAMS AND LETTERS TO THE COMPANY

Telegrams and letters arriving at the Chicago offices of the Selig Polyscope Company, testify to the favor with which the Selig-Tribune is being received all over the country, says an announcement from the company.

The posters, the methods of presenting the news features of the day, the film captions printed in three languages, English, German and Italian, and other innovations are the subjects of favorable comment.

Lasky as Chairman Raises Money for Actors' Fund

President of Feature Play Company While Serving on California Motion Picture Committee of Million Dollar Campaign Organization Makes Favorable Report to Goldfish

LOS ANGELES will practically declare an Actors' Fund holiday on Thursday, February 10, according to an announcement made this week by Jesse L. Lasky, president of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company.

Mr. Lasky arrived in New York last Saturday from the Pacific Coast where, as chairman of the California Motion Picture Committee of the Actors' Fund Million Dollar Campaign, he had just completed arrangements for the raising of a large sum among the persons interested in the motion picture industry.

Samuel Goldfish, executive head of the Lasky company, is the chairman of the general committee appointed by Daniel Frohman.

Mr. Lasky in making his report to Mr. Goldfish says that unquestionably other cities besides Los Angeles will join in a concerted movement toward the million dollar campaign on February 10.

The two-month campaign will open Thursday, February 10, on which day stars from various studios will appear in person at the different Los Angeles motion picture theatres.

Tickets will be sold on the streets by the leading artists, good for admission to any of the motion picture theatres.

An extra charge will also be made by the managers of the vaudeville and "legitimate" theatres for their seats on that day, and it is expected that a large sum of money will be raised in that manner.

Following this, on Saturday, February 12, a big ball will be given in one of the principal hotels and money received for the sale of tickets will be turned over to the fund.

On Friday, March 3, Al Levy, the well-known host, will give a special "Actors' Fund Night" at his celebrated gastronomical palace.

Tables will be reserved and 60 per cent. of the gross receipts of that evening will be presented to the committee. The campaign will be concluded Friday evening, March 31, with a monster benefit at the largest theatre obtainable in Los Angeles.

This benefit will run from one to six o'clock and all the principal stars appearing at the legitimate theatres and the photographic stars from the various studios will do stunts.

A number of other plans are well under way to fill in the intervening time. These will be announced later. The first day the notice asking for subscriptions to the Actors' Fund of America was placed in the Lasky studio over two hundred and fifty dollars was promised.

The Ince, Keystone, Griffith and Universal studios have also posted these requests for funds and a great amount of money has been underwritten.

"Girl and the Game" Company Goes to Nevada Desert

Helen Holmes Picks Wild, Rocky, Mountainous Country with Levels of Alkali Plains for Her Next Thrilling Stunts in Railroad Play

HELEN HOLMES and Director J. P. McGowan have taken their "Girl and the Game" company to the arid desert regions at Las Vegas, Nev., where the work of producing Frank H. Spearman's thrilling railroad film play will be continued without interruption by unfavorable weather. This precaution has been taken to prevent delay.

The locality chosen by Miss Holmes is a wild, rocky, mountainous country which gradually levels into alkali plains. There is a small railroad town which furnishes all the settings necessary for forthcoming exciting chapters of which fully three or four will be made among these surroundings.

A lucky coincidence is that the next few chapters of "The Girl and the Game" call for Nevada scenes—the wild wastes, the regular yellow lands and the town that simply exists because of the railroad.

Reports from the company tell of the great enthusiasm with which the production is being carried on in the new location. Miss Holmes has some new surprises in store, which are being carefully guarded until the film is ready.

FIRE AT FINE ARTS STUDIO FAILS TO CHECK PRODUCTION

A slight fire in David W. Griffith's Triangle Fine Arts studios destroyed a small amount of negative. As many positive prints had already been made from this negative it can easily be replaced.

The studio fire fighters responded immediately to a general alarm and work was resumed in the cutting department within fifteen minutes after the blaze was discovered. Production of Triangle plays will not be hindered by the fire and new features are being completed daily.

JUST TO MAKE TALK

By LONGACRE

SOME young person, who was promptly placed under arrest, and by this time is doubtless safely stowed away up-State, is responsible for the statement that a new general management berst in upon the Pathé offices this week.

Continuing scene 1, it is in order to remark that the Pathé forces were well represented at the censorship hearing at Washington last week. Among those present was P. A. Parsons, who went down to the capital with a neat speech ready for the Congressmen.

But other men talked so long and so loud that he never got a chance to deliver it. He reports that he spent the greater part of two days as the Next Gentleman on the Program, and when he left Washington, much relieved at his escape, he was still Next.

Still on the subject of Pathé, attention is directed to George Smith; Mr. Smith joined the publicity staff of Pathé a little less than a year ago, coming from the editorial department of the New York Press. Now he is in charge of the numerous serials being distributed by the Pathé organization, and his newest job is reading and passing upon the scripts for "Who Is Guilty?" the new series which Arrow is really to produce. A rule has been issued that all scripts must have Mr. Smith's O. K. before being put into production.

In line with our policy of giving our readers all the latest information regarding Kitty Gordon's back (page 543 of our last issue) we take occasion to announce that Miss Gordon's director works with a green eyeshade while the famous expanse is being filmed. We believe we have this information exclusively.

W. E. Shallenberger, president of Arrow Film Corporation, has been spending two weeks in the West. He returned from Chicago on Monday, January 24.

George Beban, now working in several pictures for the World Film Corporation, reports that he has found more action in his picture experience than in his whole life beside.

He has been bitten by a dog, butted by a goat, has fallen off a bridge, been stabbed with a fencing foil, had an ace-full beaten, got caught in the rain, and had an assistant director borrow seven dollars from him.

He is now thinking of enlisting in the French army in Flanders long enough to get a little peace and quiet.

Up in the Adirondacks a number of natives who met and became acquainted with Francis J. Grandon, the newest Metro director, are crying "wolf." Mr. Grandon went up to the mountains to produce some scenes for "The Lure of Heart's Desire."

Among his props was a pack of timber wolves, untamed and as wild as a Saturday night bartender. They were turned loose to chase the poor unfortunate Indian girl through the woods, and they did their part so well that Mr. Grandon is still looking for them.

After the chase the wolves went away, and could not be rounded up. So far as is known they are still at large in the Adirondack wastes.

The Gaumont companies at work in Florida announce the marriage at Jacksonville on Saturday, January 8, of Kathleen Butler and Henry W. Pemberton. Both are well-known members of the Gaumont companies.

Mr. Pemberton has appeared in "The Devil's Darling," "The Secret Agent," "The Ace of Death" and "The Idol of the Stage." (See page 48 of MOTION PICTURE NEWS STUDIO DIRECTORY.) Miss Butler has been seen in "The Secret Agent."

By special arrangement with Tarleton Winchester, publicity director of the Paramount corporation, we have acquired the local rights to a poem composed by Eugene Sullivan, 14-year-old office boy in the Paramount offices. The poem alleges:

MISS FLORENCE REED, STAR OF "THE WOMAN'S LAW" (Arrow-Pathé)

"Little Mary Pickford,
The wonder of the screen;
Little Mary Pickford,
The Paramount Queen!*

"She's the pride of all Reel life;
A heroine as well!
She's the one bright girl in film life,
Whom for gold we would not sell.†

"It's Mary here; it's Mary there;
It's Mary Pickford everywhere.
Her name is known from near and far,
For she's the dainty Paramount Star."

*Marguerite Clark, Pauline Frederick and Hazel Dawn bringing in a minority report.
†As has been amply demonstrated.

It may amaze a lot of actors and scenario writers to learn that even a directors does not always have everything his own way. Here just as the skating was getting good, George Irving has to pack up his brief-bag, take his safety razor, and company, which includes Alice Brady and James Sherrill, down to Ashville, N. C., where the birds are blooming and the bees babbling through the sultry afternoons.

After business hours, Mr. Irving can qualify as a first class right- and left-footed skater, but until he finishes "Then I'll Come Back to You" for the World Film, business hours stand to last for three weeks at a stretch. Mr. Irving is reported to have quoted the title of his picture to the Goldfish Pond, at Bayside, L. I., when he left.

Just as we were pushing the "Studio Directory" to press through about ten degrees of New York coldness, Harris Gordon, who with many other members of the Four Hundred winters in the South, goes and sends us a nice warm looking picture from Jacksonville, Fla.

Eugene Moore, Leo Wirth and Alfred Moses are standing about sans coats and vests, but Harris goes and spoils the symphony of things by leaving his on. Just for that, Harris, we refuse to print it, but thanks for the remembrance anyway.

MUTUAL TRAVELER BRAVES COLD FOR PICTURE IN NORTHWEST

Just to show that cold weather has no terrors for her, the Mutual Traveler went to Duluth after her visit to St. Paul and Minneapolis.

Sunday, January 30, she is shown on the screen attended by wintry blasts that blow right down from the north pole. This forms an interesting continuation of her winter series, which already includes Milwaukee and the Twin Cities of Minnesota.

After Duluth the anonymous beauty who takes these Mutual trips will visit a lumber camp.

EXHIBITORS ASK FOR "SIS HOPKINS" BEFORE IT IS RELEASED

Though the first announcement of the "Sis Hopkins" comedies was made only a few weeks ago and none are ready for release, General Film exchange reports state that a number of exhibitors have already made advance requisitions for bookings and many have written Kalem for co-operation in preparing their publicity for the new subjects.

This advance ordering is more surprising when it is considered that the Kalem productions will mark Rose Melville's screen debut.

The National Amusement Company, of Akron, Ohio, probably has the honor of being the first to book a "Sis Hopkins" comedy as shown by this letter received by Kalem from the president, L. A. Schiappacasse:

"Gentlemen:—Have made arrangements to have the 'Sis Hopkins' comedies placed on our program as soon as they are released. Meanwhile would like to have any special advertising matter you will have for these comedies, and cuts for the newspapers."

JANE GREY JOINS TRIUMPH FOR "MAN AND HIS ANGEL"

For the Triumph Film Corporation's production of "Man and His Angel" Jane Grey, last seen in the Famous Player's production of "The Little Grey Lady" and a big Metro feature, has been engaged and will appear as co-star with the noted French player Henri Bergman.

Edmund Lawrence will handle the production end and a specially elaborate feature is promised by Triumph.

Miss Grey, well known on the speaking stage, appeared at the Longacre and Republic theatres last season in A. H. Wood's production of "Kick In" and was so well received in the role of the adventuress that when the show went on tour, Miss Grey was co-featured with John Barrymore.

"Man and His Angel" will be released by Equitable early in March and will be followed by Mary Boland in "Three Pairs of Shoes."

"Undine" Follows "Secret Love" From the Bluebird

Latter Is Scheduled for Release on January 31—Third in the Brand, Which Was Directed by Henry Otto, Will Be Followed by "Hop, the Devil's Brew"

BLUEBIRD PHOTOPLAYS have stirred advance interest that seems to promise an immediate success when the release of Mme. Sarah Bernhardt's "Jeanne Dore" goes into effect this week. The preliminary release of the Bernhardt feature in New York and vicinity was marked by great public interest.

The release for January 31, immediately following Bernhardt, will be Helen Ware's portrayal of Joan Lowrie in "Secret Love," a feature founded on Mrs. Frances Hodgson Burnett's novel, "That Lass o' Lowries"; and the third Bluebird will be "Undine."

Henry Otto, who produced the screen version of De La Motte Foquet's fairy tale, went to the Catalina Islands, off the California coast, to find suitable land and water opportunities to realize the great possibilities of the picture phantasy. There, among the grottos and along the beautiful stretches of shore, he found settings for some wonderful photography.

"Hop, the Devil's Brew" is scheduled for release, following "Undine," on February 14. This feature has as its basis the traffic in opium, and in working out the details, customs officials of San Francisco co-operated.

As indicating the success that has attended the early campaign, M. H. Hoffman, executive manager of Bluebird Photoplays, Inc., said, in an interview with MOTION PICTURE NEWS, the other day:

"I like these long winter nights. They give me so much more time to add to a day's work. We have been forced to unprecedented activities by the demands exhibitors have made upon us for Bluebird Photoplays.

"The news that the Bernhardt film had been pre-released in New York spread quickly throughout the country, and this evidence that 'Jeanne Dore' was actually arriving at a general release has flooded us with demands for the film.

"Whether Bernhardt shall ever come to America remains a question that time alone can solve; but it is a certainty that she cannot come for many months, even if she is ever able to appear upon the stage over here again.

"The fact that Bluebird has her in pictures, and in the last play she appeared in, is an advantage exhibitors have been quick to realize, and they are anxious to 'cash' on the great amount of interest in Bernhardt that the cable reports to the daily papers are creating.

"There is great demand for the subsequent Bluebird releases. Helen Ware, in 'Secret Love,' is a wonderful feature, full of sensations, and when exhibitors get 'Undine' they will realize what a real feature can do in the way of creating public interest.

"I look for 'Undine' to become the most talked about and sensational feature of the season. Yes, indeed, it looks pretty good for Bluebird and those who exhibit our features."

"V" Studio Will Accommodate 10 Directors at Once

Rooms of an Up-to-Date House Arranged for Particularly Long Throws Will Be All on One Floor of Flatbush Structure, 150 by 200 Feet

IN keeping with the new policy about to be announced by the Vitagraph company, plans are under foot to construct a new type of studio on one of the plots owned by the Vitagraph company in Flatbush, N. Y.

Within a short time ground will be broken for the studio, directly behind the present gigantic plant. The studio will approximate 150 x 200 feet, and will enable at least ten directors to work at the same time.

A modern lighting system will be installed, and from present indications it looks as though many revolutionary effects in this branch of the industry will be embodied in this system.

The plans as outlined make provision for the rapid installation of sets, and it is intimated that a new method of scenic effects will be utilized by this company.

These studios will contain ten separate and distinct studios. In other words, it is planned by the Vitagraph company to have a bedroom, living room, drawing-room, kitchen, bathroom and, in fact, every style room, all on one floor.

The partitions will be solid construction and each room will represent the ideal of its type. One point of particular interest is the fact that the sets will be arranged in such a way as to give particularly long throws.

The structure will be a modern, steel and concrete affair, and particular attention has been paid to the ventilating and heating appliances.

"ELAINE" SERIALS PROVE POPULAR IN PORTO RICO

"Elaine," slightly disguised with Spanish titles, is going very strong in Porto Rico. Record audiences are reported on it all over the island, and "Elaine" hats, scarfs, cigars, etc., are seen in shop windows everywhere.

Thirteen Photoplays From V-L-S-E Next 2 Months

New Releases from Each of Four Manufacturers Said to Be Noteworthy for Their Heart Interest—Titles and Details of Presentation

NEW releases announced by the V-L-S-E, from each of their companies for the present period, are noteworthy in the strong heart-interest which predominates.

Lubin's first February release, scheduled for February 14, is "Dollars and Cents," featuring Ethel Clayton, and Tom Moore, whose initial appearance on the V-L-S-E program will occur in this production.

"Dollars and Cents" is an adaptation of the novel which has recently appeared in one of the prominent magazines, by Albert Payson Terhune. The play was directed by Joseph Kaufman.

Following this release, Lubin will present "Her Bleeding Heart," featuring Richard Buhler and Rosetta Brice, another story of intense sentimental carrying powers. It will be ready for booking February 28.

"Thou Shalt Not Covet," which is Selig's February release, scheduled for the seventh, is a story built on the old Biblical quotation, "Thou shalt not eovet thy neighbor's wife," which, in itself, gives some conception of its possibilities as a heart-interest play.

One of the startling scenes of this production is the wreck of a large ocean liner. It features Tyrone Power, Kathlyn Williams, Eugenie Besserer, and Guy Oliver.

On March 6, Selig will release "Unto Those Who Sin," with Fritzi Brunnette in the principal part. This is a drama written by James Oliver Curwood and direeted by William Robert Daly.

Essanay's offering on February 14 is a five-act feature, "Vultures of Society," written by Richard Goodall.

The story treats of two angles of the social problem, namely, that of the men well established in society who hunt down young girls in the lower walks of life, and with those who have gained entrance into society in order to prey on the wealthy victims at whose homes they are guests.

The types of the under world, which range from the cocaine fiend to the genial colored porter, have been well selected from the slum districts of Chicago by E. H. Calvert, who is directing the pieture.

The principals of the production include Lillian Drew, Marguerite Clayton, Ernest Maupain and E. H. Calvert.

For their second release in February, Essanay will present a modern day drama called "The Discard," by Charles Michelson.

Vitagraph have re-arranged their V-L-S-E releases so that the schedule for February begins with "The Crown Prince's Double," released on the seventh, and is followed by "The Writing on the Wall," on the fourteenth; "Kennedy Square," on the twenty-first; and "One Night on the twenty-eighth.

In March, beginning with the sixth, Vitagraph will put out through the Big Four, "The Hunted Woman," "Colton U. S. N.," on the thirteenth; the "Two Edged Sword," on the twentieth; and "The Supreme Temptation," on the twenty-seventh. Maurice Costello is seen in this production and Norma Talmadge.

"The Writing on the Wall," which follows "The Crown Prince's Double," was Olga Nethersole's starring vehicle, and is a psychological drama of greed. Virginia Pearson, Joseph Kilgour, Naomi Childers and Bobby Connelly are the principals in its enactment.

"Kennedy Square," next on the schedule, is an echo of the days when Baltimore was the social center of the South. It was written by F. Hopkinson Smith, and presented by S. Rankin Drew. It is noteworthy for its delightful southern atmosphere and lovable southern types, according to advance reports.

"One Night," said to be an especially strong vehicle for Robert Edeson, for whom it was especially written, is being produced under the direction of Harry Davenport.

MARGUERITE BERIZA, OPERA STAR, FOR SELIG PRODUCTION

Marguerite Beriza, soprano of the Chicago Grand Opera Company, has signed a contract to become a Selig Polyscope Company star. Madame Beriza, whose salary as a song bird runs into four figures, has never appeared on the motion picture screen.

Madame Beriza began singing in the Paris Opera Comique, and she won first prize in the Paris Conservatory as a pianist and vocalist. She was formerly the wife of Lucien Muratore, and together they scored many artistic triumphs.

The new star to join the Selig company sang in the Boston Opera Company for three years, and was a member of the Metropolitan Opera Company, of New York City.

Beriza will join the Selig Polyscope Company early in February, and will probably be employed both at the Chicago and Los Angeles studios of the Selig company.

Edison Company Goes to Cuba for Three Months

Director Ridgely Will Take Scenes for Picturization of Elbert Hubbard's "The Message to Garcia," Featuring Mabel Trunnelle as a Spanish Girl Spy

A LARGE Edison eompany under Director Richard Ridgely, left New York Saturday, January 22, for a three months' stay in Cuba, where they will make several big five-reel features.

The prime reason for the trip is to secure actual locations for the picturization of Elbert Hubbard's famous "The Message to Garcia." That "message" has inspired more people to greater endeavor, and has probably been quoted more than any one article ever written in modern times.

MABEL TRUNNELLE

It gave the late Fra Elbertus some of his widest popularity. The scenes for the picture will be taken in and about Havana, Cuba.

The principals taken include Mabel Trunnelle, who will play a role unusual to her—that of a Spanish girl spy; Robert Conness, who will be the lieutenant that takes the message to Garcia; Bigelow Cooper will play the heavy; Herbert Prior, who appears as a demented Cuban; Edward Earle, who is cast for a straight part, and Helen Strickland.

Garcia will be played by a Spaniard now associated with Havana's leading theatre. Many Cubans and Spaniards will be locally cast.

Director Ridgely will first finish the Kleine-Edison feature, "The Ladder of Ambition," in which Mabel Trunnelle and Robert Conness are featured. The play ranges from the Adirondaek mountains to sunny Cuba.

Many scenes will also be taken, for the several features, on the boat on the way down. A Cuban tragedy picture will also be filmed by the director.

This move is characteristic of Manager McChesney's policy and determination —that Edison's entry into the bigger feature field will be marked with locations and every "atmospheric" help worthy of the big stories which are being so carefully picked for their dramatie strength and adaptability to pictorial beauty.

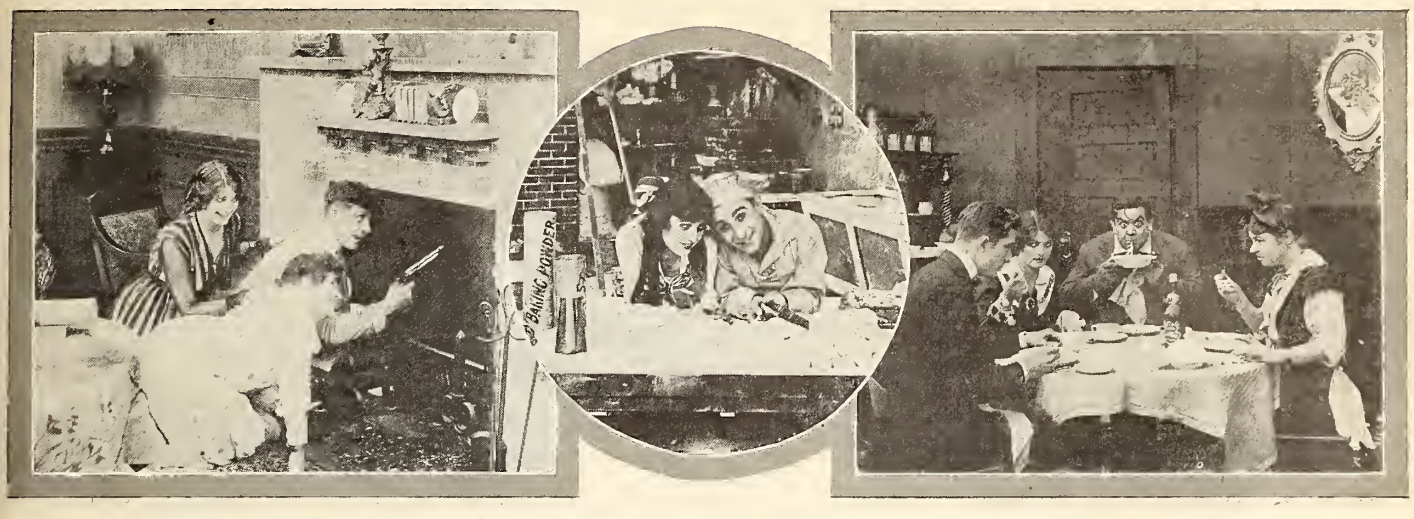
Not so long ago Director Ridgely was in the South and the pictures that his company made while there are numbered among the most beautiful and successful of Edison productions.

Manager McChesney is most enthusiastic and hopeful of the results from the present trip, with such a strong company and such a director.

MAUPAIN ACTED IN "CAPTAIN JINKS" AND DRILLED ITS BALLET

Ernest Maupain, who played the part of Professor Belliarti in Essanay's five-act feature, "Captain Jinks of the Horse Marines," drilled the ballet girls who appear in that production.

This was Mr. Maupain's profession many years ago while in Paris, and he welcomed the opportunity to try out his old-time skill. The ballet was composed of girls selected from the chorus of Ziegfield's "Follies of 1915."



SCENES FROM THREE VOGUE COMEDIES: "A BUM STEER," "SAMMY'S DOUGHFUL ROMANCE," AND "A BABY GRAND"

"SALAMANDER" JUSTIFIES MOSS'S BELIEF IN STATE RIGHTS

B. S. Moss declares his faith in state rights has been justified through the sale of his latest release, "The Salamander," from the book by Owen Johnson.

During the past week, Mr. Moss disposed of fifteen states. Among the film concerns who purchased territory were the Amalgamated Photo Feature Booking Corporation, which secured New York City, New York State and northern New Jersey; the Union Film Supply Company of Boston gets the New England states; the Central Film Company signed for Chicago, Illinois and Indiana; L. Santikos has Texas and Oklahoma, and Edward Nussbaum has the rights to California, Nevada and Arizona.

The rights for Australia and New Zealand have been absorbed by the Australasian Films, Ltd. Millard Johnson, the New York representative, engineered the deal.

This picture has succeeded "The German War Pictures" at the La Salle Chicago.

Pauline Frederick's First Dual Role in "Spider"

Famous Players' Star Will Appear in Two Characterizations Though Picture Is Not Double Exposure Production, Scheduled for Release on January 27

PAULINE FREDERICK plays her first dual role since becoming a photoplay star in the Famous Players-Paramount picture "The Spider," which is scheduled for release on January 27. Although Miss Frederick appears in two characterizations, this is not a double-exposure production, as the story is so constructed that the two characters are never actually brought face to face at any time.

By clever cutting, the director, Robert G. Vignola, makes the women see each other without actually meeting.

Valerie St. Cyr, wife of a poor and struggling musician, rebels at her lot and runs away with Count Du Poissy, deserting her baby daughter. Valerie and the Count have lived together for several years in perfect understanding.

But Valerie conceives the idea of having her portrait painted by Julian St. Sains, a young artist of extremely high ideals, who refuses to accept her as a model because he disapproves of her mode of existence. Angered by the artist's rebuff she determines to deceive him and goes to his studio very shabbily dressed.

Telling Julian a "hard luck" story, Valerie succeeds in winning his sympathy. When she tries on a handsome costume he is struck by her beauty and enthusiastically engages her as his model. Julian is engaged to a delightful girl, Joan Marche, with whom he is desperately in love.

So when Valerie falls sincerely in love with him, Julian remains obdurate and finally coldly refuses to have anything to do with her.

Furious at this second mark of disdain, Valerie induces the Count to kidnap Joan in revenge. This is most easily accomplished by Valerie when the Count discovers her exquisite charm. The plan works, and Joan is taken to the Count's rendezvous.

As she is coming out of the stupor which is induced by drugs, Joan hears the Count exulting over his capture and, realizing her peril, she seizes a knife from the curios on the wall. Then when her captor attempts to seize her, Joan stabs him and escapes.

Before he dies the Count summons the police, who arrive in time to find the frantic Valerie alone with the dead man. She has just learned from detectives that the girl whom she has assisted in delivering to the Count is none other than her own daughter!

Now, realizing that her daughter had committed murder, Valerie decides to make the greatest reparation in her power—to give herself up as the guilty one and, save her child.

There were no witnesses to the crime, and Valerie's confession satisfies the police. So she makes atonement at the guillotine for her early folly and her desertion of Joan, while the terror-stricken girl wonders why this unknown Valerie should have assumed the guilt for her crime.

In support of the star there appear Thomas Holding, Frank Losee and a typical Famous Players cast.

Can't Stop Oliver Morosco Studios from Growing

They Continue to Branch Out in Space and Enlarge the Working Staff—Stapleton in Charge of the Stock Room, and Stallings Is Added as Property Man

THE Oliver Morosco Photoplay Company studios continue to branch out in space and activity, as well as enlarge its working staff. A spacious and well-equipped stock room has been added to the plant which will enable this company to buy supplies in quantities.

The new stock room is housed in a specially erected building of corrugated iron, and faces the Council street lane, through the Morosco colony.

Russel Stapleton, formerly head of the order department of H. J. Heinz and Company, in Los Angeles, has been engaged to take charge. Mr. Stapleton comes from Pasadena and has a brilliant record with the Heinz people. So much so that this concern has refused to accept his resignation in order to take over his duties at the Morosco studios, but gave him a "leave of absence" in the hope that he would return.

Another addition to the working staff has been made in the person of Charles Stallings, formerly of the American in Santa Barbara. Mr. Stallings has been secured to act as property man for Director Frank Lloyd, who is at present busily engaged in the production of another large subject starring Constance Collier.

SELIG-TRIBUNE SHOWS FILM MEN AT CENSOR HEARING

The Selig-Tribune, the new animated news film, in its current issue, shows pictures of motion picture producers appearing before the house committee in Washington, D. C., and demanding their constitutional rights as American citizens.

They demand that the proposed censorship bill be defeated, as it encroaches upon the rights of free speech and a free press. The Selig-Tribune also displays prominently on its posters sent to all sections of the United States and other countries the arguments of the motion picture producers.

COLORED SALES MANUALS TO AID EXHIBITORS IN BOOKING

R. W. MacFarland of the Lubin Company is preparing a series of beautifully colored sales manuals for each of the productions of that company, released through the V-L-S-E.

These are printed on a highly coated paper, and reproduce in exact colors the posters available for each production. The illustrations include those of a half sheet, one sheet, three-sheet, six sheet and twenty-four-sheet.

In addition, the sales manual contains a synopsis of the story with the cast, and the complete list of advertising, which may be obtained on the production.

In each of these manuals there is also enclosed 9 x 12 publicity folders, indexed for quick reference, and containing reproductions of half tones which the exhibitor can use in his press matter.

Diversity in Theme Is Aim for Horsley Subjects

His Initial Masterpicture, "The Bait," Is Laid in Trapping Districts of the Northwest, While "Vengeance Is Mine" Gives Contrast with Luxurious Surroundings

THAT David Horsley is intent upon obtaining a diversity of subjects for picturization as Mutual Masterpictures, De Luxe Edition, is apparent in the themes of his first five productions, two of which will have been released by the end of the month.

His initial Masterpicture offering is "The Bait," released January 22. The story is set in the trapping section of the Northwest, and its subject matter derived from an analysis of the means of trapping wild game—the trap, the bait, the game—and applied to human life.

It is by reason of this foundation a thoroughly big subject, one that in its treatment holds up a mirror to life as it really exists among the rough and ready people of an unconventional country. It is very ably presented by a numerically strong cast, headed by William Clifford and Betty Hart.

"Vengeance is Mine!", the second of the five productions, is released January 31, and presents Crane Wilbur as the star. In contrast to "The Bait," the second picture is laid in rich and luxurious surroundings.

The theme is based on capital punishment and brings up the question: "Is the death penalty morally lawful?" The principal character is Governor Loring (Mr. Wilbur) who, always a staunch advocate of capital punishment, later is torn between conflicting emotions when his own brother is convicted of murder and sentenced to be electrocuted.

He faces the problem of either pardoning his brother and thereby violating his oath to administer justice as he sees it, or of adhering to his sense of righteousness and be the indirect means of sending his own brother to death. Around this situation a powerful drama has been built, one that sustains interest throughout, according to advanced reports.

The third production is scheduled for release February 12 and features Margaret Gibson, the beautiful and talented young star in a drama of reincarnation entitled "The Soul's Cycle."

The foundation for the story told in this picture is the assumption, according to the ancient Greek philosophies and religions, that a soul, after it has defiled the divine law, in order to reach its former state of perfection must re-live a complete cycle.

The action takes place in two varying periods of time—first in ancient Greece and then, in the second period, in society of modern times.

It furnishes some very tense dramatic situations but has, besides, a decided charm and picturesqueness through the locale of the play.

"A Law Unto Himself" is the title of the fourth production, for which the release date is February 28. Crane Wilbur is the player starred in this drama of the lawless West, playing the dual role of the sheriff and the outlaw.

A succession of startling dramatic moments is one of the dominant features of the play.

A circus story entitled "A Little Lady of Lions," written by Roy L. McCardell, is the fifth of Mr. Horsley's Masterpicture releases.

The nature of this story is along lines of popular appeal, which fact, combined with the treatment Mr. McCardell has given it will quite likely make the picture a most successful one.

Preparations are now under way for its production and some spectacular effects, as called for in the scenario, will be staged on a truly big scale, the manufacturer announced.

Scenarios are now being written for releases subsequent to "A Little Lady of Lions," and while it is too early to announce the nature of the plays Mr. Horsley promises in them a continued variety of subjects.

Universal City Prepares for First Election

Film Community Divided Into Two Factions Over Mayoralty Campaign, One Section Supporting Kerrigan and the Other Favoring Rawlinson for Re-election

THE inhabitants of Universal City are preparing for their first election campaign, when a mayor will be chosen.

At present Herbert Rawlinson is mayor of Universal City. He was appointed last June by President Carl Laemmle, who reserves the right to supervise the political affairs of the city.

When Universal City was formally opened last March, President Laemmle appointed Rawlinson to act as mayor until the first election, which was scheduled to take place in June.

As the United States Government did not recognize Universal City as a municipality until early in July, when the city was presented with a postoffice, President Laemmle extended Rawlinson's term until June 15.

The city is divided into two factions—the Universalites, who are supporting J. Warren Kerrigan, and the Progressives, who favor continuing Mayor Rawlinson in office. Neither man has as yet formally announced his candidacy.

The Universalites, many of whom are residents of the fourth ward, of which Kerrigan is the alderman, are making an effort to extend Powers avenue from Cochrane street to Big U mountain, thus making it as long as Laemmle boulevard, which runs through the center of the city.

The Progressives claim the city has not grown to such proportions as to permit it to have two business thoroughfares.

Kerrigan has come out for the proposed extension, but has declared he would not take part in the fight if it was to be made a political issue. However, Eddie Lyons, fourth ward leader, and Hobart Bosworth, alderman of the fifth ward, have been endeavoring to persuade Kerrigan to announce his candidacy.

The defeat of Rawlinson would probably affect every other department in Universal City. It is reported that Chief of Police Laura Oakley, and Fire Chief Robert Leonard, both Rawlinson adherents, would resign in the event of his defeat.

James Young Joins Lasky Staff of Directors

Producer of "My Official Wife" and Other Successes, Who Is Responsible for Many Film Attractions Featuring His Wife, Clara Kimball Young, Goes to West Coast

JAMES YOUNG, one of the best-known directors in the industry, is packing up his outfit and has passed on the word to his staff of assistants, and the entire party this week will start from New York for the studios of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company.

In the party besides Mr. Young will be his assistant director, Edward Hollywood, and Mrs. Hollywood; head cameraman, E. C. Corwin, Mrs. Corwin and their child, and Mr. Young's servants.

One of Mr. Young's chief claims to fame has been by reason of the series of productions he has made in recent years in which his wife, Clara Kimball Young, has appeared as the star.

Mr. and Mrs. Young were prominent in the Vitagraph studios for five years. He produced many one- and two-reel subjects for this company, including the ever successful "My Official Wife" and "Goodness Gracious," the burlesque photoplay which was on the opening program of the Vitagraph theatre, New York.

"Hearts in Exile" is one of their collaborated efforts. Among other features he has produced are "Lola," "The Deep Purple," "Marrying Money," "Little Miss Brown," "Over-Night," "The Heart of the Blue Ridge."

By reason of Mr. Young's experience both as writer and director, it is expected that he will be a valuable addition to the staff of Lasky directors, which includes Cecil B. De Mille, director general; William C. De Mille, Frank Reicher, George Melford, Paul Dickey and others.

Magaro 2nd Vice President of Pennsylvania League

Harrisburg Exhibitor Succeeds Miller, Who Resigns on Account of Press of Private Affairs —Magaro Gets Office by Unanimous Vote of Executive Committee

Special to Motion Picture News

Harrisburg, Pa., Jan. 22.

PETER MAGARO, of this city, was elected second vice-president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of Pennsylvania at a meeting of the executive committee of the league, held January 14 in the Hotel Raleigh, Washington, D. C. Mr. Magaro succeeds in this office G. C. Miller, a prominent exhibitor of Plymouth, who resigned owing to the press of private affairs.

Most of the members of the Pennsylvania executive board were in Washington in connection with the hearing before the House Educational Committee yesterday on the Hughes bill proposing a Federal Motion Picture Censorship Commission, and they took advantage of their being together to meet to fill the vacancy caused by Mr. Miller's resignation, and to make plans for further organization of Pennsylvania exhibitors.

Those present at the meeting of the Pennsylvania executive committee were: Fred J. Herrington, of Pittsburgh, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America; Ben H. Zern, of Reading, president of the Pennsylvania State League; George W. Sahner, of Pittsburgh, first vice-president of the Pennsylvania League and chairman of the league's executive committee; Charles Segall, of Philadelphia, treasurer of the Pennsylvania League, and Mr. Magaro.

Mr. Magaro was elected second vice-president by a unanimous vote of the executive committee. He is proprietor of the Regent theatre, Harrisburgh, and of the Orpheum theatre, Carlisle.

He has been a most active and useful worker in all the affairs of the State League since its organization, and was particularly active in looking after the exhibitors' interests when important measures relating to the motion picture business were before the Pennsylvania Legislature last spring. Mr. Magaro is the only resident of Harrisburg, the capital city of Pennsylvania, who is a member of the State's League's legislative Committee and by reason of that fact has been able to look out for the exhibitors' welfare at the State capitol, in season and out.

All of the members of the Pennsylvania executive committee mentioned above attended the Congressional Committee's hearing yesterday on the Hughes bill and started for home last night, Mr. Herrington made a vigorous speech in opposition to the measure.

The Pennsylvania delegation of exhibitors, according to a statement made by Mr. Magaro upon his return home from Washington, favors, instead of the legalized federal censorship provided by the Hughes bill, the passing of an amendment to Section 245 of the Federal Penal Code so that it would give persons the right to start criminal actions against exhibitors displaying improper motion pictures, subject to the fines that the Code now provides for the display of obscene or improper pictures of other kinds.

Under this plan, Mr. Magaro believes the question of whether a film is proper for public display would be decided according to the rules of legal procedure and before a trained judge, whereas under the proposed federal censorship law all pictures would be subject to rejection by a body not necessarily trained in the rules of evidence, and without the exhibitor having the right of appeal to a regular tribunal.

The members of the Pennsylvania delegation who went to Washington feel reasonably confident that the Hughes bill will not be enacted into law.

"ONE BRAVER THING," BASIS OF PATHE'S "LOVE TRAIL," MAKES HIT

The story of the Pathé Gold Rooster play, "The Love Trail," is becoming widely known in this country under the title "One Braver Thing." Duffield and Company, the publishers, report that it has passed through a number of editions.

It is worthy of note that the publishers as well as the picture men changed the title from the original English title "The Dop Doctor," because of the fact that in the minds of most people the word "Dop" would be considered synonymous with "dope."

As a matter of fact "dop" is the South African title for a certain kind of cheap whiskey. The book is by Richard Dehan.

"Elusive Isabel" Picked for Florence Lawrence

Vehicle Is a Picturization of Story by the Late Jacques Futrelle, and Will Be Directed by Paton—In the Cast Are Paul Panzer, Sidney Bracy, Wallis Clark and Other "U" Players

"THE ELUSIVE ISABEL," a picturization of a well-known story by Jacques Futrelle, will serve as the vehicle for Florence Lawrence's reappearance as a Universal star. It will be released as a Red Feather production on the Universal Program, at a date to be announced later.

Miss Lawrence's supporting company will consist of Paul Panzer, Sidney Bracy, Wallis Clark, William Welsh, Curtis Benton and Paul Crampton, among others.

Director Stuart Paton, who came into especial prominence through his production of the Williamson Submarine pictures, is producing the Lawrence photoplay. In staging "The Elusive Isabel," Mr. Paton found it necessary to blow up a building. It was also necessary to take the company to Washington, D. C., where Miss Lawrence and her supporting cast spent a week.

The first day spent at the studio on Universal Heights will be remembered by Miss Lawrence, her director and the company as the hardest day's work they ever accomplished as motion picture personages, according to reports.

Starting in at 9:30 o'clock in the morning the company worked in a stretch until the next morning at 7:30, when Director Paton ordered the carpenters to strike all stage settings.

Cots were set up around the stage to provide for a few moments' rest between takes. Miss Lawrence, her maids and assistant, and Clara Byers were the only women who spent the night working, the rest of the crew being men.

SPECIAL PHOTOPLAY EDITION OF "THE N'ER-DO-WELL"

Harper and Brothers, publishers, have arranged for a special photoplay edition of Rex Beach's "The Ne'er-Do-Well," which was recently filmed by the Selig Polyscope Company.

The book is embellished with scenes from this Selig play. Mr. Selig escorted a special company of players to Panama where true-to-life scenes, as demanded in the action of the novel, were filmed.

Three More Fox Stars to Appear in February

Vivian Martin Will Make Her Debut with the Company in "Merely Mary Ann," Produced by Adolfi, from Play of Same Name, Written by Zangwill and Starring Eleanor Robson

TWO SCORE BATHING GIRLS, MEMBERS OF THE FOX-ANNETTE KELLERMANN COMPANY, LEAVING THE HOTEL AT KINGSTON, JAMAICA

AMONG the new William Fox stars who will be seen in that producer's features during February are Vivian Martin, Maude Gilbert and William H. Tooker, as well as such established favorites as Robert B. Mantell, William Farnum, Genevieve Hamper and Dorothy Bernard.

Vivian Martin will make her debut as a William Fox star on February 6, appearing as Mary Ann in "Merely Mary Ann," in which Eleanor Robson starred successfully, and which is an adaptation of the renowned story by Israel Zangwill.

In the main, the story follows the author's conception. The comedy element is retained, and is registered by Miss Martin, whose buoyant youth lends itself to the character of the English slavey, who, through sheer force of character, fights her way from the role of scullery maid in a cheap boarding house to that of the respected wife of a famous composer.

"Merely Mary Ann" was produced for the screen under the direction of John G. Adolfi, with a cast that included, besides Miss Martin, Harry Hilliard, Laura Lyman, Isabel O'Madigan, Sidney Bracy and Niles Welch.

It is prolific of exceptional scenes that depict in every essential detail an English boarding house of the ten shillings a week type, contrasting those in the home of a wealthy family surrounded by all the magnificence attendant upon social position.

On February 13, Mr. Fox announces the initial release of "Fighting Blood," in which William Farnum is starred, with Dorothy Bernard playing opposite him.

"Fighting Blood" is a virile story of the Kentucky mountains inspired in part by the famous song, "My Old Kentucky Home," written and staged by Oscar C. Apfel, and is the first picture to come from the new Edendale (Cal.) studios. Mr. Farnum will be seen as a fighting parson among the lumberjacks of Kentucky.

The scenes of "Fighting Blood" were filmed in the Rockies, which served as backgrounds for some of the most tense action seen on the screen, and are typical of the early mining days, when every man was a law unto himself and the best fighter was respected by right of might.

In selecting his cast, Director Apfel picked types to conform to the demands of the characters played, assigning Fred Huntley, Henry J. Hebert, H. S. Barrows, Dick Le Strange and Willard Louis to the most important parts subservient to those of Mr. Farnum and Miss Bernard.

"The Fool's Revenge," a story that served such eminent stage players as Edwin Booth, Lawrence Barrett, John McCullough, Edwin Forrest and many prominent stars of a later generation will be the release for February 20, and will introduce two new William Fox players, William H. Tooker, who will be seen as Anson the clown, and Maude Gilbert, his wife.

The story was adapted for the screen by W. S. Davis, under whose direction it was filmed, and employed in its roster of supporting players—Kittens Reichert, Ruth Findlay, Warner Oland and Richard Neal.

The release for February 27 is entitled "The Spider and the Fly," which will present Robert B. Mantell, with Genevieve Hamper, heading an all-star cast, including Stuart Holmes, Claire Whitney, little Jane Lee, Walter Miller, Henry Leone, Genevieve Blinn, Franklin B. Coates and Ethel Bruce.

It was filmed in Kingston, Jamaica, under the direction of J. Gordon Edwards. It strikes straight and true at the very heart of the gilded life that typifies the metropolis of France, with the Hall of Folly a conspicuous centre around which the stirring action revolves.

"The Spider and the Fly" has to do with the curse of drunkenness, the story hinging on the destinies of two men and one woman ruined by drink.

ESSANAY SEARCHES COUNTRY FOR PERIOD FURNITURE

One of the most striking sets ever constructed on the Essanay studio floor is used in "The House of Revelation," a three-act photodrama. The scene is a reproduction of the interior of a castle built in England during the fourteenth century.

It took weeks to search through antique shops in many corners of the United States to obtain furniture of the proper period for use in this set.

CONSTANCE COLLIER AS LADY MACBETH FOR TRIANGLE

In Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree's cast for his Triangle film version of "Macbeth" Constance Collier will be seen as Lady Macbeth.

She has played this part with Sir Herbert in his London seasons and was obtained by arrangement with Oliver Morosco.

The remainder of the company as selected by John Emerson, assigned by David W. Griffith to make the production, includes twelve players who have appeared in Shakespearian roles, all but two having had parts in "Macbeth."

The entire support is drawn from the Griffith permanent forces at the Fine Arts studios. Wilfred Lucas will be the Macduff; Mary Alden, Lady Macduff; Spottiswoode Aitken, Duncan; Ralph Lewis, Banquo; Olga Grey, Lady Agnes, and I. Nowskowski, Malcolm.

Miss Alden and Mr. Aitken will be remembered as having had prominent roles in "The Birth of a Nation." Mr. Lucas has already been seen in several Triangle plays at the Knickerbocker theatre, New York, where the Tree production will be made in the early spring.

McRAE WILL DIRECT TWO-REEL 101 BISONS AT "U" CITY

Abandoning for the time being the plan of touring the Orient, making pictures, Henry McRae is within a few days to commence the production of big, spectacular two reel 101 Bison releases at Universal City.

Thus far no official announcement has been made relative to the cast of players to work in these productions. Marie Walcamp, his former leading woman, has been chosen to play leading feminine roles in McRae's future productions.

As for the rest of the cast, it is likely that Sherman Bainbridge, his former heavy character man, will resume work in the cast. As for the remainder of the company, no definite statement has yet been made.

Regarding the proposed trip to the far East, latest developments indicate that it will be postponed until sometime in the spring.

AVIATOR PETERS AT WORK WITH CAMERA ON "SOUL MARKET"

George W. Peters, who is as well known as a professional aviator as he is as an expert motion picture cameraman, has been engaged by the Popular Plays and Players, and is now at work under Director Francis J. Grandon, doing the camera work on the new Petrova feature, "The Soul Market."

Until recently Mr. Peters was employed by the Keystone company, making their principal comedy films. Before that he worked for the Biograph, Famous Players and Selig companies.

Mr. Peters, who is known as "the flying photographer," was the first man to make motion pictures from an aeroplane. In a forthcoming Metro production Mr. Peters will make a picture of New York by night. He will make a flight over the White Light district, and also along the water front, where he hopes to obtain some novel effects.

BETTY BRIGGS, METRO INGENUE, CHANGES NAME TO EVELYN BRENT

From now on Betty Briggs, the seventeen-year-old ingenue appearing in Metro feature productions, will put aside that perfectly good, but homespun name, for the more euphonius name of Evelyn Brent.

It was so ordained by the young lady herself, when after a brief but successful career in motion pictures, she came into her own with the prominent role of Snowbird, an Indian girl, in support of Edmund Breese in "The Lure of Heart's Desire."

This story of the Alaskan wastes and New York society, has just been completed for Metro by the Popular Plays and Players.

EVELYN BRENT

Less than a year ago Miss Brent was a student in the Training School of the Normal College in New York City. Her folks would not listen to her entreaties to allow her to go on the stage.

So she played hookey one day, and was successful in obtaining a very small part in "The Heart of a Painted Woman," with Mme. Petrova, at the Popular Plays and Players studio. Next she was given a better role at the same studio in "The Shooting of Dan McGrew," with Edmund Breese.

After that she was put under contract with the Popular Plays and Players, and given the big role of Snowbird in the last production. She is to be featured shortly in a big Metro production.

KATHERINE GREY, MANSFIELD'S LEADING WOMAN, A SCREEN DEVOTEE

One of the latest recruits from the speaking stage to the screen is Katherine Grey, formerly a Belasco and Frohman star, who has decided that pictures will be her medium of expression in the future. Miss Grey will bring to the screen an unusual stage experience.

She came from California, and won quick recognition by her performance in "Cyrano de Bergerac," with Richard Mansfield. She remained with Mansfield, playing leading parts opposite him until death cut short his career.

Then she was featured in Belasco's "The First Born," and after that passed to the management of Charles Frohman, appearing in "Business is Business," and co-starring with Nat Goodwin in Alfred Henry Lewis's "Wolfville," in which she played Faro Nell.

She also made a pronounced success in "The Reckoning," after which Mr. Frohman engaged David Graham Phillips to write a play for her. "The Worth of a Woman" was the result, and it was another triumph for Miss Grey. Following her engagement with Frohman, Miss Grey made a tour to Australia, there she remained for three years, appearing as star in "Madame Butterfly," "The Lion and the Mouse," "The Third Degree," "Salvation Nell," and many other plays which are known all over the world.

KATHERINE GREY

Miss Grey is a splendid horsewoman, and a keen devotee of all outdoor sports. She is looking forward with keen anticipation to her future work in motion pictures.

Farnham Will Market Pictures on State Rights Basis

In Addition to Handling "Race Suicide," a Six-Part Photodrama, He Has Entered into Contract with Several Makers to Dispose of Their Output

JOSEPH W. FARNHAM, severing his connection with the Ocean Film Corporation, has established an office at Room 607, 220 West Forty-second street, New York, and will devote his attention to the marketing of features on a state rights basis.

The first of these is "Race Suicide," a six part photoplay which was given its showing to the press, trade and board of censors last week. Mr. Farnham reports that the territory for which application has been made is being disposed of rapidly.

In addition to his handling of "Race Suicide," Mr. Farnham has also entered into contract with several makers of photoplays, which he will market on the state rights basis.

Announcement of these is made by Mr. Farnham through his advertising of the five part production, "The Awakening of Bess Morton," in which Gertrude Bondhill is featured in the leading role.

This production bears the name of Lariat Films, and under that name Mr. Farnham will offer each month to state right buyers a five part picture with Miss Bondhill in the stellar role.

As another department of his enterprise, Mr. Farnham has established a service agency for motion picture advertisers. He begins his efforts in this direction with contracts from seven motion picture manufacturers as advisory directors of advertising and publicity.

He has had experience with advertising agencies, and as advertising manager for several manufacturing companies.

VIRGINIA PEARSON JOINS WILLIAM FOX FORCES

Virginia Pearson, one of the best-known photoplay actresses, has joined the William Fox forces and will be seen shortly in a subject being especially produced for her.

VIRGINIA PEARSON

Miss Pearson, who has just entered the twenties, was born in Louisville, Ky., and is a direct descendant of Daniel Boone. She is noted for her beauty.

LINCOLN COMMUTES FROM NEW YORK TO PHILADELPHIA

E. K. Lincoln, leading man of the Lubin company at Philadelphia, is a reel commuter.

Mr. Lincoln lives in uptown New York, and every morning bright and early he takes a train for the City of Brotherly Love. After a day's work at the studio, Mr. Lincoln journeys back to his home in New York. Each trip consumes two hours, but Mr. Lincoln manages to put the time to good advantage by reading scenarios and revising various parts he has been assigned to play.

General Film Buys Greater New York Film Rental

Demand Upon William Fox for Greater Concentration Upon His Features Leads to Producer's Relinquishment of Regular Service Exchanges—Nine Offices Involved

THE William Fox interests sold this week the Greater New York Film Rental Company to the General Film Company, because of Mr. Fox's decision to abandon altogether the supplying of Regular Service to Exhibitors, and to devote himself entirely to his feature business. Mr. Fox takes this action because of the increasing demands upon his energies in connection with the Fox Features.

It happened that shortly after Mr. Fox had decided to handle features alone, the General Film Company was rearranging some of its distribution methods with a view to securing greater co-operation for the benefit of the exhibitor. Consequently, Mr. Fox's representatives entered into negotiations with the General Film Company, the successful conclusion to which is now announced.

The Greater New York Film Rental Company has offices in Atlanta, Baltimore, Cleveland, Newark, New York, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Scranton and Syracuse. These offices will be combined with the branches of the General Film Company. The purchase means that exhibitors now have greater opportunities of having their needs supplied promptly.

As marking Mr. Fox's entire withdrawal from the distributing of Regular Service a further contract between the General Film Company and Mr. Fox may be instanced. Under the contract which runs for two years the General Film Company will supply service to all of the Fox Circuit of theatres. The contract covers some of the best known and most successful theatres in the city, such as the Academy of Music, 14th street and Irving place, and the City Theatre in 14th street. In all, there are sixteen of the leading theatres of New York, Newark, Springfield, Mass., and New Britain, Conn.

Mr. Fox is known as one of the most astute and far-seeing men in the film industry. He has always exercised the most careful supervision of the programs of his houses of entertainment. Officers of the General Film Company are glad to have their own judgment of the Regular Service confirmed by Mr. Fox.

"Dupester" Brought Within Toils of Law by Essanay

Abraham George Levi Is Fined One Hundred Dollars by Judge Mayer in United States District Court of New York for Duplicating Chaplin Film, "The Champion"

COURT action of great importance and significance to film manufacturers culminated this month when Abraham George Levi pleaded guilty in the United States District Court in New York, to duplicating films. He was fined one hundred dollars and warned that more severe punishment awaits the next offender.

The charge against Levi was violating the copyright law. He has been the object of investigation and prosecution by the Essanay company, for several months. Through exhibitors it was learned that he was "duping" Charlie Chaplin films, and putting them out as original productions.

The Essanay company took vigorous measures in obtaining proof of the charge, and the United States Department of Justice and the Motion Picture Board of Trade interested themselves in the case.

When the trial was called, Assistant United States District Attorney Harold A. Content, Ball and Oldis, attorneys for Essanay, and the Board of Trade had piled up such a complete mass of proof that Levi threw up his hands and pleaded guilty.

He threw himself on the mercy of the court, and Judge Julius Mayer announced that although he would be lenient with Levi, he considered the crime a serious one, and said that all similar offenders are brought before him in the future, they will receive the full measure of the law.

The specific charge against Levi was making duplicates of a Chaplin film called "The Champion." His method was to send to the nearest exchange for a copy of the film, manage to confuse the delivery boy enough to have the film left at Levi's office; then it was rushed to a laboratory, and a negative printed from it, and from these negatives, prints were made as desired.

The Essenay company is now on the trail of several other men accused of similar practices. This is the first case, so far as known, of a film "dupester" being brought into court.

FIVE EXCHANGES IN SYRACUSE, N. Y., TO MOVE ON FEB. 1

V. H. Bendell, formerly with the Exhibitors All Feature Film Company, of Albany, N. Y., has been appointed New York State representative by the Essanay Film Company, of Chicago, and reports a large amount of booking on the new serial "The Strange Case of Mary Page."

Al Sherry, who has been managing the Colonial theatre at Elmira, N. Y., has been appointed Western New York representative of the V-L-S-E.

J. Ross, formerly Western representative of the World Film Corporation, has been appointed to succeed C. G. Briggs as manager of the Exclusive Feature Film Corporation, Syracuse, N. Y.

Charles J. Rose, formerly manager of the Hippodrome theatre, Gloversville, N. Y., has been placed in charge of the Pathé Exchange, Inc., at Rochester, N. Y., and reports a steady increase in business.

Alfred Epstein, manager of the Syracuse, N. Y., office of the Pathé Exchange, Inc., announces that all arrangements have been completed for the removal of the exchange to Albany, N. Y., February 1.

Picture Playhouse Film Company, Inc., United Film Service, the Mutual, Universal and Exclusive in Syracuse, N. Y., have arranged to take over the building now occupied by the Pathé exchange and will remove from the Eckel theatre building, February 1.

ALMA HANLON STARS IN "GOLD AND THE WOMAN," FOX

The latest screen star to sign a contract with William Fox, to appear in feature pictures, is Alma Hanlon, daughter of George Hanlon of the world famous family of acrobats who will be remembered in America especially for their productions of such popular stage successes as "Fantasma," "Superba" and "La Voyage en Suisse."

ALMA HANLON

Miss Hanlon was born in New York City, April 30, 1894, and is the youngest member of a family who, for nine generations, have appeared before the public either on the stage or with a circus.

Her father was born in London, England, as was her mother, who, before her marriage, was Helena Reynolds, member of an old English family. Miss Hanlon's great-great-grandfather was stage manager of Drury Lane theatre when Lord Byron was its director and another Hanlon was stage manager for Edmund Kean.

Miss Hanlon's debut as a William Fox player will be in "Gold and the Woman," in which Theda Bara is being starred under the direction of James Vincent.

Although she had just begun work in the picture, she has already attracted the attention of her director.

FEBRUARY 7 RELEASE DATE OF "THE WOMAN IN 47"

"The Woman in 47," the recently-completed production of the Frohman Amusement Corporation, in which Alice Brady makes her appearance, will be released through the Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation February 7.

"The Woman in Forty Seven," from the pen of Frederick Chapin, was staged under the direction of George Irving and was produced at the Peerless studios, Fort Lee, New Jersey.

In addition to Alice Brady, the cast contains: William Raymond, John Warwick, George D. Mellville, Eric Blind, Lillian Concord, Tom McGrath and Bert Rooney.

HARDY, A 350 HEAVYWEIGHT MAKES LIGHT OF HANDSPRINGS IN VIM COMEDIES

No motion picture comedy company seems quite complete without a fat man. In Vim comedies, "Babe" Hardy, a 350 pound laugh-provoker, fills this role.

One of the few fat comedians who is not burdensome to himself, Hardy can turn handsprings, roll-overs and flipflaps with the agility of the most finished acrobat. While with the Lubin Company his broad laugh and pleasant smile won him many admirers.

Robin Williamson, another recruit from the Lubin forces, has also joined the Vim players. Williamson will take character roles, and his original line of caperings will prove a valuable asset to the Vim contingency.

Herrington Issues Call for Albany Convention

President of National Association Is Anxious for Exhibitors to Make a Strong Showing in New York Capital on March 1-2 to Fight Censor Bills

FRED J. HERRINGTON, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, has issued the following appeal to exhibitors of New York State urging them to attend the State convention at Albany, March 1 and 2 next:

"To the exhibitors of New York:

"It is your duty to arrange to attend the convention at Albany, N. Y., March 1 and 2. As there are many things in the form of unjust legislation to come before the legislators of your State, and as the legislature will be in session at the time of the convention, you owe it to yourself and your business to attend the meeting, and help the organized exhibitors of your state defeat the state censor bill; also the Sunday closing bill.

"Now, if you are not there and those that are not powerful enough to kill the above bills, do not find fault with the lawmakers, or blame them, as it will be your fault. So come to Albany and stand shoulder to shoulder with the men who will be there looking after your best interests.

"If the exhibitors would only attend the convention and stand as a phalanx before the men who make the laws that govern your business and let them know that as an individual you recognize your weakness, but as a united body and backed by the power of your screen, in the future those men will be careful as to the form of legislation they pass.

"But if you are not there do not blame them, the legislators, or the exhibitors who did go and do their part, but blame yourself. And in the future don't ask what good is the League, as your absence from the Albany convention will be proof that the exhibitors' league is doing more for you than you are doing for yourself.

"So make up your mind to be there and let the politicians know that you are alive to your own interests and are only asking for that which is just and right, the same as is conceded to all other legitimate business, and to demand that the picture should should be as free as the press or individual speech.

"In closing, I wish to state there are bills pending before Congress and your strength and action at the New York State convention will have a great effect in determining how Congressmen and the Senators from your state will act on the national legislation. So again, I ask you not to forget the convention at Albany on Wednesday and Thursday, March 1 and 2.

"Yours, for one united organization of exhibitors, I am

"Yours truly,

"FRED J. HERRINGTON,

"President Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America."

Selznick To Produce a "War on War" Series

International Peace Forum Promises Its Aid to World Film Executive—Photoplays Will Be Sermons Against Bloodshed, but Also Interesting as Pictures

SUCH noted persons as Andrew Carnegie, John Hays Hammond, Wu Ting Fang, former President William Howard Taft and other celebrities may appear upon the screen in the near future if the plans of Lewis J. Selznick, vice-president and general manager of the World Film Corporation, to produce a series of feature photoplays bearing the general title of "War on War" bear fruit. John Wesley Hill, D.D., L.L.D., president of the International Peace Forum, of which the noted individuals named are prominent and active members has written Mr. Selznick a letter endorsing in strong terms the motion picture magnate's plan and pledging the willingness of those named to participate as follows:

"I am sure you can count on the cooperation of our members in any way that will aid to make the picture a success. While we do not court personal publicity, there are many of us who would be willing to appear in any serious effort made to promote the cause in which we are interested.

"Aside from the preparation of what we believe will be the most powerful publicity for the public good ever undertaken, as outlined in your plans, the efforts of our organization will, I believe, aid materially in inducing the public universally to visit theatres displaying the 'War on War' pictures."

Speaking of his new project, Mr. Selznick said:

"It is my plan to make the 'War on War' pictures the most powerful ever filmed. The interest displayed by men of the standing and influence of Dr. Hill, evidences in the strongest way the intense interest now felt in this subject, which is uppermost in the world's thought at present.

"My ambition, however, soars even beyond this. I am interested in establishing A World Peace Court and the plots of the pictures to bear the general title of 'War on War' will be so constructed that they will bear directly upon this end ithout conflicting with the powerful drama and scenic splendor of these pictures. In no way do I desire to make the 'War on War' pictures purely specialized propaganda. They must first, last and all the time possess strong interest and thrilling situations; but at the same time they must have a strong and decided bearing upon the end in view which is sufficiently indicated by the title of the series."

It is stated that Mr. Selznick's plans have materialized to such an extent that work will begin almost immediately on the series. Other peace organizations besides the International Peace Forum have taken up the idea with enthusiasm and have promised Mr. Selznick support.

LUBIN BENEFIT SOCIETY HOLDS FIRST ANNUAL MEETING

The first annual meeting of the Lubin Beneficial Association was held Wednesday evening, January 12, in Appolo Hall, Broad street, Philadelphia. Jack Pratt was unanimously elected president; Charles Hyatt, vice-president; Isador Schwartz, re-elected treasurer; Donald Scott, financial secretary, and Cossette Douglass, recording secretary.

BUILDING OFFICIAL MAKES ADDRESS TO EXHIBITORS IN INDIANAPOLIS

Jacob H. Hilkene, commissioner of buildings, of Indianapolis, delivered an address Thursday afternoon, January 20, before the owners of motion picture theatres in Indianapolis, at a meeting of the Indianapolis Motion Picture Exhibitors League, held at the headquarters of the league in the Saks Building.

In his address Mr. Hilkene explained reforms in the business which he said he believed are needed to afford safe and sanitary playhouses for inexpensive entertainments.

Mr. Hilkene predicted, in his address, that the small theatres in stores will disappear entirely in the near future, and that modern and well-equipped playhouses will take their places.

He urged the owners of screen houses to comply with the building code in reference to proper ventilating facilities and exits for use in case of fires.

Grand March Leader of Costume Ball by Contest

Actress Who Wins Most Votes from Readers of New York "American" Will Also Be Awarded a Diamond Studded Bracelet and Be Crowned Queen of Function

THE committee of arrangements of the Movie Costume and Civic Ball, scheduled for February 19 in Madison Square Garden, will present a diamond-studded bracelet to the winner of the popularity contest, conducted by the New York American, to determine which actress shall be crowned queen of the ball and lead the grand march.

Hundreds of actresses have been entered.

The New York American has offered in addition to the diamond-studded bracelet, a number of other prizes.

Cash prizes will also be awarded by the ball committee for the most unique costumes at the ball.

The World Film Corporation, which took the premier honor at the Boston ball last December with Clara Kimball Young, is again in the field with its prize-winning favorite.

Metro Pictures Corporation is represented by Mary Miles Minter, Mme. Olga Petrova and Beverly Bayne.

The Vitagraph star, Anita Stewart is leading the contest, and Lillian Walker and Leah Baird of the same company are not far behind, and Sam Spedon wears his self satisfied smile.

Paramount looks to Mary Pickford to win the contest.

The Triangle feels sure that Mabel Normand will slip into the place without the help of Ford Sterling, but may depend on "Billie" Burke to carry of the first honors.

The Equitable pins its faith on Gail Kane, one of its dashing stars.

Fox Film has a strong candidate in Theda Bara.

The interests of Thanhouser are centered on Florence LaBadie.

The Mutual Corporation have many candidates entered, and their respective companies are working day and night for them to succeed.

The Lubin Girl, Ormi Hawley, has a strong representation of friends who are piling up votes in her behalf.

Pearl White and Ruth Roland of Pathé have their legion of followers. Edison has entrusted its colors to Viola Dana. Biograph is pinning its faith on Claire McDowell. Kathlyn Williams of Selig holds a prominent place in the contest. The Kalem Company not only expects to win the first prize, but also the costume prize with the inimitable "Sis Hopkins," otherwise Rose Melville.

Helen Holmes is "training" daily and is arranging her schedule to be in on time when the prizes are awarded. Essanay feels that it has the Indian Sign on all competitors with Edna Mayo and Ruth Stonehouse.

Metro Pictures Corporation has taken boxes 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 45, 46, 47, 48 and 49. The Mutual Film Corporation has arranged for eight special boxes on the Fourth avenue side. The World and the Equitable have taken boxes 55, 57, 59, 61 and 63. Paramount has six boxes and the Fox Film Corporation have taken three boxes, 39, 41 and 43. The Ivan Film Company has No. 58. V-L-S-E, Vitagraph Lubin, Kalem, Edison, Kleine, Pioneer, Hallberg, Powers, Simplex will also have boxes assigned them by the Committee of Arrangements.

All this enthusiasm and outlook for success is due to the coalition of the forces of the Screen Club and the Motion Picture Exhibitors of Greater New York, and the energetic handling by its officers, the Screen Club represented by its president, Billy Quirk, and the Motion Picture Exhibitors by President Lee A. Ochs.

The arrangements for the ball were left to Jules Burnstein and Samuel H. Trigger, who have appointed the following chairmen for the respective committee:

Arrangements, Samuel H. Trigger and Jules Burnstein; tickets, J. H. Gerhardt and William Hilkemeier; Publicity and Press, Thomas Howard, J. H. Lynch and J. Farnum; printing, Ad Kessel, Jr., and Charles Haring; lighting, Will C. Smith and J. H. Hallberg; music, William McKenna and Gustave Koenigswald; program, Billy Quirk and Thomas Howard; badge, J. H. Gerhardt and Otto Lederer; decorations, Benj. Goetz and Louis Rosenthal; wardrobe and flowers, B. L. Feinblatt; reception, King Baggot and Lee Ochs; floor, Billy Quirk and Isaac Hartstall; master of ceremonies, Thomas Howard; and the Ladies' Reception Committee.

OFFER "NEPTUNE'S DAUGHTER" TO INDIANA AND KENTUCKY

McMahan and Jackson of Cincinnati have just secured Indiana and Kentucky state rights for "Neptune's Daughter," starring Annette Kellermann. They bought the state rights of Ohio for this picture some time ago, and it was shown at Keith's Hippodrome, Cleveland, for two weeks; at the Hartman, Columbus, four weeks; the Victoria, Dayton, two weeks; the Valentine, Toledo, three weeks; and many representative houses in other cities in various parts of the country.

It is expected that Indiana and Kentucky will prove just as successful for McMahan and Jackson as did Ohio. They will do extensive advertising throughout the states, and allow the exhibitor to charge admission prices consistent with the status of his business.

McMahan and Jackson have satisfactory offers for exhibitors on the Kellerman production, which will be furnished upon request of a letter, wire or telephone message.

"HIS WIFE'S DOUBLE" RELEASED AS "THE DEAD ALIVE"

For her first Gaumont picture, Marguerite Courtot will be filmed in "The Dead Alive," written by her director, Henry J. Vernot. This was first announced as "His Wife's Double," but a change in the title has been found necessary.

California Motion to Market by State Rights Method

Beyfuss Announces in Connection with the Exploiting of "The Unwritten Law," That Exceptional Features Should Be Disposed of This Way

THE California Motion Picture Corporation has decided to market its features by the state rights method.

This announcement of new policy was made by Alex E. Beyfuss, the general manager, in connection with the release of "The Unwritten Law," which will be sold by the method named. Mr. Beyfuss, commenting upon the fact that several program companies had offered large sums for "The Unwritten Law," declared that, in his opinion, all superior features will shortly be released through state rights selling.

In support of this belief, Mr. Beyfuss said: "'The Spoilers,' 'The Birth of a Nation,' 'The Battle Cry of Peace,' 'The 'Ne'er-Do-Well,' and other great successes have been released by the state rights method.

"The manufacturer has thus received the greatest returns for his product and has been encouraged to make other pictures that will stand on their own merits.

"We believe that the average feature should be released through the program company. The exceptional feature, however, will earn more money for both exhibitor and manufacturer if it is handled by a state rights buyer who gives his entire attention not only to the selling, advertising and proper presentation, but who is not limited to a fixed price.

"For instance, in San Francisco a certain theatre offered us $1,500 for the first week's showing of one of our features, but because another house had contracted for the program we were releasing on we received only $500 for the same showing and our prestige was not helped any by being in the 'second' theatre.

"On the other hand, the contract rate of our releasing company in certain smaller towns in the South was twenty-five dollars per day, which was more than the drawing power of the picture in that territory warranted. This kept exhibitors from booking the picture.

"Whereas we might have received fifteen dollars per day, we did not get anything in the South. We lost money on the Coast by the price being too low and in the South by the price being too high.

"The California Motion Picture Corporation," continued Mr. Beyfuss, "does not believe the production of quality features is a matter of luck. If a concern starts with a strong story and a properly prepared scenario as the foundation, a director who uses common sense to act as the architect, capable assistants in his camera and laboratory force, and the proper tools, namely, the cast and people who will forget that they pretend, and will live the scenes as in real life—then the production will be successful nine times out of ten."

The directors of the California Motion Picture Corporation, convinced there is a real demand for excellent features, purpose meeting this demand by producing but six pictures a year.

"THE CALL OF THE CUMBERLANDS"

(Pallas-Paramount—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

"A STORY replete with red-blooded action and heart interest," is the way the Pallas press sheet describes Charles Neville Buck's "The Call of the Cumberlands." It is entirely correct, and what is more, it does not exaggerate. This picture is the best that we have seen of the Pallas product, and it can take its place with the foremost Paramount releases.

Dustin Farnum is cast as a swarthy, clean-cut son of the Cumberland mountains, Samson by name. Samson is next in line as leader of a clan that has long been at point of gun with another, but meeting an artist he accompanies him to the city to develop his own talents, leaving behind him his sweetheart, Sally Spicer.

SAMSON PUNISHES THE BULLY

His adventures in New York are some of the most delightful bits the screen has seen. There is nothing more thrilling than to see a husky and clean mountaineer put to rout a band of conspiring politicians by use of his wits and fists, and this Dustin Farnum does as Charles Neville Buck's Samson.

The series of scenes in which the Kentuckian accomplishes this are arranged in a style that is tremendously effective. Close-ups, interspersed with full settings, bring out the dramatic possibilities of the situation to wonderful advantage.

But Samson's advantures in the city consist of more than this. Raw and uncouth when he arrives to study art, he comes under the tutelage of Adrienne Lescott, the artist's sister, and his slow transformation to a man accustomed to society presents a humorous side to the story that will heartily amuse.

Samson progresses rapidly in art. He paints well and so does every one of the students, a fact that is convincingly established by showing them at work on canvases that look like paintings and not the drawings of the property boy. We might also remark that Samson and his fellow students draw from the nude.

However, for all the city and his triumphs therein, Samson heeds the call of his mountain home and returns to lead his clan against the opposing faction and to marry the girl that had been faithful to him through his long absence, thus completing a story that contains not a foot of padding and one that thrills every minute of the time.

Dustin Farnum plays Samson to a degree reaching perfection. He is always in his part and attracts admiration because of his build, his personality and his actions. Winifred Kingston makes a lively and sympathetic character of Sally. Myrtle Stedman as Adrienne is attractive because of her contrasting character. Herbert Standing gives a sterling characterization of Samson's uncle, while others are Page Peters, Hoard Davies, Dick Le Strange, Joe Ray and Virginia Foltz.

The scenes and photography are absolutely faultless. The mountain scenes are wonderful and the photography excellent. The city scenes have been attended to in a corresponding manner.

"A KNIGHT OF THE RANGE"

(Red Feather-Universal—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

REAL Western stuff predominates in this picture. It has marvelous riding, falling, and various trick stunts that have the effect of chasing one's heart up around one's Adam's apple.

There is no society life portrayed—the city in any of its phases has no part in the picture. "The Knight of the Range" was made out in the open, where one can see nothing but mountains and plains for miles around, where no skyscraper or chimney jars the harmony of nature's sky line.

And appropriately enough the story written by Harry Carey fits its surroundings to perfection. It commences with the love affair of Bess Dawson and Bob Graham. Bob is a weakling, and Gentleman Dick, a gambler, plans his downfall because he loves Bess himself.

But there is Cheyenne Harry, another lover of the girl who, because he thinks so much of her, does all he can to help Bob. He even takes the blame when he holds up the stage, but the truth leaks out. But shows his real character when he tries to incriminate Harry before Bess and then he is forced to flee the posse. In a fight he is killed, and Bess discovers she really loves Cheyenne Harry.

Thus has Harry Carey dealt with a difficult story. A fourth person added to the eternal triangle presents, as we have said before, a most difficult problem, but here the situation is handled with clarity every inch of the way. And here, incidentally, that fourth character, Cheyenne Harry, is cast in the mold of an ideal Westerner—romantic and fearless.

Harry Carey is typical of this part, and those familiar with his performances can well imagine how well he plays it. Olive Fuller Golden as Bess, Hoot Gibson as Bob and William Canfield as Gentleman Dick are chief in the support, while Peggy Coudray, Bud Osborne, A. D. Blake, Bill Gettinger and a formidable collection of fearless roughriders complete the cast.

The direction of Jacques Jaccard is averagely good. There are a few slips here and there, but they are insignificant when compared with the thrilling stunts performed by the horsemen.

Briefly, for a thrilling Western, "A Knight of the Range" fills the bill to a degree of satisfaction that would be hard to surpass.

"THE IDOL OF THE STAGE"

(Gaumont-Mutual Masterpicture—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

A WHOLE lot of things in this subject are hard to believe, and others are presented in an unconvincing manner, but it touches upon a phase of life which is of general interest, and there should be a fairly wide field for the picture.

It was written by Paul Bryan and directed by Richard Garrick, who himself plays one of the parts, and at that is one of the most capable actors in the cast.

The picture starts with a break between Philip Van Kortland and his father, the elder man, a proud old "Knickerbocker," objects to his son working as an actor, but the youth keeps on and becomes a great matinee idol.

He meets and marries the daughter of his father's old friend, although he is appearing professionally under another name, and none of the parties seem to know of the family connections.

THE SCORNED WOMAN'S REVENGE

While his wife is ill, the actor takes a prescription which will enable him to sleep, and through it becomes addicted to opium; later, while playing in stock, he becomes acquainted with another girl, who meets him in the opium den, and gives him a ring.

He returns to his wife, and the girl, furious at being deserted, brings a charge of theft against the actor. He pleads guilty, in order to shield the girl, and goes to a convict camp, where he is held until the doctor can cure him of the drug habit.

A "trusty" sees and covets the actor's wife, but she repulses her; thereupon the villain compromises the woman, and when the husband is released, reports turn him against her.

He gives up the stage and goes back to his father, becoming associated with him in business. Then he becomes the friend of a particularly bright newsboy. He is summoned by the boy, one night, to come to the aid of his mother, who is being attacked by a "strange man."

The two Van Kortlands rush to the spot and find the woman is the actor's wife, and the intruder is the "trusty" who has ruined her reputation. A policeman shoots the "trusty" who confesses with his dying breath that the woman is innocent.

"VENGEANCE IS MINE"

(Horsley-Mutual Masterpicture—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THIS picture, written and played by Crane Wilbur, is of the Crane Wilbur type. We trust this will not be misunderstood. Those who like Crane Wilbur and his school are legion; in fact, upon their patronage many an exhibitor has built a neat fortune. This subject should hit the Crane Wilbur-going public squarely between the eyes.

Mr. Wilbur apparently has had his own way throughout the picture. His friends will find him waiting on every corner, and daring and doing at every opportunity; there is no doubt they will like this, and will gladly give up big handfuls of nickels and dimes to see it.

There is a girl (played by Gypsy Abbott, a capable actress and sympathetic figure) who is placed in a compromising position through no fault of her own, by the handsome young villain.

She frees herself of him, however, but not until he has obtained a leaf from the hotel register, containing their names, and later she meets John Loring, youthful candidate for governor. They are married, and Loring is elected.

He takes his brother along as Secretary, and the brother is in the house when the villain returns with the page from the hotel register to blackmail the governor's wife; the brother follows the wife to the blackmailer's apartments, and there is a scuffle, in which the girl shoots and kills the villain. She escapes, the brother takes the blame and is condemned to death.

At the last moment the wife confesses. The Governor, who has refused to pardon his brother, hurries to the prison in an automobile (covering 130 miles in two hours) and stops the execution as the electrician's hand is on the switch. Then he resigns his office, and with his brother and wife sails away to begin life anew.

There is no stultification in the production of the piece. Mr. Horsely believes in thoroughness in this line, and Robert Broadwell, his director, has gone to great lengths and has made several striking and interesting scenes. One of these is the death chamber, others are street scenes, the lawn and exterior of the Governor's mansion.

Assisting the star in the cast are Carl Von Schiller, Brooklyn Keller, William Jackson, A. B. Ellis, and the Gypsy Abbott above mentioned. All acquit themselves with considerable credit.

LOOKING AT SCENES FROM "HAZEL KIRKE" AND "NEW YORK," TWO FORTHCOMING PATHÉ PHOTOPLAYS

"THE LOVE TRAIL"

(Pathé Gold Rooster—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

AN English story, made in England from an English novel, this picture has an atmosphere different from that of the usual feature offering. Although made in England, the scenes are laid in the veldt of South Africa.

The story was published in book form under the name of "The Dop Doctor," by Richard Dehan, and has had a remarkable sale throughout England and all the British colonies. It concerns the life of Boers and English during the Boer war, and is of very strong dramatic quality.

Among other things, "The Love Trail" serves to introduce to the American public an unusually pretty girl, who is a capable and sympathetic actress, and should win great popularity on this side of the ocean. She is Agnes Glynne, already well known as a film star in England.

Miss Glynne portrays the daughter of Lord Mildare, an English nobleman, who with his wife, died some years before in South Africa, leaving Lynette, the girl, a helpless orphan. She falls into the hands of Bough, a cruel Boer, who brings her up as his slave.

When she reaches the bloom of womanhood, Bough looks on her with more covetous eyes. He dresses her in his wife's best, and puts her in his wife's place, but she escapes and flees across the fields. Bough pursues on horseback, captures her, ties a rope around her wrists, and drags her behind his horse until she is unconscious.

There she is found by a travelling band of Sisters of Mercy; they care for her, and when war comes to the country she is at the front with the Sisters, acting as nurse.

There she meets and falls in love with Lord Beauvayse, who obtains the consent of the Sisters to his marriage. The announcement is a terrible blow to one Owen Saxham, whose love for the girl has raised him from the depths of drunkenness and squalor, to his former position, a respected physician.

Saxham saves the girl from falling again into the clutches of Bough, who has made his way through the British lines, and is about to leave her, when it is discovered that Beauvayse is already married. The situation is cleared when Beauvayse is killed in action, leaving Saxham free to press his attentions to Lynette; he is successful.

With Miss Glynne, Fred Paul and Booth Conway make very acceptable portrayals of difficult characters, the former as Saxham, and the latter as Bough, the brutal Boer.

"INBAD THE SAILOR"

(Bray-Gilbert-Paramount—One Reel)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THIS is the first of a series of new fantasies being produced by the Bray-Gilbert studios for release on the Paramount program. The subjects are a combination of animated cartoons, drawn in silhouette by C. Allan Gilbert, and action by live actors.

The two are joined cleverly, and it is often difficult to tell just where the drawing stops and the live action begins. The subjects are one of the few absolute novelties being offered to the motion picture public today.

The first number shows Inbad the sailor, shipwrecked on our old friend, the desert isle. He finds a buried treasure, which includes a magic ring. Rubbing this, he summons a genie, who grants him four wishes. Thus Inbad finds himself on a magic carpet, with an attendant, and the two fly away to the Bagdad of "Arabian Nights" fame.

There the Sultan offers Inbad his daughter's hand in marriage, if the sailor will recover a precious pearl which has been swallowed by a dragon. Inbad gets the pearl, but the girl, when introduced, is not up to contract. He gets the pearl back and flies away on the carpet to New York, where a pawnbroker tells him the pearl is only a piece of glass.

INBAD SEES HIS REWARD

In his anger he smashes the pearl, the genie reappears and takes away the magic carpet, turns the attendant into a monkey, and leaves Inbad deserted and forlorn.

There is the charm of magic about the transformations and airy fantasy of the production, and it should have a strong appeal to children of all ages, from five to fifty.

"GODS OF FATE"

(Lubin-V-L-S-E—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPER

TWO remarkably realistic scenes, a factory fire and a head-on train collision, feature this production of a story by Daniel Carson Goodman. The first of these is so successful a fire that it reminds one of views he has seen in news weeklies. It has none of the earmarks of a stage conflagration. And Director Jack Pratt utilized to the fullest his opportunities for showing all the incidents attendant upon a big fire.

In the collision, a freight and a passenger train crash into each other at full speed. The spectator holds his breath as he sees the engines reduced to flinders, and a car catapulted clear over the mass of wreckage.

These two incidents are worked skillfully into a plot which hinges upon the theft of an invention, the adoption of the dead inventor's daughter by the thief, the love of the thief's good son for his foster sister, and the villainy of the thief's erring son, who sets the switch that brings the collision. Except for the earlier part of the action, which drags, the piece holds the interest well.

At the head of the cast are Rosetta Brice and Richard Buhler, the lovers. William H. Turner appears as the thief, Francis Joyner as the unfortunate inventor, Inez Buck as the thief's wife, and Arthur Housman in a fine characterization of the villain. Buhler and Miss Brice carry their parts convincingly, and the rest of the cast is entirely adequate.

Many of the settings are interesting in themselves: The picture opens with two or three views of the interior of an iron works; later a signal tower in operation is shown; and the atmosphere of life among the laboring classes is gained successfully.

Because of its story, its acting, and particularly because of its two big "punches," "Gods of Fate" will find favor.

"THE ISLAND OF SURPRISE"

(Vitagraph—V-L-S-E—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

THERE is much that is novel, much that is attractive and absorbing in this new story by Cyrus Townsend Brady. The situations are a trifle old—in fact, Dr. Brady has used them himself before, but he has created a new atmosphere and a new plane of interest in this case.

To sum it up, the picture is one which will attract and hold the interest of the average audience, and will repay them with a number of thrills and surprises.

Great care has evidently been expended on the production. There is an unusually large number of striking outdoor scenes, and the sweeps of ocean beach, and rugged coast are inviting. The aid of a large private yacht and a U. S. torpedo boat destroyer has been called in, and the firing by the destroyer on a band of natives ashore is effective.

The trouble is caused by the secret marriage of Robert Lovell to Miss Arden, his father's secretary. Later the elder Lovell is ordered to take a sea voyage by his physician, and he sends his son to Chicago to invite Casselis, a friend, and his daughter Dorothy to accompany them on the cruise. The secret bride, failing to understand the mission, is worried, and a coolness springs up between the pair on the cruise.

Robert, to make his wife jealous, pretends interest in Miss

THE ATTACK BY SAVAGES

Casselis, who falls in love with him. With the two girls, he is marooned on a South Pacific island, while a storm carries the yacht out to sea. A stroke of lightning deprives him of his memory, and he cannot remember either of the girls. Miss Arden for the first time, announces that she is his wife, but the other girl thinks it only a subterfuge, and announces that she is the real wife.

Then the party is attacked by natives, and is rescued when the yacht returning, summons the aid of a destroyer which is in the vicinity. A blow from a native's spear restores Robert's memory and he recalls his marriage to Miss Arden. Everybody is pleased with the ending of events.

The cast has been carefully selected and is without exception capable. Eleanor Woodruff, William Courtenay, Charles Kent, Anders Randolf, Charles Wellesley, Denton Vane, Zena Keefe, Julia Swayne Gordon and Logan Paul are among those who appear. The picture was produced by Paul Scardon.

"RACE SUICIDE"

(Joseph W. Farnham—Six Reels)

REVIEWED BY PETER MILNE

THIS offering deals in a more or less definite way with the problem presented in the title, carrying it through several ages of the world. Consequently, it is in as many distinct episodes, five to be exact, ranging from the prehistoric and the animal forms of life to the present time.

Race suicide is generally interpreted as an illegitimate medical practice that results in the decrease of the birth rate. "Race Suicide" as a picture takes a different attitude toward the situation.

As defined here it means the desertion of children by their parents, in one instance the voluntary slaughter of an infant, or the prevention of a child's birth through force of circumstance.

For example, In the Stone Age, the disgruntled and defeated suitor for the hand of the prehistoric maiden murders her child by the accepted suitor, being unable and unwilling to control his anger.

In the Roman Age there is a warrior wandering about the country who meets a shepherdess. An illegitimate offspring is the result. The girl leaves it with her former lover and seeks its father. She finds him in the arms of another woman and sorrowfully she returns. Her last act is to save her child from a venomous snake to die from its sting herself.

The Elizabethan period is next. A son follows his father's footsteps and is a useless rounder, until war is declared. In battle he is killed.

The present story deals with a couple, the man of which refuses to allow his wife a child because of their poverty. When riches are gained he is willing, but it is too late, for as the result of an automobile accident the wife is forever unable to fulfill her duty to the world and grant her heart's desire.

A tribute to "Mother" closes the picture. In fact each episode glorifies "Mother," and consequently it is sympathetically pleasing in its own tragic way.

The production has been well directed. The atmosphere of each period introduced is convincing. The costumes and actions of the characters never betray modernism save where intended. The photography throughout is clear and distinct; the scenes are always appropriate, while in some instances they are unusually pleasing.

Preceding the story laid in the Stone Age, there are a number of scenes occupying more than a reel, dealing with animal life, drawing a comparison between spiders, snakes, birds, and four-footed creatures and the human being.

These scenes are very interesting in an educational way, but the picture aims to show that even spiders, snakes and the like desert their young, leaving them in some instances to come into the world unprotected.

Animals, we believe, should not be cast in such a detrimental light. They, contrary to the human, are not going against the laws of nature, they are merely fulfilling them.

The subtitles of "Race Suicide" are in many instances written in a style that is somewhat sensational and they are always frank. As a picture it deserves comment chiefly because it defines race suicide in a new way and because it glorifies motherhood.

The cast remains the same for each episode, Ormi Hawley, Earl Metcalfe, Kempton Greene, Herbert Fortier and Octavia Handworth always carrying the principal parts.

SOUTHERN FILMS IS ORGANIZED AND WILL SPEND $25,000 ON STUDIO NEAR NEW ORLEANS

New Orleans, Jan. 22.

THE Southern Film Corporation has been organized and chartered at Biloxi, Miss., a short distance from New Orleans, with a capital stock of $100,000. It will manufacture moving picture films. Leading business men of Mississippi on the gulf coast and in Jackson, the state capital, are interested in the corporation.

The company has leased property at Sunkist Place, nine miles from Biloxi, where a studio will be erected.

D. W. McKinney, of Chicago, is a director and has been appointed manager for the company. The office of the company will be in Biloxi.

It is the intention of the company, it is stated, to expend $18,000 to $25,000 during the next few months in the erection of its studio and equipment.

This is the second moving picture project on the Mississippi gulf coast. The Dixie Film Manufacturing Company established in Biloxi a year ago, but was unsuccessful.

shown swimming about among the creatures of the deep. This is only one of the many difficulties he meets in the effort to win a ten thousand dollar bet by motoring from New York to Florida before his rival gets there, the agreement being that the contestants must ride into Florida on four wheels, but not on rails.

At one point in the journey, the recalcitrant Ford is in need of water, but there is no water at hand (that comes later). So Mr. Betts (Hitchcock) milks a nearby cow, pours the milk into the machine, and soon discovers that it isn't a Ford, but a churn.

Finally, the car goes completely out of commission, and Betts, living up to the letter of the wager, rides triumphantly over the Florida line in a baby carriage, from which he had lifted a pickaninny a few minutes before.

Members of the supporting cast, who form a background for the star, are Jack Henderson, Marion Sunshine, Clarence Preston, Julia Widlow, Bernard Siegel, and Wiley Helston. Rene Plaisetty directed, and succeeded in providing all needed opportunities for the star to shine. The stunts are managed very cleverly, and this is due in large part to the director's ingenuity.

The story is negligible. As a whole "The Wonderful Wager" is a one-actor picture.

"THE WRITING ON THE WALL"

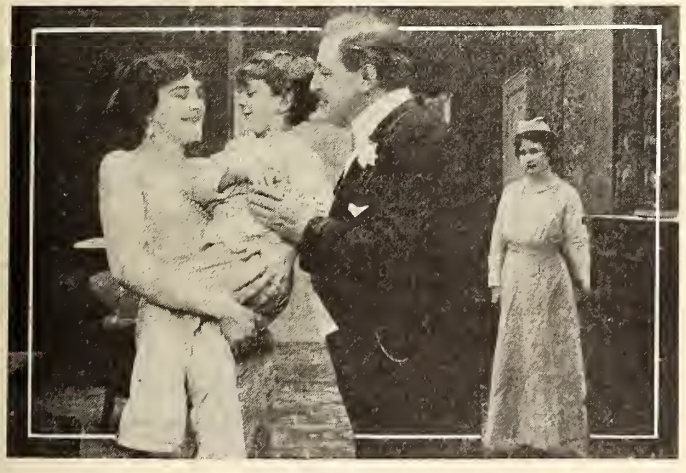
(Vitagraph Blue Ribbon—V-L-S-E—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY OSCAR COOPLR

THIS is a screen version of the stage play of the same name by William J. Hurlbut, and combines a sermon against the tenement evil with the exploits of a faithless husband. In the end, the two threads of action are bound together by the death of the husband in a fire which destroys one of his tenements.

Like a good many other picturizations of stage plays, "The Writing on the Wall" relies for much of its effect upon subtitles. These are well managed and contribute vastly to the picture's grasp upon the spectator.

Tefft Johnson, the director, has provided also a realistic fire scene, showing women and children caught in a crowded structure, which at the denouement crashes to the ground.



BEFORE THE TRAGEDY

A good cast interprets the story. It is headed by Joseph Kilgour, as the tenement owner, and Virginia Pearson, as his wife. Robert Gaillard appears as a social uplifter; Naomi Childers, as a woman of the tenement owner's past who marries his brother-in-law; Charles Wellesley, as a devoted husband; Bobby Connelly, as the tenement owner's young son who is rescued from the fire; George Stevens, as a private secretary; Josephine Earle, as an adventuress; and Mabel Kelly as a nurse.

The acting is not brilliant, but it is acceptable. All the principals are experienced screen players, and their work in this subject does not differ greatly from their work in other Vitagraph releases, with which exhibitors are thoroughly familiar.

Screen requirements have been met in good style by Director Johnson, and Marguerite Bertsch, the scenario maker. The story carries considerable complication and fits five reels much better than some other adaptations from the stage.

There is but little padding. The plot is kept moving rapidly enough to maintain interest; and more than once interest tightens, and the spectator is keen to see what will happen to the characters. The atmosphere of suspense is created chiefly by the skillful management of parallel action.

The story itself contains a good deal of what is usually called human interest. This fact has much to do with making the whole an acceptable photoplay.

"A MODERN ENOCH ARDEN"

(Triangle-Keystone—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM RESSMAN ANDREWS

IN all the years that Tennyson's Enoch Arden roamed up and down the world—if that's what he did while away from wifie—he certainly never had anything like the adventures of Keystone's Arden. The screen Enoch is so busy getting shipwrecked, saving children from explosions on motor boats and going through other stunts equally strenuous he just don't have time to think of the poor wife at home.

The trouble all starts with a notification from a lawyer of a legacy which the hero must collect in Australia. So off he goes, leaving his wife at the dock bidding him good-bye as the ship steams away with an officious escort who has an eye for a pretty woman, comforting her tenderly before his very eyes.

This is the first shock—after learning that he had fallen heir to a fortune. He gets another when a typhoon strikes the ship and sends it to the bottom.

He is the only one saved, and on being rescued by a sailing craft he almost wishes he had gone to the bottom too, when he finds out that it is a whaler on a four years' cruise, and he must wait that long before getting the money.

While the captain was a humane man and believed in keeping as many people from a watery grave as was in his power, his practical spirit prevented him from seeing why anybody should be kept aboard his ship without making himself useful.

So the skipper proceeds to make a sailorman of the newcomer, who is compelled to go aloft and "learn the ropes."

Enoch learns more about the ropes than he wants to—and a good many other things before the picture comes to a close, including the wily ways of a grafting lawyer with designs on the fortune.

The whole picture is a succession of mirth provoking incidents furnishing excellent opportunities for burlesque by a capable cast, comprising Joe Jackson as the lazy husband, Miss Edwards as his wife, Mack Swain as their lawyer, Dora Rogers as a Vampire, and Hank Mann as a tricky lawyer.

"THE BIRTH OF A MAN"

(Celebrated Players—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY 2nd

THIS picture was made some time ago by the Horkheimers, and is now for the first time being released. Practically every foot of the film is dominated by the compelling personality of Henry B. Walthall. While the subordinate (and they are always subordinate) characters may be colorless marionettes, the sheer magnificence of Walthall's talent sweeps the story along with resistless power.

The story is as adroitly adapted to exploit the star as one of John Drew's vehicles is suited to him. It's a pretty usual kind of plot, but one that permits characterizations of startling vividness.

Most of the spectacular, often melodramatic, situations are well handled by the director, but here again Walthall must take the lion's share of the credit.

A young millionaire is self-centered, selfish, and cruel. On this account his sweetheart will not accept him. In trying to overtake a train, he charters a taxicab, but falls into the hands of some crooks who take him to a lonely barn, rob him, beat him senseless, and set the barn on fire.

He manages to escape, but with a disfigured face, gray hair, and tattered clothes. Without money, he finds life a very serious affair, and it is only after the most trying experiences that he finally identifies himself, and is restored to his former position.

This experience sweetens his nature, makes him forget his arrogance, and wins for him the love of the girl.

"THE INNOCENCE OF RUTH"

(Kleine-Edison—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY HARVEY F. THEW

VIOLA DANA, alone, is generally sufficient to carry most any picture; this is a lot to say about any person, especially one as small as Miss Dana, but her ways are all her own, and her admirers are numbered by thousands.

Without any especial opportunity having been given her by the technical construction of this piece, she distinguishes herself, and has created a very appealing and sympathetic character.

She appears as the young and innocent daughter of a financier, who has been ruined in the "Street" by one Mortimer Reynolds; the shock is too much for him, and he dies, after confiding Ruth to the care of Jimmy Carter, a young millionaire idler.

Reynolds, aided by his mistress, Edna, pursues Ruth, and Edna manages to put into the girl's mind the idea that her position in Carter's home is compromising. She flees, and takes refuge with Edna, who is compelled to leave her to the mercies of the unscrupulous Reynolds.

Carter seeks her, and in the meantime finds that Reynolds, in a financial extremity, has forged his name to some bonds. He goes to Reynold's home, and there finds Ruth in the clutches of the libertine.

Reynolds stuns Carter with a blow from a vase and escapes. There Carter is found, and Ruth, when she recovers from the swoon into which she fell when Reynolds attacked her, assists him, and summons help.

Carter is taken back to his home; detectives watching the office, surround Reynolds, and he is shot. Ruth goes back to Carter's home, and there they both realize that they have loved each other from the first. The ingenuous character of Ruth as portrayed by Miss Dana is effective, and will appeal to the sympathies strongly. Edwards Earle does some good work as Carter, and Augustus Phillips is a good villain as Reynolds.

Especially elaborate has been the production. Scenes in Wall Street and the brokers' offices; the interiors of gaudy restaurants and the home of Carter are especially well set.

Lena Davril and T. Tamamoto are also in the cast, the former as Edna Morris, and the latter as Carter's man-servant.

"DIAMONDS ARE TRUMPS"

(Selig—Three Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY 2nd

ONE of the hardest kinds of picture to put over effectively is the mystery-detective variety. While this is not an extraordinary specimen of this type of picture, yet there are many original touches that put it in a class above the average.

Robert Daly, the director, got in some telling bits, and the trio of leads, Fritzi Brunette, Earle Foxe, and Edward Piel, are consistently good. While a few more subtitles might be advisable, the story for the most part is easily understood.

Roth, a clever crook, is being carefully watched by Roach, a detective. Roth his smuggled a vast quantity of diamonds over the border by concealing them in cartridges.

Kitty Randolph, Roach's fiancee, volunteers to help him, and succeeds in making Roth fall in love with her. Suspecting that he is being watched, the smuggler gives several gems to Kitty, and asks her to get them across the border. This she does by hiding them in a piccolo.

When Roth asks her for the jewelry, she refuses to give it up, and the crook is about to kill her, when Roach enters the room. After a desperate struggle, he succeeds in overpowering Roth, and puts him under arrest.

Others in the cast are Lillian Hayward, Frank Clark, and William Hutchinson.

"THE WHITE ROSETTE"

(American-Mutual Masterpicture DeLuxe—Five Reels)

REVIEWED BY WILLIAM C. ESTY 2nd

IT is a common experience to see film players appearing one week as prehistoric savages and the next as cabaret patrons, but you don't often see them in medieval armor and Lucille clothes in the same feature. This anachronism is made possible by reincarnation, but it isn't necessary to believe in the transmigration of souls to enjoy the picture.

The "papers" figure prominently in the story, which is, for the most part, familiar. The work of E. Forrest Taylor, Helene Rosson, Harry Von Meter, and Eugenie Forde is of good quality. Some of the settings are unusually elaborate. The tinting, toning and photography are really masterly.

The first reel tells a story of medieval times. The bold knight is trying to win his lady, is opposed by a powerful baron and a woman of high estate who loves him. These two conspirators finally cause him to accidentally kill his beloved.

Next the same characters are seen in modern times, and the same relationships still hold. The villain is trying to undo the hero by obtaining control of a railroad by duping him.

The scheming woman is trying to compromise him into marrying her. But the hero this time avoids their traps, and a happy ending is finally achieved.

PITTSBURGHERS EXPECT AN ATTENDANCE OF 6,000 AT THEIR BALL ON FEB. 14

THE one subject on the lips of the motion picture men of the Pittsburgh section is the coming ball of the Pittsburgh Screen Club, which is to be held on the evening of February 14 in Motor Square Garden in the East Liberty district.

The motion picture men selected for places on the various committees are as follows:

Committee on Concessions: M. Feitler, D. Simon, M. J. C. Kornblum, C. W. Eckhardt, Charles Seltzer and N. I. Eirick.

Entertainment Committee: Charles Seltzer, G. E. Ainsworth, C. W. Eckhardt, A. W. Cross and John McAleer.

Reception Committee: P. Antinopolis, I. Aronson, H. Goldberg, H. C. Simeral, Louis Sitnek, M. Feitler, John Smith, J. G. Long, W. A. Kay, H. C. Grelle, M. Teplitz and R. Solz.

Publicity Committee: A. W. Cross, M. J. C. Kornblum and C. B. Nelson.

Already the space for concessions has been taken and the other committees are rapidly completing their plans for the ball.

WEAKNESS OF CENSOR LAW MADE APPARENT TO HOUSE COMMITTEE BY BOARD OF TRADE

New York unless approved by the Federal Motion Picture Censorship Board.' The whole expense, the whole trouble would be eliminated. What would be true of New York would be true of other states."

The next orator was Howard Clarke Barber, superintendent of the Society for the Prevention of Crime, who intimated that censor boards would be more competent to deal with the subject than would a judge and jury. His remarks were ridiculed to no little extent by Congressmen Platt and Dallinger who interposed a number of questions.

He was told by Mr. Platt that apparently the churches desired everything cut out of the films that would show drinking, even of water, and would confine them to the showing of the building of bridges, etc., while Mr. Dallinger asked him if he would make any distinction between what is proper in books and newspapers, plays in the theatre and motion pictures for grown-ups and those not proper for children.

He replied to the latter by stating that he thought there is a marked distinction and he thought that would work out of itself—there would be theatres where it would not occur to anybody to take a child and that might not be because there was anything immoral about the productions.

But, he said, we have certainty that it will be worked out in that way and there is the possibility that a large amount of harm may be done.

Mr. Binder had placed in the record 252 letters and telegrams in opposition to the bill from newspapers, well-known authors, and others of prominence.

He introduced the Rt. Rev. Dr. Shields, of the Catholic University of America, president of the Catholic Educational Press, who said that the evil in motion pictures had constantly diminished in the past ten years at a greater rate than anything he could think of.

"I do not know of anything that has gained in respectability, as a power for good, at the same rate that motion pictures have. There is still some degree of evil, which everybody deplores, but it has been shown that this can be remedied.

"You should not sacrifice personal liberty; take away government for the people by the people and substitute the conscience of five people for the conscience of the nation."

Frank W. Persons, director of the Charity Organization Society, of New York, told of the activities of the National Board of Censorship, and he asked if there were five people in the room who would volunteer to sit in judgment, conclusively and finally, of every foot of film to be shown in this year, 1916, when they would realize that in so doing they would be passing upon an industry having an annual income of $350,000,000.

He asked if there were five men who would have the moral hardihood as to determine what is fit to be shown to free American citizens.

Editor of Religious Paper Against Censorship

Alonzo T. Jones, editor and publisher of Religious Liberty, and John B. Bradley, president of the Washington Secular League, also appeared in opposition to the bill declaring that it contemplated a curtailment of personal rights and liberty.

Remarks against the bill by Fulton Brylawski closed the hearing.

The final hearing of the week Wednesday evening was full of surprises for both factions in the fight, and the moving picture men found themselves facing questions hard to answer.

Mr. Binder opened the evening with the submission of another batch of protests against the bill, and introduced Granville S. McFarland, editor of the Boston American, who told of a little conversation in which he had figured.

The other members of the party were Willis J. Abbott, of New York, and Congressman Dorsey W. Shackleford, of Missouri, who is known to be against the proposed preparedness program. Mr. Shackleford declared that the bill ought to become a law because, he said, Congress would be enabled to osuppress such plays as "The Battle Cry of Peace," that film having a tendency to incite militarism.

"That indicates the danger of this bill," said Mr. McFarland. "It shows that in the judgment and experience of a public man, who has been in Congress for twenty years, five men should have the arbitrary power to put down such a film as this."

We'd Like to Know

Ben S. Meyer, Manager of the Queen Theatre, Tyler, Texas, writes us as follows:

"I have found your reviews most dependable whether the manufacturer was a heavy advertiser in your columns or not at all and I think exhibitors generally will laud you for that."

Mr. Meyer says other things in the same connection of a comparative nature and very much in favor of Motion Picture News and its reviewing policy. These involve another publication and we do not care to publish them.

The point is that Motion Picture News reviews are wholly independent. We believe that every exhibitor thinks as Mr. Meyer does. We have many letters to this effect. We would like to hear from any exhibitor who has reason to believe otherwise. We will publish his letter.

Also, our reviews are written by experts, picked men who do nothing else, who see every picture, and who constantly confer over their daily work.

We do not claim that Motion Picture News reviews are infallible guides always for all theatres. We don't believe any reviews from any one man or set of men are or can be.

But we do know that our reviews are strictly independent and we don't know of any that are better.

Write us what you think.

He declared that the committee should not give serious thought to a bill which menaced free speech and a free press.

Congressman Rucker came to the rescue of his colleague with the statement that while he did not doubt the veracity of Mr. McFarland's statement, but he regretted that the incident had been made a matter of record at this time.

President Herrington was given an opportunity of adding to the testimony which he had offered on Saturday evening. He told the Committee of the number of theatres that were now empty in Pennsylvania, the cause for which in part was the censorship which prohibited the exhibitors from getting films that their patrons desired.

He said that this fact was causing complaint from the theatre-goers that the pictures now-adays are not as good as they formerly were and the people are adopting other forms of amusement.

John R. Freuler, president of the Mutual Film Corporation, told of the growth of the industry from the time he started in business fifteen years ago.

"The measure which this committee has before it," said Mr. Freuler, "would impose some impossible conditions on the motion picture industry, aside from the big general question of right and justice. For instance (lines 7, 8 and 9 on page 30), it stipulates that the censorship commission 'may license any film, subject to such excisions, amplifications or alterations as the commission may direct or require to be made.'

"'Amplification' of a scene or any part of a picture might easily be impossible. Motion pictures frequently utilize events and accidental scenes impossible of reproduction subsequently.

"There is serious conflict in the provisions limiting the cost of the commission to $40,000 a year and the provisions fixing a fee of one dollar for examination by the commission of each film of 1,000 feet or less, and fifty cents for each film which is a duplicate of any film which has been licensed. Further the word film is not defined. Some of our film releases measure 500 feet, while we have had one which totals 60,000 feet.

"This bill would also create an army of 'deputy censors,' and that suggests the extreme probability of another federal patronage machine, with unlimited powers for harm. In this connection I recall the game wardens of Wisconsin, as appointed under that remarkable law that loaded the payrolls with useless officials.

"We do not ask for license. We are willing to submit to regulation, but only such regulation as that to which other forms of publication are now subjected."

MUTUAL MASTERPICTURES
DE LUXE EDITION

THE five reel David Horsley productions released as Mutual Masterpictures, de luxe edition, are the result of well defined thought to provide theatres with profitable offerings.

Each tells a dramatic story based on a subject of popular appeal, written by authors trained to express their ideas in an interesting manner.

Each presents a favorite star—such as Crane Wilbur, Margaret Gibson and William Clifford—with a great following among MOTION PICTURE patrons, adding an artistic as well as dollar and cents valne to the pictures in which they appear.

From a technical standpoint, David Horsley productions are snperior as they are put on by experts nnder the personal snpervision of Mr. Horsley, one of the first and most sncccssfnl prodncers in America.

Mr. Horsley's policy along these lines has caused his releases to reach a high mark in the number of prints sold. The logical conclusion is that many theatres are finding it profitable to book David Horsley productions. To those exhibitors not playing them we suggest for their own profit that they apply to any exchange of the Mutual Film Corporation for bookings.

An early forthcoming offering is a five reel psychological drama, "The Sonl's Cycle," featuring beautiful Margaret Gibson. Released February 12.

TABLOID REVIEWS FOR THE BUSY EXHIBITOR

PRODUCTIONS FROM ALL PROGRAMS

GENERAL FILM PROGRAM

"When Kings Were the Law." (Biograph. Mon., Jan. 31.)—This reissue is one of those pictures which demonstrates that the costume drama has not gone entirely out of favor. It is a well-constructed and compact story of intrigue in a court.

The cardinal has trouble with the king's favorite, who has thwarted several of his most cherished plans, and with the lady-in-waiting, lays a plot to discredit the girl. She is already under suspicion of over affection for the king's cousin, and the cardinal and his associate steal a necklace which the king has given to the favorite and slip it into the cousin's pocket.

When it is found the king believes the couple false to him, and orders them walled up in a tower. The lady-in-waiting is conscience stricken when the result of the plot breaks upon her, and confesses.

The victims are rescued just in time. In the cast are Dorothy Bernard, Wilfred Lucas, Harry Hyde and Claire McDowell.

"The Rough-neck." (Essanay. Two reels. Tues., Feb. 1.)—Not shown for review.

"Dreamy Dud Lost at Sea." (Essanay. Split reel, with scenic. Wed., Feb. 2.)—Showing the further adventures of "Dreamy Dud" in animated cartoon form, together with five hundred feet of scenic.

"The Primitive Strain." (Essanay. Three reels. Sat., Feb. 5.)—Not shown for review.

"Artful Artists." (Kalem. Tues., Feb. 1.)—Bud supported by delightful Ethel Teare in a comical mixture of farce and burlesque that will register well with the average audience. The situations are somewhat of the stock-in-trade order but here they are put to good use by capable comedians.

"The Moth and the Star." (Kalem. Two reels. Wed., Feb. 2.)—A "Stingaree" episode, which, after repeating much of a preceeding instalment, enters into a story that has the elements of suspense and comedy combined to a pleasing extent. Stingaree after escaping from jail, meets his fiancee from England and discovers that she still loves him. The closing scene finds the romantic outlaw back in the town prison.

Marin Sais does very good work as Ethel, the fiancee, and has a pleasing personality besides. Thomas Lingham in an eccentric comedy role of the criminologist does a good bit of work.

"The Moth and the Star" is a very good number save for the fact that the extras are not well trained.

"The Lurking Peril." (Kalem. Fri., Feb. 4.)—This continues the preceeding instalment of "Marguerite's Ventures." It is a well knit melodrama that has a generous proportion of sensational action and typical characters that work together well.

"The Broken Wire." (Kalem. Sat., Feb. 5.)—An "Hazards of Helen" episode featuring a swing from the top of a telegraph pole, enacted by Helen, into the open door of a passing freight car by means of a wire.

A dummy is employed but the effect is startling. The story is an average one containing bits of comedy here and there that furnish acceptable relief. The extra people are the only drawbacks.

"Diamonds Are Trumps." (Selig. Three reels. Mon., Jan. 31.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

"The Desert Calls Its Own." (Selig. Sat., Feb. 5.)—The story is a very ordinary one, and in its very nature does not permit anything unusual in the way of acting. Some of the desert settings are very effective. The cast is composed of Victoria Forde, Pat Chrisman, Sid Jordan, and Ethylyn Chrisman.

Desert Joe, an outlaw, lives in the same shanty with Old Mary and her adopted daughter Vicky. One day Vicky discovers Joe's true character, and so she bends every effort to help have him captured.

Billy, the sheriff, with whom Vicky is in love, goes out into the desert to capture the bandit. In a fight Joe wounds him, and thinking him dead, rides off.

When he goes to his shack for water, Vicky puts a note on the canteen, saying that the water is poisoned. When he later reads this, he dies of thirst. Vicky finds that her love for the sheriff is returned.

"Hearst-Vitagraph," No. 4. Coast Guard cutter seeks missing Thessaloniki in heavy seas; 10,000 hens in egg-laying contest in California; work of strike rioters in East Youngstown, O.; Germans dynamite building on eastern battle front; havoc of 72-mile gale at San Francisco; New York society folk in winter frolic on farm at Naponack; winter sports in Norway; rebuilding of Avezzano, Italy, wiped out by earthquake; newest battleship, Oklahoma, leaves New York for trial trip; annual class rush at University of Pennsylvania; cartoon by Tom Powers.

MUTUAL PROGRAM

"Around the World." (Cub. Fri., Jan. 28.)—George Ovey is branching out; as Jerry he has departed from American shores before, and this time he circles the world. After a difficulty with several policemen, he makes his escape in an aeroplane and lands on a cannibal island.

The natives are very modern and the chief is notified of the new arrival, by telephone. Jerry is cast as the lead in a cannibal dinner, but pushed the chief into the pot and runs. He reaches the chief's tent and finds there a beautiful princess held captive.

He frees her, but the two are recaptured. Jerry is equal to the occasion; he creates trouble among the natives, and throws the princess into the chief's racing car, in which the two flee to safety.

George Ovey, George George, Louis FitzRoy, Jefferson Osborne, Arthur Mund, Harry Jackson, Gordon McGregor, Robert Kenyon, Belle Bennett and Janet Sully are in the cast.

"The Broken Cross." (American. Two reels. Tues., Feb. 1.)—The story of this picture makes many strong situations possible, and these are well handled by Harold Lockwood and May Allison. Thomas Ricketts directs the clever pair and steers their ability along effective channels. The quasi-tragic story has several improbable incidents.

David Keightly saves Dora, one of two orphan sisters, from drowning. He becomes interested in the girl, and when he inherits his father's money, he decides to marry her. But one of Dora's suiters tells him that she is dead.

Gradually he finds himself becoming infatuated with another girl, named Helen. One day he tells Helen of his first love, and she recognizes the girl he describes as her sister. By a strange chain of coincidences, David has not met Dora, although she is alive. Helen decides to go away and allow David to marry Dora.

"Billy Van Deusen's Wedding Eve." (Beauty. Wed., Feb. 2.)—John Steppling's characterization of Billy Van Deusen never loses its savor by repetition. John Sheehan puts over another good bit in the person of a tempermental press-agent. The plot is senseless and hackneyed, but the cast pack several laughs into the thousand feet. Others seen in the cast are Carrol Halloway, Edna Frawley, Hugh Bennett, and Bessie Banks.

Billy is engaged to Helen, and on the eve of their marriage, Billy feels that he must have one last spree. Helen's father, an inveterate poker fan, sneaks away the same night for a little game.

Noticing Billy's comatose state, an actress and her press-agent decide to work up a scandal for its attendant publicity. To fix this, they invent a pretext to get him to the girl's room, and there the waiting reporters confront the poor man. Meantime, to escape his pursuing wife, Helen's father rushes into the actress' room, and is discovered there by his spouse, while Billy is also seen by his fiancee.

"Sammy Versus Cupid." (Vogue. Thurs., Feb. 3.)—Not shown for review.

"Mammy's Rose." (American. Fri., Feb. 4.)—This rather depressing story involves the death of most of the characters, and even their ultimate reunion in the land of spirits (which is shown) does not lighten the gloom much. Neva Gerber and Frank Borzage handle the leads exceedingly well.

A withered negress is dreaming of the days "befo' de wah." She pictures her young master leaving home to join the Confederate troops, his sobbing wife waving good-bye.

Then the coming of the baby, and the soldier's furlough to see his heir. The arrival of some "Yank" soldiers, and the shooting down of the young father. These memories cause the withered mammy to fall back dead. Her mistress, returning from a visit to her husband's grave, finds the dead colored woman's lifeless body, and is killed by the shock. The spirits of the departed ones then reunite.

"The Extra Man and the Milk-Fed Lion." (Mustang. Three reels. Fri., Feb. 4.)—The best of "The Buck Parvin" series to date. Joe Massey and his quid of Piper Heidsick have a hundred feet or more to themselves, and they are good. There are wild-animal stunts, kangaroo boxing, and other interesting specialties introduced.

The fans will get some more dope on how the pictures are made, as well as get some genuine laughs. This picture can be heartily recommended.

Buck gets his friend Tommy a job as an extra in the Titan Moving Picture Company. Tommy promptly falls in love with the leading lady, and after innumerable funny incidents, he pulls one final "boner" that loses him his job. The leading lady is in the lion cage, and standing before the snarling King of the Jungle. Suddenly she loses her nerve, and the lion is about to spring at her, when Tommy jumps into the cage, knocks over the camera, and drags her out.

The apoplectic director tells him that the lion is harmless, and that he has spoiled one of the best animal scenes ever filmed. Tommy decides that he is not fitted for screen work.

In the cast are Art Acord, Lawrence Peyton, Joe Massey, Charles James, Hardy Gibson, Ashton Dearholt, Dixie Stratton, and William Marshall.

"The White Rosette." (Masterpicture DeLuxe. Five reels. Sat., Feb. 5.)—Reviewed at length elsewhere in this issue.

Vogue Comedy. (Sun., Feb. 6.)—Title not reported. Act not shown for review.

PATHE EXCHANGE INC.

"The Red Circle," No. 7. (Balboa. Two reels.—This episode, entitled "Two Captives," contines the incident of a theft at the summer hotel, when June Travis and Detective Lamar see a woman, with a Red Circle painted on her hand, steal a valuable necklace.

Lamar traces the woman and arrests Alma La Salle, who has the missing jewels hidden in the heel of a shoe. Following up the clue, the detectives raid the shoe shop of "Smiling Sam," who has been befriended by June.

Later June discovers an organ-grinder asleep on the beach, and she seizes the opportunity to release his captive monkey. She comes very near getting caught, but her old nurse, Mary, again comes to the rescue and shields her. Ruth Roland and Frank Mayo are featured in the cast.

"Luke, the Candy Cut-Up." (Phunphilms.)—This comedy shows Luke presiding over a confectioner's shop. In his lunch hour Luke wanders into the park and manages to "lift" the watch belonging to another saunterer. Later in the day, the victim is passing the candy shop, and recognizes the fob hanging from Luke's pocket.

He calls a policeman, and the two go in after the watch. Luke protests so vigorously that soon all hands are entwined in taffy, butter-scotch, ice cream and other dainties.

"Movements the Eye Misses." (Pathécolor.)—This is another of the interesting educational features of the Pathé series. It is a study in the movements of muscles of the human body, and of other animate things, showing the curious actions which take place right under the eye, but so quickly that they are never seen. On the same reel is "Glimpses of Java," in beautiful colored views.

UNIVERSAL PROGRAM

"Graft." (Universal Special Feature. Two reels. Eighth episode. Week of Jan. 31.)—"Old King Cole," the title of this chapter, deals with the Coal Grafter and closes with his horrible death. There is plenty of suspense throughout, the attempts to kill Tom, and his combat with the evil members of the Graft Trust are sensational enough to keep one continually on the jump.

"The Path of Happiness." (Red Feather. Five reels. Mon., Jan. 31.)—Reviewed at length in the issue of Jan. 29.

"When Aunt Mathilde Fell." (Nestor. Mon., Jan. 31.)—An average number of Christie's which means that it is a good comedy. Lee Moran and Gus Alexander as Knights of the Road cut very funny figures and assist in Eddie Lyons' love affair with Ethyl Lynn in most humorous style. Stella Adams in the featured part is as good as ever.

"Three-Fingered Jennie." (Gold Seal. Three reels. Tues., Feb. 1.)—The third instalment of the "Journal of Lord John" series commences with a reel of introductory repetition of the last chapter and then launches out on a story of strong interest, that retains the interest of itself, without relying on any of the former numbers. A motor boat chase brings the chapter to a close.

"In Dreamy Jungle Town." (Rex. Tues., Feb. 1.)—Violet McMillan falls asleep and dreams of being a jungle girl, on friendly terms with all the four-footed inhabitants. These animals are played by humans incased in skins and will doubtless be a source of delight to children.

"Son o' the Stars." (Victor. Three reels. Wed., Feb. 2.)—One of the last pictures made by the Kerrigan-Victor company at Lake Tahoe, containing some of the best northern scenes ever filmed, well photographed besides. It is a romance indulged in between a white girl, and a white man, but he is thought to be an Indian, so manifold complications arise until his ancestry is established.

The story is merely fair but the scenes almost offset this fact. The plot takes gigantic strides in the preliminary scenes, most of the action being invisibly accomplished in the subtitles. Kerrigan as the man reared among the Indians is the right physique but affects manners too polished for the role. Others are Helen Leslie, Buck Connors, Norbert Myles and Ethel Phillips.

"Sea Dogs and Land Rats." (L-Ko. Wed., Feb. 2.)—A highly amusing reel that winds up in a wild chain of thrilling events. Dashing through walls of houses in automobiles and falling through floors furnished most of this thrilling fun. Gertrude Selby, Fatty Voss and Reggie Morris appear, while Dave Morris is present with his brainless expression that seems so humorous.

"The Wise Man and the Fool." (Laemmle. Two reels. Thurs., Feb. 3.)—A story of rivals in love given an unconventional twist by introducing several allegorical bits of action that are somewhat similar to events in the main plot.

The picture as a whole is hardly convincing as some of the acts of the principals are not natural. The scenes are all good, there being a fine mining camp scene and a good thriller in which the heroine takes a realistic fall from her horse.

The titles when viewed, were very poor. Myrtle Gonzalez, Val Paul, Fred Church, and Alfred Allen appeared under Lynn Reynolds direction.

"Building Up the Health of a Nation," No. 3. (Powers. Split reel. Thurs., Feb. 3.)—Bernarr MacFadden again, this time telling us the correct way to breathe and his approved exercises for the lungs.

The intended dramatic touch showing as a contrast a foul tenement house and a pretty country home, is hardly in keeping with the educational aspect of MacFadden's exhibition. On the same reel with "Caged with Polar Bears."

"Caged with Polar Bears." (Powers. Split reel. Thurs., Feb. 3.)—Showing the sportive antics of eight trained polar bears. Funny because bears are always funny and a worthy addition to the pictured vaudeville numbers. On the same reel with "Building Up the Health of a Nation, No. 3."

"Flivvers, the Smoke Eater." (Nestor. Two reels. Fri., Feb. 4.)—A fair burlesque that has some very funny moments in it, although at times the action is too foolish to strike a humorous chord.

The subtitles contain such lines as "End of Part 3, Part 4 on Its Way" and "Two Hundred Years Later," with the following action consecutive with that which went before. Charles Evans as Flivver and Nina Maxwell are featured.

"The Soul Man." (Imp. Fri., Feb. 4.)—This shows King Baggot in a rather crude sob story, that has a certain appeal, yet withal appears somewhat pointless. Marie Wierman and Ned Reardon are also in the cast.

"The Phantom Island." (Bison. Two reels. Sat., Feb. 5.)—This story which is laid on a desert island, Francis Ford's favorite locale, has a fair amount of interest and a little suspense, but it is not a good picture.

The characters are not well defined, the villain in particular acting as the hero much of the time. Ford who plays the lead and his support do entirely too much yawning and stretching, apparently motivated by an incomplete understanding of their parts.

Dorothy Davenport, Jay Belasco and Robert Murdock are in the supporting cast. Grace Cunard wrote the scenario.

"Uncle Sam at Work," No. 7. (Powers. Sat., Feb. 5.)—Showing the inner workings of the Patent Office, Ellis Island, and views of the Philippines, the Arctic, and the American Indians. A very interesting reel, which when edited will present a pleasing appearance in everything save photography.

"Wanted—a Piano Tuner." (Joker. Sat., Feb. 5.)—Humorous complications arise in this reel owing to the fact that a detective disguised himself as a flirtatious piano tuner, and consequently both the tuner and the detective receive blows that should go to the other.

The affair is handled in a manner that prevents confusion, and while Allen Curtis has made better comedies, this one stands as a very good number. William Franey, Gale Henry, Lillian Peacock, Milbrun Moranti and Charles Conklin are the principals.

"September Mourning." (L-Ko. Two reels. Sun., Feb. 6.)—Reviewed at length on page 79, issue of Nov. 20.

"One Who Passed By." (Rex. Sun., Feb. 6.)—After the husband has been deserted he becomes a tramp and during the course of the day prevents a quarrel between a farmer and his wife from reaching serious proportions, in a manner that is clever and novel. This is a good drama, somewhat indefinite but pleasing. Ben Wilson, Dorothy Phillips and Joe Girard are the leads.

"Universal Animated Weekly," No. 3. (Universal.)—Rose carnival at San Diego; sunken dredge blown up at providence; diving champions practice at Los Angeles; Gen. Jackson's flag restored to South by Illinois, at New Orleans; 10,000 hens in egg-laying contest on California farm; Cavalry fence on horseback, in England; work of fatal gale at San Francisco; protest at conscription in London; 900-ton section unites bridge across Colorado river; Brown University football team, beaten by Washington State at San Diego; Juan Domonjos gives flying exhibition at Washington; Ford peace party in Norway; cartoons by Hy. Mayer.

"Universal Animated Weekly," No. 4. (Universal.)—Storm Cloud, model for the buffalo nickels, poses for art students at Pittsburgh; $500,000 fire in Passaic, N. J.; Brooklyn, new $10,000,000 subway in operation; undertakers have jolly convention at Long Island City, N. Y.; hoboes have to cut wood in order to get free shelter in Chicago; newest hair ornaments for women; scenes surrounding activities of Generals Carranza and Villa in Mexico; submarine of type which exploded, shown in Brooklyn Navy yard; Strangler Lewis, world's wrestling champion, in action in New York; Norwegian steamer Sygna returns to New York with fire in hold; cartoons by Hy. Mayer.

The High Water Mark

of motion picture trade journalism was reached in last week's issue of Motion Picture News which comprised 336 pages, including a loose insert and 186 pages or 104,160 lines of paid advertising.

The amount of advertising in this number is almost double the volume ever carried by any issue of any trade paper in this field.

The previous high water mark in trade paper advertising was also attained by Motion Picture News in its April 3d, 1915, issue, which carried 110 pages or 61,600 lines of paid advertising. This has only been approached by the Christmas Issue of Motion Picture News, which had 106 pages or 59,360 lines of paid advertising, and which also stands unequaled in volume of paid advertising by any issue of any other trade paper.

These achievements speak for themselves and for Motion Picture News. No other arguments are needed to indicate the pre-eminence of Motion Picture News in the field of the motion picture.

Send Your Biography

We are proud of the advertising achievement of 186 pages in a single issue and of the industry which makes possible so remarkable a volume as the Studio Directory Number of Motion Picture News. We are still prouder, however, of its editorial excellence and its successful fulfillment of a very serious purpose.

In this number the industry has at last an authentic directory. The exhibitor has at his right hand a publicity guide which is also a necessity; the newspaper has indexed information for its motion picture department which was never available before; the studio manager is binding and filing this issue for continuous use.

The directory is not complete: but we are not to blame for names and biographies that have been omitted. An urgent request is now made—to every manager, director, actor, actress, writer, cameraman—to send us at once a condensed biography. This will be filed and ready for the next semi-annual Directory to be issued November 15, 1916. We also want right along all changes in address and studio affiliation.

PROVINCIAL GOVERNMENT WILL CENSOR FILMS IN WINNIPEG

Censorship of motion pictures in Winnipeg is to be taken away from the city and placed under the control of the provincial government.

Corporation Counsel Hunt informed the market, license and relief committee, which body receives the monthly reports of the three film czars, that the provincial treasurer's department proposes to take the duty of passing on the films away from the city and administer it from the government buildings.

He explained that the bill was already drafted and added that Saskatchewan tried a similar experiment along this line, it losing some $8,000 by doing so.

Under the present arrangement all pictures to be shown in either Manitoba or Saskatchewan are inspected in the Winnipeg city license department and the latter province has a man permanently employed in Winnipeg to look after its interests in this respect.

This plan, the committee found, will likely be upset. One dollar a reel is paid by the picture houses for the inspection, and all reels, before being shown, must be thus passed. The city has derived over $6,000 in revenue each year from censoring moving pictures.

The Manitoba legislature is now in session, and it is probable that one or more new bills affecting the moving picture theatres will be passed.

Some time ago, at a meeting of exhibitors, it was decided to importune the provincial government to lighten the license burden placed on the moving picture houses by the late provincial government.

SPINGLER IN LEAD OF "DRIFTWOOD," OCEAN

"Driftwood," picturized from Owen Davis's play by Anthony Kelly, will soon be completed under the direction of Marshall Farnum. The star of the feature is Vera Michelena of comic opera fame and her leading man is Harry Spingler.

Prior to his present engagement, Mr. Spingler appeared in several of the Universal features starring King Baggot.

Mr. Spingler's best work was revealed during his stay of seven months with the Fox Film Corporation during which time he enacted the juvenile roles in "The Bondman," "From the Valley of the Missing," "The Plunderer," "Samson," "The Thief," "A Gilded Fool" and "The Idler."

HORSLEY TO PRODUCE A McCARDELL SCENARIO

Preparations for the production of "A Little Lady of Lions," a virile drama by Roy L. McCardell, have been started at David Horsley's studio in Los Angeles. The story will be made into a five reel picture which will be released as a Mutual Masterpicture, de luxe edition. Margaret Gibson will probably play the leading role.

"A Little Lady of Lions" is the first of Mr. McCardell's scenarios written under the arrangement recently made by him with Mr. Horsley.

ATTEMPT TO OUST MRS. MURRAY FROM OHIO BOARD FAILS

An attempt to name a successor to Mrs. Maude Murray Miller, of the Ohio Board of Censorship, has resulted in a deadlock in the Ohio Industrial Commission.

Mrs. Carlotta Price Shea was presented for nomination by H. L. Elliott, but no second followed the motion. Commissioners Yaple and Duffy do not show any disposition to bow to the pressure being brought upon them to appoint Mrs. Shea. Mrs. Miller says that she will fight any attempt to oust her and that she will tell the "inside story" of the censorship as it is practiced in Ohio. Being a newspaper woman she would be able to tell a clear and lucid story.

From present indications there will be no successor appointed and that Mrs. Miller will remain on the job.

ATTEMPT TO STOP PURCHASE OF GREATER NEW YORK FILM RENTAL BLOCKED

The attempt of Richard A. Rowland, president of the Metro Pictures Corporation, to have Federal District Judge Mayer grant an injunction preventing the purchase of the Greater New York Film Rental Company by the General Film Company failed last Friday.

Judge Mayer sustained the contention of the General Film attorneys that such a purchase as Mr. Rowland has said would be made was entirely within the discretion of the directors of the General Film Company.

ADVERTISING MANAGER APPOINTED BY THE COLES PICTURE MACHINE CORPORATION

H. B. COLES announces that C. Ridderhof has been engaged as advertising manager for the Coles Picture Machine Corporation.

Mr. Ridderhof is a man of broad mechanical experience. He served several years as mechanic, foreman and superintendent for various machine shops, as well as being a practical designer.

C. RIDDERHOF.

During his entire experience, he has been particularly interested in the advertising end of the various companies with which he has been connected, among which are the Western Gas Engine Corporation, Wilmarth & Morman Company, Zono Manufacturing Company and Hotpoint Electric Heating Company.

Recently he has been advertising manager of the Society for Electrical Development in its campaign for Electrical prosperity Week.

In addition to these things, Mr. Ridderhof has written a course of lectures on electricity, which shows that he is no stranger to the duties which he is assuming.

The South Bend College of Optometry has conferred the degree of Doctor of Optics upon Mr. Ridderhof, which goes further to show that he is well prepared to enter the motion picture field.

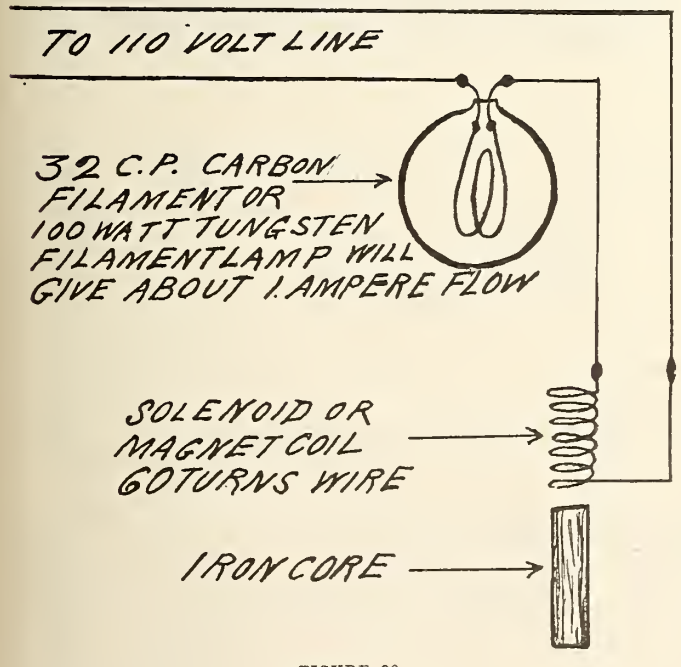
Continuation of Answer to Question No. 51

By J. H. Hallberg

The current flowing across the arc with such a transformer as described, taking from 25 to 30 amperes from the line, will be approximately 50 to 55 amperes, but at a voltage of only between 30 and 33 volts across the arc.

Consider the current entering the lamp-house on wire "A," passing over carbon "B," over arc "C," over carbon "D" and out over wire "E," and that the current strength is 60 amperes. Under this condition you have the equal of one turn in an electric circuit, beginning at "A" and ending at "E," with 60 amperes flowing, which equals 60 ampere turns.

You know or can easily find out, that if you take a copper wire and wind it on a cylinder or tube, so that



TO 110 VOLT LINE
32 C.P. CARBON FILAMENT OR 100 WATT TUNGSTEN FILAMENT LAMP WILL GIVE ABOUT 1 AMPERE FLOW
SOLENOID OR MAGNET COIL 60 TURNS WIRE

you will have 60 complete turns, and if you connect this coil of 60 turns to a dry battery, for instance, or any source of supply, which will cause one ampere to flow through it, if you put an iron core into this coil or solenoid, as it is called, the iron will immediately become magnetic.

This test can easily be demonstrated if you will take a piece of bell wire and wind 60 turns of it, just roughly by hand, and connect this coil or solenoid, in series with a 32 candle power carbon lamp on 110 volts or in series with a 100 watt Tungsten 110 volt lamp, as illustrated in Fig. 36.

You may wind the coil on a large wire nail, then remove the nail after the coil is wound. Turn on the lamp after it has been connected, as shown in Fig. 36, and to all appearances there is no effect from the coil of 60 turns. Insert a nail slightly smaller than the one you wound the coil on, so that it will move freely within the coil and you will note that the coil will have a magnetic effect on the nail.

This demonstrates the fact that the coil will exert magnetic influence on iron.

To prove to you that this magnetic influence is present in the coil, without the presence of the iron core, you may take a compass, any kind will do, and if you move the compass close enough to the coil, you will find its needle will be moved suddenly in one direction or the other, depending upon the direction of the current. A test with the compass can best be accomplished with D. C. flowing through the coil, because the A. C., if passed through the coil, may demagnetize the compass needle.

You may, however, test the coil as illustrated in Fig. 36 by inserting the iron core with A. C. because you will then not only get a magnetizing effect on the core, but you will feel the trembling of the core, due to the reversals of the current.

Seattle's $350,000 Theatre Is City Show Place

The Coliseum, with 2,461 Seats and Furnished in Accordance with Latest Ideas of Comfort and Elegance, Is Opened on January 8 by Anita King, the Paramount Girl, Who Made Trans-Continental Trip Alone in Auto —Elevators Carry Patrons to Balcony and Mezzanine Floor

IN the Coliseum theatre, opened January 8, Seattle has one of the largest and most beautiful picture houses in the United States. Anita King, the Paramount girl, christened the theatre and made the opening speech.

The theatre was built at a cost of $350,000, and every detail that makes for comfort and elegance has been provided for.

There are 2,461 seats, 1,000 of these being on the lower floor, and three hundred in the loges. It is a genuine motion picture theatre, built for the exhibition of photoplays alone. There is no stage.

Elevators carry patrons to the balcony and loges on the mezzanine floor, there are ladies rest rooms, dressing rooms and reception rooms, children's rooms, men's lounging and smoking rooms, writing rooms and private telephone booths.

Inlaid Music Designs in Interior

The interior decorations and furnishings are a unique, colorful combination of the ancient beauty of the Byzantine, relieved by inlaid mosaic designs, softened by the gray and black tones of the velvet and carpets.

The air in the Coliseum theatre is changed every ninety seconds, and is driven out by a very powerful electric motor through a fan that measures fourteen feet in diameter.

The air is washed, which cleans it of dust and impurity and also moistens it. In summer the air is ice-cooled and in winter preheated, which insures the even and comfortable temperature throughout the entire year.

To insure perfect ventilation in a theatre of this size without throwing a draft on any one spot was a big problem, but it has been very satisfactorily solved.

The interior lighting is a distinct novelty. Instead of being indirect lighting or concealed the entire theatre is illumined by reflected light, this insuring an unusually well-lit playhouse and avoiding any direct glare which would cause eye strain.

All approaches to the upper balcony from the main floor are inclines, doing away with stairways. An elevator carrying twenty seven people, which stops at the lower and main balcony, is another point upon which the Coliseum may claim distinction.

Organ and Orchestra Furnish Music

The theatre is of steel construction containing some of the largest pieces of steel ever fabricated. The large truss holding the balcony weighs sixty-five tons, probably the largest of its kind in the United States. The structural designer is H. W. Bittman, who has designed nearly every large theatre in the Northwest. The theatre front is of glazed white terra cotta. Glass awnings, half a block long on one side and a quarter block long on the other, cover the entire sidewalk.

Music is provided by a giant organ, and a Russian orchestra of eight men whose salaries are said to total eight hundred dollars a week. The organ is really five instruments in one, the divisions being the Swell, Great, Orchestral, Pedal and Echo organs.

By each of these divisions and the chimes, temple bells, xylophone and harp, the organist can play organ orchestral as well as symphonic selections.

The Coliseum is operated by Jensen and Von Herberg, who also operate the Liberty, 2,000 seats; the Alhambra, 1,250 seats; the Mission, 980 seats—all in Seattle; and the Columbia in Portland, Ore.

Paramount pictures are shown exclusively. The admission prices are as follows: General admission, fifteen cents; loges, thirty cents; reserved loges, fifty cents.

A tremendous crowd stormed the theatre on the opening day. At one o'clock p. m. a line began forming, and by two the theatre was filled, with a line two abreast and a block long waiting.

This line was unbroken until 9 p. m. The next day, Sunday, the house opened at 11 a. m. and was filled by noon. Fannie Ward in "The Cheat" was the opening attraction.

ERKER BROTHERS OPEN FILM LABORATORY IN ST. LOUIS

ERKER BROS., who since 1879 have been one of the leading optical dealers of the Middle West, and who were one of the first concerns to enter the motion picture supply business, have recently installed a complete film laboratory for the developing and printing of motion picture films.

The growing demand for such a plant to handle the pictures that are being taken both by professionals and amateurs in the Southwest led A. P. Erker, president of Erker Bros., to establish this new branch after investigating several of the Eastern film laboratories.

The new laboratory is in charge of experienced film experts whose advice is at the disposal of all cameramen and people desiring to produce motion pictures. This should aid in making St. Louis an active film center where producers, especially of the Southwest, can go in the future for their laboratory work.

Erker Bros. have already turned out successful films which are running in St. Louis and nearby towns. The Globe-Democrat Weekly comes from these laboratories.

Operating Electricity — Questions Answered — Repairing Equipment

Edited by J. H. Hallberg

Who Will Answer All Questions You Send in, No Matter How Simple or How Difficult

THE PROPER RELATIVE SIZES OF WIRE BETWEEN THE GENERATOR AND RHEOSTAT

J. W. S., Binnewater, N. Y.—Yours of the 11th received. I have taken personal charge of my machine because I discharged the "self-styled" electrician as he claimed to be, yesterday.

I was looking over your catalogues and found an illustration of an arc lamp showing carbon setting for D. C. I went up into the booth and tried your setting and it was a grand success. The "self-styled" electrician had his carbons set the same as for A. C., which accounts for most of the trouble previous to taking personal charge of the machine.

I will draw you a sketch, Fig. 1, of how the generator is now wired up. There is no name plate on the generator so that I cannot give you the number or any other information.

Now, I think the next improvement is the wiring. The electrician run different size wires, and I think they should all be one size and terminals should be put on the end of each wire. If the dynamo is connected up right like my sketch, please state what size wires should be used for the same.

I have a fuse block but no fuses, and I think there should be a fuse block, so state what size fuses to use.

ANSWER.—I am glad you discovered from my catalog the correct carbon setting for D. C. and that your trouble has been overcome.

There are so many "self-styled" electricians who think it is an easy job to a moving picture machine operator, that in many instances, good installations are made failures on account of improper installation and operation.

Your illustration, Fig. 1, which I herewith reproduce, is not correct and as it ought to be, and therefore I submit herewith another sketch, Fig. 2, which gives the correct location of the different size wires, and switches and connections.

As a general rule, all wires leading from the source of supply or generator to a moving picture machine switch, should be of not less than No. 6 B. & S. gauge. In view of the very short run which you have to make, which I understand is not much more than 7 or 8 feet, I suggest that you use asbestos covered cables, with regular Bulldog lugs on the ends.

The asbestos covered No. 6 cable costs you 10c. per foot in the No. 6 size, and the Bulldog lugs for each end of the cable cost 25c. each.

As illustrated, the small wire should not run from the generator to the switch, but should run from the generator terminal, "R," to the field rheostat, as illustrated in my sketch, Fig. 2.

A fuse block with fuses will cost about $1.25 for double pole and extra fuses, 25c. each, approximately. As your generator appears to be one of those which operates without a rheostat in series with the same, the use of a fuse between the generator and the arc lamp is not necessary.

The best carbons to use would be 5/8-inch cored, top, and 1/2-inch cored, bottom.

Another matter to which you must pay strict attention to, is to make sure that the upper carbon is always positive and the lower negative. In order to determine this, strike the arc—let your arc burn for about 20 or 30 seconds—then pull the switch. If the upper carbon is then the hotter, your connection is right and the upper carbon is your positive, as it should be. On the other hand, if when you pull the switch, the lower carbon is the hotter, then your arc is upside down and you must change the two wires at the carbon holders.

For your installation you would need six (6) Bulldog lugs, two for the arc lamp, four for the switch, and then you ought to have three sleeve connectors for the generator wires. These cost you 25c. each. If you do not use sleeve connectors at the terminals, solder the terminal wires carefully and tape them.

USE HALF SIZE STEREO LENS

I. T. N., Hillsboro, N. D.:—Would it be possible to place a slide about four inches from the condensers; would this make the picture as clear and large by adjusting the lenses or moving them, if that is possible as the distance they use in machine now; in other words, can I get a clear picture by placing a slide four inches from the condensers by adjusting the lenses.

Any information you could give on the above will be greatly appreciated.

ANS.—It is possible to place a standard lantern slide four inches away from the condensers without materially sacrificing the illumination on the screen.

In order to accomplish this result, it will be necessary to use condensing lenses of higher focus than ordinarily. Referring to illustration, Fig. 3, you will find that I recommend 10-inch Plano convex condensers in front and back holders, separated about 5/8 inches, as they will be, if used in the regular Powers 6-A or 6-B condenser mount or as they may be adjusted in the Simplex or Baird machines, as well as in the latest Edison Super machine.

Please note that in order to use these condensers correctly, the arc lamp has to be moved away from the condensers a distance of about 5 inches, and under this condition the distribution of the light rays will be such that they will cover the lantern slide when placed 4 inches away from the front condensers.

You understand, of course, that the objective lens will then be located at a suitable point beyond the slide, the distance depending upon the foci of the lens required.

It may be possible that on account of the spread of light caused by the use of this condenser combination, if a lens of less than 15-inch focus is used will make it necessary for you to provide a

Dear Sirs:

Yours of the 10th inst. at hand and in reply will say that I am very well pleased with the "Speer Projector Carbons." They are superior to any carbons I have used in my eight years of experience with projecting machines. They give a much clearer picture with less resistance than any carbons I have ever used, and they do not burn up as fast as other carbons do.

I can very readily recommend these carbons to any manager.

Yours respectfully,
GEORGE W. LEVIS.

A 3,000-SEAT THEATRE IN PHILADELPHIA UNDER CONTROL OF STANLEY POLICY

PHILADELPHIA is to have the largest theatre anywhere in that locality, if plans now being consummated are carried to a successful conclusion.

The site of the future photoplay house is at the corner of Chestnut and Fifty-second street, one of the most desirable locations in the city, situated as it is in the heart of the business and residential district of that fast growing section of the town known as West Philadelphia.

The lot, 56 by 180 feet, is owned by George Earle, who purchased it at a time of real estate depression for a reasonable price, and is assessed at $77,000.

The price paid by the company planning to build the theatre is close to $150,000. The theatre itself will cost approximately $350,000 and will seat more than 3,000 people.

Work will be begun as soon as title passes to the new company which will be, it is expected, within the month. Plans are being made by the Hoffmann Company, who built the Stanley and other prominent theatres.

Cramp and Company are expected to build the house, which it is purposed to have ready for occupancy by next autumn. The Stanley Company will control the policy of the house. It goes without saying that only first class attractions will be booked in this half million dollar picture palace.

AUTOMATIC FILM REWINDING COMPANY INCORPORATED IN PENNSYLVANIA

A CHARTER has been issued at the State Department in Harrisburg, Pa., to the newly-organized Automatic Film Rewinding Company of Harrisburgh, which is capitalized at $7,000 and proposes to place on the market a device for rewinding films that is declared by the company to be absolutely fireproof.

The incorporators are: W. Stanley Ray, the Pennsylvania State Printer; Frederick B. Ray, Myron W. Pickens, Frank O. Horting, Ross Oenslager and John L. Wohlfarth, all of Harrisburg, and Lynnwood H. Lamb, of Mechanicsburg, Pa. The company has obtained a patent on its device and proposes at once to establish a plant here for its manufacture.

UNIVERSAL MOTOR COMPANY BRINGS OUT A DIRECT-CONNECTED LIGHTING PLANT, AN IMPROVEMENT OVER ITS 1915 MODEL

THE Universal Motor Company, of Oshkosh, Wis., has brought out a new direct-connected lighting plant embodying numerout improvements over its 1915 outfit.

This machine is of the direct connected type, having a specially designed direct current generator built into the frame, the armature taking the place of the flywheel. The engine is four cylinder, four cycle, 2⅝ x 4 inch, and operates at normal speed between 1,000 and 1,100 R.P.M., with a rated capacity of 4 kilowatts. and capable of handling an overload up to practically 5 kilowatts.

The plant is supplied in 60 or 110 volts as desired, but the 60 volt type is used principally for moving picture show work, as this voltage works best on the arc light.

The plant is self contained and very compact, making it attractive for traveling show work.

The sensitive throttling governor runs in oil and is entirely enclosed; in fact, the entire oiling system is automatic, so that the operator need only keep the base supplied with oil and the machine will take care of itself, running as long as desired and giving a perfectly steady non flickering light equal to the best turbine operated plants.

This 4 K.W. set is supplied with a high tension magneto and float feed carburetor and the capacity is sufficient to handle the picture arc and additional house lighting and electric fans.

Other uses for the popular Universal outfit is house and store lighting, operating telegraph, cabin boat lighting and battery charging; and, in fact, supplies a steady direct current for all purposes where current up to 4 or 5 kilowatt capacity is required.

LYCEUM THEATRE, INDIANAPOLIS, REMODELED AND REDECORATED, OPENS AS THE STRAND

THE old Lyceum theatre, Capitol avenue and Washington street, Indianapolis, remodeled and redecorated throughout, presented an attractive appearance Saturday evening, January 15, when it opened as the Strand, a photoplay thetatre.

An audience that packed the house witnessed the photoplay and musical entertainment. Part of the audience was in evening dress.

No attempt ever has been made to present photoplays in any Indianapolis theatre on as elaborate a scale as was seen at the Strand, with interpretative music by a twenty-piece symphony orchestra and instrumental and vocal solos.

A large delegation of Chicago business and professional men witnessed the first performance as well as several hundred of the leading citizens of Indianapolis, including the editorial staffs of Indianapolis papers, who were guests of the management.

TEXAS EXHIBITORS OPEN THREE NEW THEATRES

RUDOLPH ORT has purchased the opera house at Boerne, and will run it as a picture house.

Comfort has two recently opened houses, the Peters Opera House, leased from A. Rashio, of San Antonio, and the Franklin, owned by Arthur Franklin and Sons.

The Guadalupe theatre at Laredo has been taken over by Felix Hernandez and Company.

The New Mission theatre, Beeville's latest picture show, was opened to the public recently. Five hundred people attended.

TWO THEATRES IN OHIO CHANGE HANDS

THE Grand theatre, Zanesville, has been sold, the new owners being R. L. Miller and W. C. Norris, both of Akron. Each is an experienced motion picture exhibitor.

E. C. Carter has purchased the Lyric theatre, Marion, of Ivan Weiser, and will consolidate the Dreamland and Lyric, moving into the room formerly occupied by the Lyric. Mr. Carter is putting in a new front and making other changes.

Strand in Indianapolis Is Complete Picture Theatre

The Old Park Is Remodeled and Decorated at Cost of $25,000—Complete Electrical Equipment Intended for the Chigaco Home of the Strand Is Shipped to the Indianapolis House—Management Advertises Heavily In the Newspapers

THE Strand theatre, Indianapolis, the old Park theatre, later renamed the Lyceum theatre, which has been redecorated and remodeled by the Strand Theatre Company, of Chieago, at a eost of about $25,000, is now open.

Several hundred invitations were sent out to Indianapolis city officials, state officials and members of the editorial departments of Indianapolis newspapers. A special train was chartered to bring the Chicago friends of the company to see the first performance.

Among the innovations is the fireproof picture projection room of hollow fireproof tile, concrete and steel, set up on eoncrete foundations at the rear of the orchestra floor.

A special ventilation system for this room draws air from the orchestra floor and exhausts it in the open air in a manner to keep the operators comfortably cool in spite of the rapid deoxidation of the air by the picture projection machines.

The most complete and unique lighting equipment in connection with its stage setting ever seen in a photoplay theatre, has been put in place. The complete electrical equipment originally intended for the Chicago home of the Strand Theatre Company was shipped to the Indianapolis Strand.

Raymond Q. Dalton's radical and pleasing departure from the stereotyped stage eonventions will be remembered by those who have seen his beautiful and eloquent lighting of Mauraee Browne's, "The Trojan Women."

Stage Setting Gives Lighting Plan Full Scope

The new Strand's stage setting, built by the scenic art firm of Sossman and Landis, of Chicago, gives the Dalton lighting scheme full scope. This stage setting is even more beautiful than the setting in the Chicago Strand.

The curtain rises on a moonlit stage, clouds float slowly across the sky, where the moon and twinkling stars reflect their light on the rippling water.

Slowly, as the symphony orchestra of twenty pieces, plays the overture, the faint light of dawn steals over the horizon, the moon and stars fade, and the day blooms into brilliant sunshine.

At the end of the overture, plush curtains in the center of the stage setting are drawn together, the picture screen drops in place, and, as the curtain unfolds, the first photoplay of the performance is revealed.

As the musical numbers are presented from time to time in entertainment, the screen is removed and brought down just as in the opening and during the solos and musical features, full seope is given to the varied and rare lighting effects Mr. Dalton has worked out.

All the lighting equipment in the old playhouse was taken out. The principal means of illumination on the stage is a large "U" shaped metal trough or reflector, studded with hundreds of various electric bulbs of various colors, which are dimmed or brightened to produce the desired light. Cloud projecting machines and ingenious water ripple projector, are among the unusual equipment put in.

Warde Johnston, General Musical Director

Warde Johnston, general musical director of the company, eonducted the first rehearsal of the orehestra, and announced the appointment of Albert E. Short, of Indianapolis, eonductor, and W. S. Mitchell, manager. Mr. Mitchell is manager of the Indianapolis Military Band.

Mr. Short is teacher of cornet at the College of Musical Art, and is well known as the eornet soloist of the Indianapolis Military Band. Mr. Short went to Indianapolis two years ago, from Chicago, where he had been with the Kryl's Band. Previously to that Mr. Short was in Springfield, Mass., where he was a soloist and band leader.

Practically all the members of the Strand's orchestra are members of the Indianapolis Symphony orchestra or of the Indianapolis Military Band.

In speaking of the soloists and singers that the Strand will present from week to week in eonnection with the photoplay and musical entertainment, Mr. Johnston said:

"The best talent in the eountry will be drawn on to round out the artistic program for which the Chicago Strand theatre has become famous.

"The high standards that mark the Chicago and other homes of the Strand Theatre Company will be lived up to in this city, and the same program will be presented that is shown in the metropolitan cities.

"Special representatives are engaged in Chicago and New York in seleeting artists for the Strand theatres."

Program Changed Twice a Week

The program will be ehanged twice each week, Sunday and Thursday. Five shows are given daily, beginning at 1:30 P. M. and running continuously until 11 P. M. The prices for the matinees are ten, fifteen and twenty-five cents, and in the evening, ten, fifteen, twenty-five and thirty-five eents.

The program for the opening show ineluded a one reel scenic, a vocal solo by Viva Ethelia, a news feature film, an instrumental solo, "Mice and Men," a Famous Players production with Marguerite Clark, a vocal solo and a comedy. The voealists will appear from two to five in the afternoon and 7:45 to 10 p. m. in the evening.

Believing that newspaper advertising pays, The Strand Theatre Company ran a three-quarter of a page ad in the Indianapolis Star on Sunday, January 9, and in the Indianapolis News on Tuesday, January 11, with a two-column ad several inehes long for the rest of the week.

This is the largest photoplay or legitimate theatre advertisement the writer has ever seen in Indianapolis newspapers, the next largest being the advertisements for "The Birth of a Nation," which was shown there for three weeks recently.

SPEEDCO ARC CONTROLLERS PLACED IN HOUSES FROM BOSTON TO WINNIPEG

THE Speed Controller Company, Inc., is rapidly spreading its Speedco Arc Controllers about the country. The maehines have reeently been adopted by the Orpheum theatre, Grand Rapids, Mich.; the Coliseum theatre, Seattle; B. F. Keith's theatre, Boston; and have entered the Canadian field at Pantages theatre, Winnipeg, Man.

Dowsley and Ross, of Winnipeg, are the dealers handling the Speedeo Arc Controller in Canada.

PARK THEATRE IN BOSTON IS LOCATED IN HEART OF CITY'S SHOPPING DISTRICT

ONE of Boston's best motion picture theatres is the Park, located on Washington street, in the heart of the shopping district. Lately, under the management of Thomas D. Soriero, the house has been doing a turn-them-away business, particularly when Mary Pickford is the headliner.

But Mr. Soriero does not have to wait until Miss Pickford comes along in order to cram his house to the overflowing point. The other Paramount releases are drawing big houses, along with Metro features.

The Park is one of the oldest theatres in Boston. On its old stage many actors and actresses famous in years gone by have appeared.

A little more than a year ago, however, the house forsook the legitimate and went over to the films, being remodeled for that purpose by a syndicate of several Boston business men.

For a time W. Fred Bossner, now superintendent of the department of theatres for the Paramount corporation, managed the theatre. When he left, not long ago, first one manager and then another served, until Mr. Soriero was engaged. He has stayed on because under him the house is making money.

EXTERIOR OF THE PARK THEATRE, WASHINGTON ST., BOSTON

Both outside and in, this theatre is one of the handsomest in town. The architect was Thomas W. Lamb. It seats 900, with balcony and main floor. Its Power's 6-A projection machine makes an 80-foot throw to a Gold Fibre screen which is tastefully arranged at the rear of a stage upon which a woman's orchestra, under the leadership of Mrs. Belle Renfrew, plays for the pictures. The operator's name is T. Barrows.

The general decorative scheme is red. The lighting scheme is Mr. Soriero's own. By it a newspaper can be read in any part of the house while the films are being shown.

And this does not detract from the clarity of the pictures. In fact, there is not another house in the city where the pictures show up to a more striking advantage than they do at the Park.

In conjunction with the orchestra an Austin organ is used. There are four shows each day, with twelve reels a show, at fifteen and twenty-five cents in the afternoon and twenty-five and thirty cents at night. There are forty-four employees. William Fleming is assistant to the manager. The house advertises both in newspapers and on posters.

FIRE IN FACTORY OF NEWMAN MANUFACTURING COMPANY FAILS TO CHECK PRODUCTION OF POSTER FRAMES

THE Newman Manufacturing Company, which manufactures a complete line of brass poster frames, easels, railings, ticket choppers, and other theatre equipment, with factories located at Cincinnati, New York and Chicago, reports that its Chicago plant, located at 108 West Lake Street, suffered a total loss by fire on January 14. Temporary quarters have been obtained at 68 West Washington Street, Chicago.

All of the contracts of the Chicago plant are now being executed by the Cincinnati factory of this company, where an additional force has been put on in order to take care of the emergency, so as to cause no undue delay in filling their orders.

Walter J. Newman, who has charge of the temporary quarters in Chicago, has shaped up things with remarkable dispatch, and states that there positively will be no interruption to business. He will be glad to receive his friends at the new location.

The company reports an excellent business at the New York factory, located at 101 Fourth Avenue, and at the Cincinnati plant, 717 Sycamore Street, and the outlook for 1916 is bright.

SOUTHERN theatre managers will learn with a great deal of surprise as well as pleasure of the formation of a new company known as the Lucas Theatre Supply Company, with headquarters at Atlanta, Ga.

This concern has taken over the entire business and holdings of Harry K. Lucas, who has operated extensively throughout that section of the country for several years. The new organization is said to be exceptionally strong.

Its officers, directors and stockholders comprise many of the most representative motion picture men identified with the business. Harry K. Lucas has been elected secretary and general manager of the supply company and will remain actively at the head of it.

The Lucas Theatre Supply Company has been appointed exclusive southern distributors for the Simplex projector and are now busily engaged allotting territory to dealers.

Three times the space formerly occupied by Harry K. Lucas have been utilized, where an extensive variety of motion picture equipment is to be found at all times.

WITHIN YOUR GRASP LIES GOLD!

You don't have to DIG for it—it's THERE!

To be in business and make a living is one thing, but the "goal" you strive for is WEALTH—not mere Bread and Meat. If you are not making money just take an hour off, sit in some quiet place and ask yourself these questions:

Am I giving the public their money's worth?
Is my place clean, well ventilated—inviting?
Are my pictures as Clear and Bright as they might be?

If you will assume the attitude of a patron rather than proprietor, the last question you put to yourself will make you do some DYNAMIC THINKING!

Mr. Exhibitor, do you realize that you are staking YOUR ALL on the screen you use? Do you know that there is no other one thing that will RUIN you so quickly and surely? Do you think the public are going to STRAIN THEIR EYES on CLOUDY pictures? NO! Absolutely NO—they go where they get the MOST for their money, the same as YOU do.

MINUSA GOLD FIBRE SCREENS, "Built by Brains," are the biggest MONEY MAKERS and MONEY SAVERS on earth. They MAKE MONEY because they show a Brilliantly Clear, Natural picture, and DO NOT TIRE THE EYES. They save FIFTY PERCENT OF YOUR LIGHT because of their greater "reflective power"—making the screen a GIFT from the Electric Company.

If you would have GOLD, and much of it, get a "MINUSA"!

Directory of New Theatres

This department is designed to be a weekly guide to all sales, leases, construction and remodeling of photoplay theatres. If you are building, selling, leasing or renovating, kindly communicate it at once for publication.

CALIFORNIA

THE Classic theatre, located at 4200 Moneta avenue, Los Angeles, has been closed.

The Victoria, located at 2570 West Pico street, Los Angeles, after being closed for several weeks, has been opened under the management of Hetherington and Visner.

January 6 marked the opening day of the Sherman theatre on Main street, between Sixth and Seventh, Los Angeles. This theatre is under the management of Mr. Freidlander.

After a period of opening and closing, the Queen, located at Vermont avenue and Thirty-first street, has again opened for business.

The Playhouse on West Seventh street, Los Angeles, was opened recently.

The Glendora theatre, Glendora, has been taken over by Macdonald and Hickman, two showmen of considerable experience.

The Imperial theatre, a small but well furnished moving picture house, has been opened on Broadway, near Tenth street, Oakland. The location is near the station of the suburban electric system and a large transient business is expected.

The Progress theatre at Woodland has been taken over by W. Webster, who also conducts the Strand in that city, and is to be renovated throughout and operated in conjunction with the larger and finer house. Mr. Webster formerly conducted a large theatre in Sacramento, but has now concentrated his interests in Woodland.

Krahn and Beach, who conduct the Lorin and Strand theatres in Berkeley, have completed plans for the enlargement of the former house and work will be commenced as soon as weather conditions become more favorable. The capacity of the theatre will be doubled.

The new theatre of K. Cashin at Fresno will be ready for occupancy early in February, construction work having been delayed somewhat by the rainy season.

A beautiful new theatre was opened at Turlock on January 1 by George Bailey and son, the building having been constructed for their needs by Mrs. Cora Johnson. Music was furnished by an orchestra led by Jean Nelson.

O. Atkinson has disposed of his interests in the Majestic theatre at Concord to Carl Crenna.

A building permit has been taken out at Sacramento for the remodeling of the one story brick moving picture theatre conducted at 420 K street, by L. H. Marks.

The M. and F. theatre has been opened at Castro and Twenty-fourth streets, San Francisco, this being a new house with a seating capacity of about four hundred.

The Lincoln theatre at Alameda has been reopened under the directions of Zwick and Poland.

Horner and Dowler have opened a new moving picture house at Angiola, a small town in Tulare County. This will be conducted as one of a chain of small houses.

CANADA

Three of the largest and best motion picture houses in Winnipeg, Manitoba, the Province, the Bijou and the Lyceum, have raised their night admission price from ten to fifteen cents. The reason is given that the big and first class features seen at this house, demand an increase in admissions.

The three houses are still doing as large a business as they enjoyed before they raised their prices, and it is understood that the patrons of the places are well satisfied with the altered condition of things.

ILLINOIS

W. W. Watts, proprietor of the Vaudette and Gaiety theatres, Petersburg, announces his intention of erecting a $10,000 theatre there to replace the Rex, recently destroyed by fire.

INDIANA

B. J. Vought and W. L. Pracht, formerly of Defiance, are now operating the Lyceum and Palace theatres at Columbia City. Both have had considerable experience in the show business, having also operated a house at Hillsdale, Mich. George Brookins, who has operated the theatres for nearly five years, has not decided on his future plans.

William C. Odle, mayor of Williamsport, has sold his two theatres to Glen Howard and Hurley Straitor, of Malott.

Gilbert Cuthbert and his son, Floyd Cuthbert, have bought the lease on the Irwin theatre, Goshen, from William S. Burridge. John Burridge will be booking agent for the Cuthberts. Vaudeville is to be continued and pictures will also be shown. The Cuthberts paid Burridge $1,800 for the lease.

Mrs. Kate Davis-Raymond, of Louisville, Ky., has been obtained by William C. Meloy as organist for his new Strand theatre, at Shelbyville, which is now being prepared for opening about February 14. A large organ has been purchased by Mr. Meloy at a cost of $5,000. Claude Williamson will be manager of the new theatre for Mr. Meloy.

Merchants in the west part of the business section of Laporte may start a new motion picture theatre, if a suitable site can be found. Thus far, attempts to get a location have failed, but it is hoped to put the project through in the near future.

The Royal theatre, in South Main street, Frankfort, has been sold by J. H. Staley, to L. F. Cox, of Peru, and W. H. Cox, of Ladoga. Mr. Stanley plans to leave Frankfort, with his family, and locate in Colorado, where he has accepted a position as advertising agent for the Pike's Peak Film Company.

The Victoria theatre at Lafayette has been taken over by Ray and Hobert Bishop from Mrs. S. Remington. They are sons of G. W. Bishop, owner of the building. The new management will take over the bookings made under the old management, and add such others as they desire later on.

The Superba motion picture theatre at Knightstown, which has been operated by Quincy T. Lyons, has been closed.

The new Forrest theatre at Boonville opened recently.

The Rex theatre, Rensselaer, of which W. C. Millirow is owner, has completed extensive alterations on the house. He has installed a Powers' 6A of the latest model, two hundred new opera chairs, a fibre screen and an indirect lighting system.

IOWA

M. Moltz has purchased the Royal theatre, La Mara, from G. A. Toppins.

A. Kahn has taken over the Casino theatre, Mason City.

Mr. Boyle, owner of the Dreamland theatre, Dubuque, already has a large force of men engaged in remodeling the room at the northeast corner of Fifth and Main streets, for a modern moving picture house and will have it ready to open early in February.

KANSAS

F. C. Smith has opened the New Empress at Paola.

MASSACHUSETTS

John Hanifin is building a new theatre, to be called the Royal, at Holyoke. He will charge twenty-five cents admission.

The new Strand in Holyoke has opened with Aleck Cameron in charge.

The Star, Holyoke, has been sold by Harry Lavinge to Oliver Bernest.

The contract for building the Strand theatre, Leland Court and Mercantile street, Worcester, which has been under consideration two years, has been let to Jardin and Company, 489 Fifth avenue, New York.

Henry J. Glutney has purchased a part interest in the Grand theatre on High street, Holyoke, now conducted by M. Demers. It is planned to remodel the whole interior of the theatre, enlarge the seating capacity to about 900, remove the posts and other obstructions and install a balcony.

MICHIGAN

A new theatre is to be erected on Russell and Frederick streets, Detroit, devoted to motion pictures, for which C. Howard Crane, Dime Bank building, is now taking bids. Plans have been completed and the money raised for its construction.

Plans are completed for the remodeling of the old Owosso theatre, Owosso, in to a motion picture house. When completed it will be leased by Eugene Brewer and Dr. G. N. Finch. Mr. Brewer will be the manager.

Thomas P. Penniman, a Detroit lawyer, has been elected president of the Ferry Field Theatre Company, to fill the vacancy caused by the death of A. Arthur Caille. Construction of the theatre, temporarily delayed, has been renewed.

Chris Kline, for a number of years with the Detroit office of the General Film Company, as assistant to A. J. Gilligham, has resigned to engage in the slide business. He has become associated with James Lombard and they are operating as the General Slide Company.

The New Majestic theatre, Wyandotte, owned by the firm of Caille and Guthard, was opened Thursday evening, January 20. The New Majestic is a beautiful playhouse, seating about 1,000. It cost over $50,000. George P. Wilbur is manager. The Marx theatre in Wyandotte, owned by the same firm, has been closed for repairs and alterations. It will open again some time in February.

The Family theatre, Jackson, Mich., remodeled, has reopened.

The Madison is the name decided upon for the new theatre which John H. Hunsky and George W. Trendle will erect at Grand Circus Park and Broadway, Detroit, one of the choicest locations in the downtown section. The Madison will accommodate about 2,500 people. Work will start in February and the theatre will be completed in October.

F. D. D'Arcy has sold the New Theatre, West Main street, Kalamazoo, to F. J. Buchte and O. W. Koch, of Union, Ill., who have already taken possession.

MISSOURI

L. R. Taylor is building the Royal theatre at Tarkio. It will seat 450.

The motion picture theatre built by Percy C. Jones at Unionville has been opened. It seats five hundred.

The Hyne-Bostian Picture Show Company have opened a show in the Battery C Building at Independence. This makes two shows for that city.

The Bancroft theatre in Kansas City has been purchased by R. W. Williams, who comes from Sioux City, Iowa.

MONTANA

One of the largest building permits for the season was issued by Building Inspector Fire Chief Collins to the Anaconda Amusement Company for the new picture theatre that is to be erected at once at the corner of Park and Oak streets, Anaconda. The amount was $40,000. Architect W. W. Hyslop was granted the permit and the contract for the building has been let to J. J. Skinner of Spokane.

NEBRASKA

The name of the Elite No. 1, Fourteenth and Douglas, Omaha, has been changed and it is now called the Rex.

A. H. Yenney, of Elm Creek, has finished a theatre and opened it. It seats three hundred and is completely equipped.

William H. Boese, exhibitor at Lynn Grove, has equipped his house with a new motiograph.

C. C. Lyons, proprietor of the Lyric, Grant, has installed a Power 6A machine.

Max Wolfson has bought the Elite No. 2, Fourteenth and Farnam, Omaha, from H. D. Coudroy. He has closed it while improvements and enlargements are being made. The name will be changed to the Garden theatre.

E. W. Greeg has bought the Columbia theatre, Tenth and Hickory streets, Omaha.

The Lyric theatre, Omaha, has been sold to J. H. Nickerson.

A new theatre has been opened at O'Neil, by B. M. Jordan.

B. W. Merril, Edgar, has opened a new theatre. He has a Power 6A machine.

Golden Brothers are the proprietors of a theatre opened in Broadwater.

Morris Miltonberger, formerly manager of the Rohlff theatre at Thirty-seventh and Leavenworth streets, Omaha, has resigned to accept the management of The Garden, Fourteenth and Farnam streets. Proprietor Watts is now managing the Rohlff.

J. W. Small, of the Casino, and H. H. Dimmitt, of the Dimmitt Opera House, Wymore, have consolidated and are showing in the Opera House. The Casino is closed.

The municipality of Geneva has built an auditorium for the benefit of its citizens and motion pictures are being shown. In this manner the city pays the interest on the bonds and the upkeep for the big house, besides furnishing good entertainment for its people. So far as is known about the Omaha exchanges, this is the first instance of municipal ownership of a motion picture house.

NEW YORK

The Stephen G. Todd property on New York avenue, Huntington, L. I., 63 x 135 feet, which has been sold by A. L. Field to Benjamin Goldstein, for $20,000, will be rebuilt and made over into a theatre for moving pictures.

The Hyperion theatre at Forty-sixth and Sackett streets, Corona, changed hands recently. The building had been occupied for several years by Sheer Brothers as a moving picture theatre. Isaac Wechselbaum is the owner of the building. Pechette and McGuiness have leased the place and the name will be changed to the Park theatre.

The Paragon Theatre Corporation has leased a site in Court street, White Plains, the site of the old Elberon Hotel, and will erect a moving picture theatre there.

C. V. Ansley has disposed of his interest in the Palace moving picture theatre, Hamilton, to his partner, D. H. Gazlay, and has gone to Florida for the winter. Mr. Gazlay has placed the management of the theatre in the hands of his brother, Howard Gazlay.

Attorney H. J. Donavin has disposed of the property at the corner of Ford and Caroline streets, Ogdensburg, and the purchaser will erect a picture theatre.

Work on the Piccadilly theatre, Albany, is well under way. The structure when completed will extend from Mortimer street through to Division street and have an entrance on Clinton avenue.

A new picture theatre is being erected on the Rudolph block, Monticello.

The Biltmore theatre, New York City, formerly Hammerstein's Lexington, opened recently with Paramount pictures. It will be remembered that this house was constructed only a short time ago and it was originally intended to operate it as an opera house. It is now being operated by the Biltmore Theatre Corporation.

PENNSYLVANIA

A fire which gutted the East Liberty Cameraphone theatre in East Liberty recently caused a loss estimated in the thousands. H. B. Kester, the manager of the theatre, is at a loss as to how the fire started. It is said the theatre will be remodeled and put in shape as quickly as possible by Mr. Kester and will be open to the public in a few weeks. The booth of the operator was not damaged in the least by the fire.

A fire which entirely destroyed the Palace theatre on the Butler Pike, near Spring Garden street, Ambler, is thought to be of incendiary origin.

Frank Craft, Fire Marshal, is working in connection with the insurance companies to ascertain the real facts. The fire started in the theatre and spread rapidly. Two fire companies of the borough managed to save adjoining properties, but the picture theatre, a $7,000 house, is an utter loss.

The suspicions of the authorities were aroused by three sharp explosions immediately preceding the first alarm, the rapid spread of the flames and the fact that a rear cellar door was wide open, creating a draft to all parts of the building. The Palace was owned by Mrs. G. Heiss and was leased by F. Tice. The entire loss was $10,000.

Negotiations have been closed through Mastbaum Bros. and Fleisher for the sale by George H. Earle, Jr., of a plot of ground at the southeast corner of 52d and Chestnut streets, Philadelphia, to a company which will build there the largest moving picture theatre in Philadelphia, having a seating capacity of more than 3,000.

Music and the Picture

Edited by Ernst Luz

This department is maintained for the exhibitor's assistance with a view of suggesting proper musical illustrations for current photo plays. MOTION PICTURE NEWS will be pleased to help solve any difficulties the exhibitors may have with their musical programs. All communications should be addressed to the Music and the Picture Department.

HARMONIZING CLASSIC MUSIC WITH PICTURES

Music Dept., Motion Picture News.
Dear Sir:

Owing to the fact that I have followed your interesting department for Better Music for the Pictures very closely, I am offering my little mite in that line, and hope that you will find space to print it in an early issue.

Of course, most every leader and organist have their own ideas on this subject, and while they would all consider themselves an authority in this line, no two would play a picture the same.

I am an organist, pianist and Wurlitzer player, besides an orchestra leader of many years' experience in pictures, and find that the following numbers are appropriate for the various scenes mentioned.

"One Fine Day" or the "Waiting Motif" from Madame Butterfly are very good pieces to play for a scene depicting a woman waiting for the return of a lover, etc., and "Solo di Mimi" and Mimi's Farewell are beautiful numbers for pathetic scenes. "Vesta la Giubba" from Pagliacci is a fine piece to play in the event of a husband being left by a wife or sweetheart.

These scenes are identical with the situations of the operas from which they are taken, and although many people would not know the name of the pieces being played, they would realize that they were full of harmony and beautiful melody, and were well suited to the occasion.

Other good plaintive and dramatic numbers are "Elegie" by Massanet, "Meditation" from "Thais," "The Stars Are Shining" from Tosca, and "Solvejg's Song" by Greig.

During the heavy battle scenes in "Cabiria" and other pictures, I use "Morning, Noon and Night" Overture by Suppe or similar pieces. For various ballet scenes, "The Ballet Music" from "Faust," or "Dance of the Hours" from "Gioconda" are good numbers. I could mention many more but space will not permit.

One of the difficult and puzzling pictures I have had to play was one in which a cabaret scene was shown with the dancers doing a one-step, and during the scene the leading man and lady came to the foreground and enacted a pathetic scene of parting, while the dancers were still in action on the floor.

In this event one has to stop playing for the dancers and play up to the principals in the foreground. Later on in the picture the girl goes home with her escort, but he returns to the cabaret, and for about five hundred feet of film there was shown a series of cut backs, from the girl weeping to the man in the cabaret with gayety and white lights.

In this event I played Drigo's "Serenade" and the "Musetta Song" from "La Boheme," which suggested "The Bohemians," and during the dramatic scenes I played them to suit that situation, and the same with the cabaret scene I accelerated accordingly.

This is a good subject for argument, and I would like to hear comment from any organist or leader, including Mr. Luz and Mme. De Armond of the Gladstone Theatre, Kansas, Mo.

FRANK H. ANDERSON,
249 S. Riverside Ave., Medford, Oregon.

Editor's Note:—Your letter has interested me very much and inasmuch as you have so kindly allowed me to make comment I appreciate it doubly. The numbers you suggest are the very best serious numbers I know for picture use.

You will note in the plot I suggest for the Paramount feature, "The Golden Chance," I suggest Puccinianna, which is a selection of Puccini arias. This number is published by Ricordi and Company, 14 East Forty-third street, New York City, who control the operatic rights of most foreign Grand Operas.

I have just received information that they are going to compile and publish many more of these to supply the needs of heavy melodious dramatic music, which are so necessary to the advanced picture player and picture music.

The music from "La Boheme," "La Tosca" and "Madame Butterfly" while very pleasing and melodious, nevertheless shows the highest attainments possible in musical dramatic effects.

I agree with you that every musician has a right to his ideas for picture playing, still you must admit that synchronisation is the most important in picture playing and consequently a picture will not allow itself to be divided into different degrees of seriousness.

A scene is either joyful or pathetic and must be followed accordingly. There are a thousand different numbers that will properly portray either one, but you dare never allow the pathetic to kill the joyful or the reverse.

Music will be a very important factor in the criticism of pictures when the daily press becomes interested, which is a future foregone conclusion. I am sorry you did not mention the name of the cabaret picture you had difficulty with, for then I could have spoken more intelligently on the matter, but I must disagree with you on the playing of the dancing scene, after the principles or leads came to the front of the screen for a parting scene.

It is not a good idea to neglect any action which positively suggests music, and the dancing does that. I should have continued following the dance tempo, playing whisper soft as the parting scene was enacted at the front. This is very effective.

You will find that a better and more noticeable effect is obtained by playing the suggested number very pianissimo, instead of playing against the screen action.

The action you speak of, viz., the continued changing from cabaret scenes to death scenes, is fast becoming obsolete among directors, the audience refusing to follow two thoughts at one time.

Such action seldom occurs in pictures of merit, the cut-back not being very popular. In most cases where this is done, the prime motive is picture length and it constitutes what is known as padding, which is never apparent in good pictures done by our best directors.

The one-man orchestra player can take more liberties in tempo changes than a ten men orchestra, but it is not good musical form to give more than one interpretation of a standard classic in the same feature.

You will realize that if you have musically accomplished an appeal with a certain number you undo it by giving a contrary version of the same number and it loses its appeal as originally intended. The programs you send me prove that you make a study of your audience, which is the essential in picture theatre music.

The following is a program sent in by Mr. Anderson, as published in the daily newspaper.

The organ recital for Sunday evening has been advertised as "Request Night," and out of the numerous requests sent to the box office the following program has been arranged by Frank H. Anderson, organist:

"Perfect Day," Jacobs-Bond; "To a Wild Rose," McDowell; "Fruehlingsrauschen," Sinding; Piano Solo; Selection—"Boheme," Puccini; Italian Ario.

This program was played before the picture program and was quite a feature. Good work, Mr. Anderson. Don't keep us waiting so long for your mites in the future.

Music Plot for Paramount Feature: "The Golden Chance"

By Ernst Luz. Projection Time Seventy Minutes

THIS plot is adapted so as to make it possible for the pianist, one man orchestra player, organist or orchestra leader to make some prior preparation for playing the picture. The numbers suggested need not be used; similar numbers, or numbers suggested by the Notes will do as well. It is intended that no unnecessary expense be added for exhibitor or musician.

31.	Agitato (Open P)	"A. B. C. Dramatic Set No. 2"—B2	After police shoot crook. He falls off fire-escape.
32.	Dr. Hy.-Andte	"A. B. C. Dramatic Set No. 4"—A1	To end.

Music Notes:—From the above plot, it would seem that the strength of the picture depended upon its melodramatic possibilities, but the opposite is true. The story is strong and sympathetic, the melodramatic action simply strengthens the pathos.

The melodramatic numbers are, however, very necessary in your musical set-up, if you desire your music to synchronize properly with the screen action.

The picture intermingles underworld life with incidents in high finance and society life. Nos. 9, 10, 12, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 27, 28, 30, 31 and 32 are all melodramatic numbers and should need no explanation. With the exception of Nos. 15 and 16 none play very long.

No. 1 is a selection of arias from the Puccini operas and is very good. It is so arranged that it can be considered the very best of picture music. Nos. 2 and 11 should be melodious 4/4 intermezzos. It must not be of slow tempo. Nos. 3 and 5 must be sweet romantic numbers.

No. 4 is a light lively gavotte. Nos 6 and 8 should be the same number. A love song is preferable. No. 7 should be a classy waltz lento. Nos. 8, 14, 26 and 29 should be long slow numbers of romantic appeal, having some dramatic effect.

The first half of the picture is easily adapted to the organ. The last half requires orchestral accompaniment.

PHILADELPHIANS—NOTE

The Kimball Organ business has outgrown the former method of handling from the General Eastern Office in New York.

A PHILADELPHIA OFFICE has been opened at 144 SOUTH ELEVENTH STREET (phone, Filbert 2932), in charge of Mr. Wm. B. King, for the past four years associated with the New York office.

The office starts with half a dozen resident organ builders, guaranty that the Kimball standard of annual tuning contract service will be maintained and that organs will be finished on time.

Consult Mr. King about your new organ.

THE TOP THOUGHT

The Standard Dictionary defines that much abused word, "Service" as follows:

> "To promote the interest of another--to contribute to the well-being of--to aid by useful offices."

We should like to find another term for this oft mishandled word—one which truthfully represents the honesty of purpose and effort we are putting behind it in the production of sterling pictures and in selling service.

But since a better term is not at hand, we ask you to accept the dictionary's definition as the top thought of this organization.

And, as evidence that this thought is one consistently at the forefront in all of our relations with exhibitors, we beg to offer a few excerpts from a weighty volume of appreciative expressions which our patrons have been good enough to voluntarily make.

> "We have run the V-L-S-E productions almost exclusively in our house, and it is indeed remarkable the success with which we have met, considering the fact that we ran most of the subjects after your first run account had run them a week, and in fact, even repeated on subjects we ourselves had run, and played to a good business each time.
> "Your suggestions have been of great help and benefit to us, although we will admit that we were very hard to convince as to the value of second runs. But once we got the idea, we went ahead with great success."
> PAUL HILLMAN,
> Manager Lyric Theatre, Cincinnati.

> "We lost considerable money in this house. We did not consider that there was any chance of getting it back. But in the light of the service which you have rendered us, we are thoroughly convinced and with such cooperation any exhibitor can make a big success."
> GEORGE LIPTINCOTT,
> Manager Leader Theatre, Gloucester, N. J.

> "I also wish to take this opportunity to thank you for the cooperation which you have extended us, and to say that it is a great pleasure to do business with such an organization. The concern that has a management which takes as much interest in an exhibitor's business as if it were its own, is the one that the exhibitor can rely upon absolutely."
> Sec'y-Treas's Garden Theatre Amusement Company, Davenport, Iowa

Just how comprehensive is the service to which these exhibitors refer, is illustrated on the last page of this advertisement by excerpts from an article appearing in the editorial columns of a recent issue of Harper's Weekly.

If you believe that co-operation of the fullest kind makes for your best interests you should not fail to read it.

HARPER'S WEEKLY
A Journal of Civilization

The moving-picture distributor today is far-sighted enough to see that the marketing of entertainment is no different than the marketing of shoes, soap or any other commodity – that the same scientific merchandising methods that apply in the commercial field, apply to the sale of a moving-picture exhibitor's seats; and that it is just as essential for the photoplay producer to help the exhibitor make a profit on those seats as it is for the breakfast food manufacturer to help the dealer move the goods off his shelves.

Mr. Walter W. Irwin, who handles the distributing interests of one of the largest moving-picture concerns in the business, the V. L. S. E. Company, says: "Our duty is only half performed when we have sold our goods to the exhibitor. The other half, equally important, is to see to it that he resells them to his own substantial advantage." In order that this may be accomplished the V. L. S. E. Company demands that an exhibitor spend as much for advertising, as he does for film, and that he must show the feature at least three consecutive days.

The experience of an exhibitor in a southern city is an illustration of the way in which these principles work out. This city has always been a "daily change" town, until the apostles of the new method struck it. After much persuasion the manager of one of the theatres was prevailed upon to run a feature for a whole week. Extensive advertising was done in the newspapers, and much billboard space was also used. The run attracted the largest attendance ever recorded in that city, more than six thousand seeing the feature on the last day it was shown.

Tabulated, the result of this experiment in dollars and cents as compared with the returns from the daily change program were about as follows

OLD SYSTEM

Average receipts per day for week	$300.00
Film rental per day	25.00
Advertising per day	50.00
Overhead expenses per day	100.00
Total expenses	175.00
Net profits per day	$125.00

NEW SYSTEM

Average receipts per day for week	$550.00
Film rental per day	50.00
Advertising per day	100.00
Overhead expenses per day	100.00
Total expenses	250.00
Net profits per day	$300.00

In other words, the net profits for the week were $2100 as compared with the net profits of $875.00 per week under the old system, or a gain of $1225.

All this is indicative of the new tendency in the moving-picture business. Chaotic and reckless at the start, it is fast being put on a safe and sound basis. In a business as well as artistic sense, the "movies" are on the rise.

The Strange Case of Mary Page

WITH HENRY WALTHALL AND EDNA MAYO

The Most Powerful Series Ever Produced

Look What the Critics Say!

"After viewing the First Episode of Essanay's serial, 'The Strange Case of Mary Page,' I was impressed that it was one of the most compelling photoplays I had ever seen. * * * I had seen a photoplay that held me with overmastering grip—a live, red-blooded photoplay in which men and women loved, lived and fought as real entities, and not the first installment of a mere serial film story."—James S. McQuade in The Moving Picture World.

"Leaves little room for improvement. J. Charles Haydon has used effective methods of direction. His theater scenes are real, and the back-stage atmosphere, always attractive to the uninitiated, is very good. The photographic effects are entirely effective."—Peter Milne in The Motion Picture News.

"Promises to be of unusual interest."—James A. Milligan in The Billboard.

"Should be a success. Edna Mayo acts with her usual skill. Her co-star (Mr. Walthall) plays the romantic young attorney with all the ability he showed in a somewhat similar part in 'The Birth of a Nation.'"—D. G. Watts in The New York Morning Telegraph.

"Roles well handled. Sure to attract."—Genevieve Harris in Motography.

What's in a Name?

CENSORSHIP is censorship, call it by whatever name you please, disguise it in any way you like.

You may paint out the word "censorship" and paint in the word "regulation," but if the facts and features of the matter remain the same, you still have censorship.

That is the radical, the inescapable fault of the re-hashed, warmed over Crafts-Hughes-Smith "regulatory commission" measure.

WITH all the tinkering and the patching and the repairing that has been done to it, to put it into shape again after the "torpedoing" administered by the motion picture delegation which opposed it at the recent hearings, the Hughes bill remains what it always was,—a pre-publicity control of motion pictures, guided by no standards, governed by no restrictions, limited by nothing but the limits of the censors' intelligence.

That is censorship,—the sort of censorship we have in Ohio, in Pennsylvania, in Kansas. If you don't like the word censorship, you may give it any other name, but the uses to which the law will be put, and its workings in fact will be precisely the same.

NINE recommendations for the improvement of the Hughes bill have been made to the Committee on Education by a group of manufacturers who sincerely believe either that censorship is inevitable, or that it is the best possible form of regulation.

The total signficance of the nine recommendations is a startling commentary upon the flagrant injustice and the childishly ridiculous errors of the original Hughes measure.

For when the entire body of recommendations is reduced to its lowest terms, they accomplish nothing more than to bring the Hughes bill up to the level now occupied by the Ohio and Pennsylvania censorship laws!

THE two state laws just mentioned were framed by men who had some knowledge of what they were doing. But the present Federal measure was put into legislative form by amateurs who knew so little about the business that they not only framed it to work the greatest possible hardship upon the motion picture, but included in it clauses which Congress could not pass because they were fundamental violations of constitutional rights.

In other words, the Hughes bill in its first form was so utterly impossible, that the best and the most the attorneys for the group of producers referred to could do, was to make the measure as good as or, to be more exact, as free from indefensible provisions, as the present state censorship laws are.

BUT that is the most they could do. Nothing more could be done with any law, which started with censorship as a fundamental principle.

And anyone who fondly believes that this or any other series of changes could make a just, fair and tolerant statute out of a censorship law, has a rude awakening in store for him. When he begins to feel its application he will find out his mistake.

CENSORSHIP is founded upon a lie and a delusion,—a lie in the case of those who profess and don't believe it, a delusion in case of those who profess it and do believe it.

That lie, or delusion, is this,—that any man, or any body of men, can know and determine what is morally harmful, in a drama or a book or a photoplay, down to the smallest detail of the subject, for all the rest of their fellow-citizens, as exactly as they could determine a safe standard of food, drugs, sanitation, bridge construction or any other thoroughly scientific subject.

WHEN a man or a commission of men undertake to ascertain what ingredients, in a food preparation or a drug preparation, are harmless, and in what proportion and combination, they are grappling with a problem to which there is an exact solution, the accuracy of which can be demonstrated.

But when that same man or commission of men undertake to discover what ingredients in a story, or a drama, or a picture, are harmless, and what ones are harmful, they are facing a problem in which there are no facts obtainable, in which everything is theory and speculation that cannot be supported by any kind of proof.

ONE man's opinion is as good as another's,—both are absolutely valueless as reliable working standards. What may prove harmful to one person will fail utterly to injure another.

The episode which a thousand might witness unmoved will derange the mind of the thousand and first spectator of it. The scene that makes a saint of some reprobate, might an hour later convert a man, until then blameless in his life, into a profligate.

WHY? Because the factor which determines whether or no any given scene, episode, or incident is harmful, is not in the episode itself, but in the nature of the person who sees it.

The proverb, "human nature is the same the world over."

What's in a Name?

is true, but like all such statements, it is a tremendous exaggeration of the truth.

Men and women are substantially the same in some of their responses to the conditions of life. But psychologists and physicians will tell you that the widest degrees of variation, the maximum of fluctuation, the greatest contrasts are to be found on the moral side of the human being.

That is the one great demonstrable fact about mankind, —that the actions and conduct of individual men and women in matters involving morality are so fluctuating that nothing, but the fact of their uncertainty can be predicted of them.

IN the light of such facts, is it not the height of impudence, the supreme impertinence, that any man or body of men should undertake to make decisions where there is no basis for a just and fair decision, and where no human power can furnish them with such a basis?

In the case of food, drugs, sanitation problems, scientific experiment can and has determined that certain definite rules hold good and if violated, will be followed by disaster in the majority of cases.

In the construction of bridges, buildings, highways, and other works of engineering, it can be demonstrated that to obtain safety, durability, solidity, ctrtain principles must be followed, certain standards must be maintained, certain grades of quality must be attained.

In the fixing of equable railroad rates, every fact necessary to fix a rate fair to shipper and carrier alike can be ascertained, and fully appreciated in its relation to every other fact.

BUT the moment you attempt to say, "this and that sort of a scene is fit subject for a book and a picture, but this other and that other kind of a scene is not,"—aside from acts obscene and indecent in detail,—and in purpose, —you are in a position where only the arbitrary might which a law can give makes you right. Not one of your decisions would stand the test applied to judicial verdicts, because it would be utterly impossible of proof.

There is a fundamental rule of the courts that any statement, theory or piece of testimony which is not susceptible of legal proof, or cannot be supported by valid evidence, has no standing and is entitled to no consideration by either a judge or a jury.

That is the difference between a "legal certainty" and "a moral certainty." That is what lawyers mean when they say they "have a case" or have "no case."

And it is upon moral certainties—which is only another name for moral uncertainties—that any and all censors must base their so-called decision, because there is nothing else upon which they can be based.

THESE are the real reasons why censorship is un-American, why it is contrary to the letter and the spirit of all Anglo-Saxon law, why it is unconstitutional, and why just and fair-minded men should hesitate to give it their approval, much less their support.

The Camera, the Wagon and the Star

THE fact that a man or a woman is at home before the footlights doesn't mean that the same persons will be, or are at home in front of the camera.

The camera is a great smasher of delusions, and a meciless critic of faulty acting. That is, you can't convince the camera that a stage star has any business on the screen just because he or she is a stage star.

The camera refuses to believe any such thing, and brings out its unbelief in stingingly clear fashion. The moral is addressed to producers: "Be careful about hitching your wagon to a star."

The screen, like the stage, must develop, has developed in many cases, its own individual actors. Everybody knows who they are; everybody knows why they are what they are. Stage stars who come to the screen may be instantaneous successes; some of them have been—or they may be instantaneous and permanent failures. Most of them, unfortunately, have landed in the latter classification. The fact that a picture has a successful stage star in the leading role means nothing in itself. This is the fable of the Camera, the Wagon, and the Star.

The Board of Trade Dinner; What It Signifies

IF there remain any doubters as to the significance and dignity of the motion picture industry, they must constitute a slender minority, since the first annual dinner of the Motion Picture Board of Trade, when the President of the United States was the guest of honor.

The story of that dinner is told fully in this issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS. Reading it, one becomes keenly aware of the lightning growth the industry has had—of its approach to a commanding position—for this is what is implied, and emphasized, in the presence of President Wilson at the dinner.

A few months ago, such a thing would have been considered possible, but hardly probable. Now, in retrospect, it seems entirely natural. And it places upon the industry this silent injunction: the necessity for living up to the tribute of the President's recognition, for using its great power along right lines, for making secure its position as the fifth industry in the country.

Film Brief Holds Hughes Bill Unconstitutional

Seabury Argument in Its Main Divisions Maintains That Congress Has No Power to Enact a Statute Based on the Principle of Pre-Publicity Censorship—"Proposed Legislation Is Wholly Unnecessary for the Correction of Any Existing Evil and Would Constitute a Dangerous and Un-American Proceeding"

THE brief of the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, in opposition to the Federal Censorship Bill just submitted to the House Committee on Education, was drawn by William M. Seabury, of the New York Bar, general counsel for the Board of Trade.

It is a thorough presentation of the legal arguments against the enactment of the Hughes measure, attacks it on constitutional grounds, shows that it is unnecessary, and suggests the substitute measure, viz., the amendment of the Federal Penal Code, as recommended by MOTION PICTURE NEWS, and as introduced in the House by Representative Towner of Wisconsin.

In its main divisions the brief argues (1) that Congress has no power to enact any bill based upon the principle of pre-publicity censorship of the motion picture; (2) that, assuming Congress may lawfully enact a censorship law, the bill now proposed is unconstitutional and improper in many respects; (3) that, assuming without conceding the existence of the power in Congress to enact a censorship law, any such enactment is unnecessary.

The brief points out in vigorous language that "the proposed legislation is not only wholly unnecessary and an utterly ineffective and a useless inexpedient for the correction of any existing evil, but that it is ruinous to the fifth largest industry in the country, and will constitute a vicious, dangerous and un-American piece of legislation."

Then follows a description of the industry itself, taken from the brief submitted by the counsel for the defendants in the so-called Motion Picture Trust case. With this goes a tabulated summary of the work of the National Board of Censorship for the year 1915.

The Press Against Censorship

Discussing the bill from the standpoint of the public, the Seabury brief cites arguments against Federal Censorship from editorials in newspapers throughout the United States.

This array of opinions shows that the chief papers in the country are opposed to the senseless attempt to establish further espionage over the industry.

The following newspapers are quoted: Detroit Free Press, Chicago Journal, Philadelphia Public Ledger, Chicago Daily News, Washington Post, Hartford Post, New York Evening Sun, St. Louis Republic, Topeka Capital, Louisville Herald, Topeka State Journal, Cleveland Plain Dealer, Toledo Blade, Springfield Union, New York Evening Mail, Pittsburgh Chronicle, Waltham (Mass.) News, Fremont (Ohio) Messenger, Boston Herald, Montgomery Advertiser, Lawrence (Mass.) Eagle, Joplin Globe, Elizabeth (N. J.) Times, Beaver Falls (Pa.) Tribune, Boston Transscript, Bridgeport Telegram, St. Louis Post-Dispatch, Philadelphia Telegraph, Walton (Mass.) News, Houston Chronicle, Memphis Commercial-Appeal, Atlantic City Press, New York Morning Telegraph, Chicago Tribune, Pawtucket Times, Columbus (Ohio) Journal, Columbia (S. C.) Record, St. Joseph Gazette, Fort Collins (Col.) Review, Brockton Times, St. Louis Times, Portland (Ore.) Journal, Hackensack (N. J.) Republican and Norwalk (Ohio) Reflector-Herald.

Taking up the point that Federal censorship would be unconstitutional, it is shown that "Censorship necessarily involves an exercise of the police power, which power rests solely with the several States, and that power cannot under the cloak of regulating commerce lawfully be exerted by Congress as to matters properly within the control of the States."

Federal Regulation Unlawful

It is shown throughout the brief that "in reality it is the exhibition of pictures of an immoral nature which Congress proposes to prohibit by the exercise of its control over the subject of interstate commerce."

It is further shown that "this result may be lawfully achieved by Congress by simply prohibiting the transportation or introduction of any indecent motion picture film into the country or among the several States in interstate commerce. . . . It is distinctly improper for Congress to undertake the guardianship of the morals of the people of the several States."

The nature of the topics of the pictures displayed to the public is discussed. The similarity of the news picture to the newspaper and that of the photoplay to the drama, are shown.

The conclusion is drawn: "The news and serial motion picture can only be treated the same as newspapers and periodicals, while a photoplay can only be treated as dramas are treated."

When then should the motion picture be singled out for censorship?

Legal opinions are cited to show that Federal censorship would be an unwarranted invasion of the police power of the States; that such a law could not be upheld as a license law; that it cannot be considered a lawful exercise of the power to regulate commerce with foreign nations and among the several States.

In support of the last contention, the brief shows conclusively that the censorship principle does not underlie the rate-making powers of the Interstate Commerce Commission; or the powers of the Federal Trade Commission; or those of the Federal Reserve Board; or of any other commission ever created by the Government.

No Comparison with Pure Food Law

Neither can it be claimed that the censorship principle underlies the pure food and drugs act. This is a very important point, and we quote the brief in explanation:

"Whether food is impure and consequently dangerous to health, whether drugs contain opium, morphia, or poison of prohibited character, or whether a particular cow has or has not an infectious disease, are all medical facts the existence of which is susceptible of accurate determination. . . . But the same result cannot possibly be achieved by the censorship of a drama or of a motion picture.

"There is admittedly nothing inherently dangerous from the standpoint of morality in contact with the physical substance of the films, and whether or not a particular picture when exhibited to the public . . . will or will not impair the morals of the community is not susceptible of specific determination except in very gross and plain cases.

"Such matters involve honest differences of opinion. These are not proper matters for determination by any one commission for the benefit of a country of one hundred million people."

The bill is shown to be unconstitutional for the following additional reasons:

The provision of Section 5 that "the commission shall license every film submitted to it and intended for entrance into interstate commerce," etc., would be unconstitutional because Congress has no power to legislate with reference to any matter "intended for entrance into interstate commerce."

All Congress can do is to legislate with reference to merchandise which actually IS in interstate commerce. If such a law were passed, the motion picture industry would be torn to pieces.

Every film would have to be passed on before exhibition. It couldn't even be sent from the studio to the home office of the producer until the Commission had seen it. The result would be chaos.

Bill Allows Commission Too Much Power

The bill would also give the Commission the right to force any "amplifications or alterations" it pleased. The Commission would be given the authority to direct the manufacturer to add several thousand feet of film solely for the purpose of exploiting some idea the Commission wanted exploited.

It is pointed out also that certain provisions of the bill would virtually have the effect of confiscating the property of the producers, and this would be unlawful.

The government by forcing amplifications of films would in reality become the producer, not on its own capital but on the capital and money of the producer.

The bill makes no provision of any kind for judicial or other review of the actions of the Commission. "The failure to make suitable provision for review of the acts of the Commission is in reality oppressive."

Finally, the brief shows that the enactment of the Hughes Bill is unnecessary.

It is unnecessary because the mere transmission of the physical substance of a film through interstate commerce does not involve any question of morality.

That cannot arise until the film is actually exhibited. When it is exhibited, the question of its morality or its immorality is a matter for the individual States to determine, since the film is shown, of course, within the confines of particular States.

"The whole argument of the proponents of the bill," says the brief, "is that immoral pictures should not exist. We agree, but the proponents say, 'Make the exhibition of immoral films impossible by censorship,' while we say, 'Make it impossible by suitable provisions in the criminal law prohibiting the transportation of such films in interstate commerce, leaving it to the local communities to regulate, as they see fit, the motion picture exhibitions within their respective domains.'"

Would Not Obviate Other Censorship

Furthermore, Federal censorship would not dispense with other forms of censorship.

"The only excuse for any censorship is a desire to afford children extreme protection. But, if censorship is to benefit the children, each play would have to be censored from the standpoint of the child, so that only children's pictures would thereafter be exhibited. This would destroy the industry."

The ludicrous manner in which censorship laws have been enforced, the ridiculous "cuts" which have been made by censors, are cited to show that censorship is inefficient because it is a mere question of personal opinion.

The brief also answers several arguments advanced in favor of Federal censorship by Canon Chase. His argument that the bill is an exercise of the licensing power of the Government is disposed of by this argument:

"The learned doctor overlooked the fact that the Federal Government has no licensing power in connection with matters involving the exercise of police power by the individual States."

The brief closes with the presentation of the substitute determined upon by the industry, and now before Congress in the form of the Towner Bill:

A Remedy Is at Hand

"An efficient remedy for any existing evil is at hand. So far as Congress is concerned, let it amend Section 245 of the Federal Penal Code by inserting the words 'motion picture film' therein, so that by no possibility could it be successfully contended that the section, as amended, is still inapplicable to indecent and improper motion picture films.

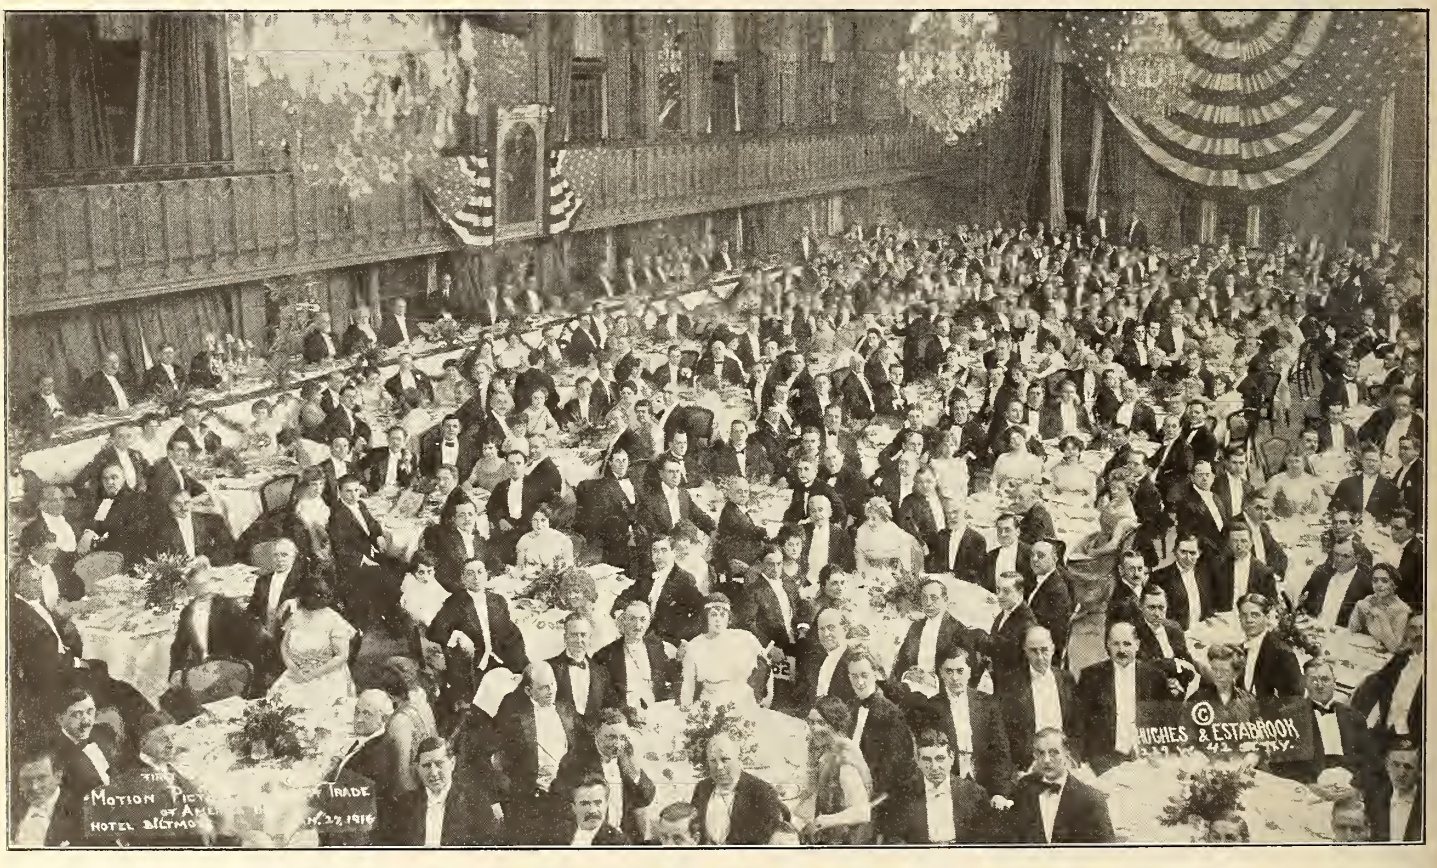
"The seriousness of the offense and of the punishment prescribed therefor by Section 245 of the Federal Code should not be forgotten. The offender is subject to a fine of not more than $5,000 or to imprisonment for not more than five years, or both punishments.

"The punishment falls upon the person who knowingly sends an improper film and on the person who knowingly receives it. Such an enactment would be a highly commendable exercise of Congressional power. It would be a frank, open and honest exercise of the Congressional power to regulate commerce, the existence of which is undisputed.

"It would not be a usurpation of the police power of the States, and we respectfully submit that the integrity and good faith which, as a whole, advises Congress to pass a drastic criminal statute penalizing specific wrongdoing, cannot be successfully or intelligently questioned."

Appended to the brief are copies of the Hughes Bill, the censorship laws of Ohio, Kansas and Pennsylvania, and a copy of Section 245 of the Federal Criminal Code with the proposed amendment.

The brief and its appendices cover 95 printed pages.



A Panorama of the First Annual Dinner of the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, Inc., given at the Hotel Biltmore, New York City, January 27. More than 700 guests were present. President Wilson was the guest of honor; Mayor John P. Mitchel of New York and Collector of the Port Dudley Field Malone were also among the speakers.

First Board of Trade Banquet, Attended by President Wilson, Marks New Era in Industry

Nearly One Thousand Guests with Motion Picture Affiliations Hear Chief Magistrate of the Nation at the Hotel Biltmore in New York, January 27—Mrs. Wilson Graces the Occasion with Her Presence, and Many Men Prominent in the Professions and in Public Life Sit on the Dais with the Speakers— Mr. Wilson Pays Tribute to the Aims and Influence of the Business

ONE of the most impressive things that has ever happened in the motion picture industry was the first annual dinner of the Motion Picture Board of Trade, at the Hotel Biltmore in New York, January 27.

The rapid strides taken by the makers of pictures and the growth of the business has attracted so much attention as to be almost a by-word, and certainly the basis of many a joke now-a-days, but all the leading manufacturers, distributors and exhibitors of motion picture are united in the belief that the first dinner of the Board of Trade conducted the industry into a new epoch.

Not only were the President of the United States and the First Lady of the Land, Mayor Mitchel and other officials present to show the substantial nature of the occasion, but men noted in many of the professions, together with as great a representation of the varied branches of the industry as has ever been gathered, were there to testify to the standing and influence of the motion picture in the life of the present-day world. The occasion was brilliant in every sense.

"It means that we have arrived at our majority," said W. W. Irwin, in addressing the diners. "It is a birthday celebration—a manhood birthday, honored by the attendance of a great man, the chief executive, holding the greatest office in the world.

"It means that, with five hundred millions invested, with nearly a million people employed, ranking fifth in the industries of the country, we can no longer be termed an infant industry. We have arrived at our majority, with full responsibility, not only to each other, but to the public. We cheerfully accept the responsibility."

Nearly 1,000 Present at Banquet

Nearly one thousand men and women affiliated with some branch of the industry applauded Mr. Irwin's sentiment as expressing accurately the keynote of the gathering. Enthusiasm ran high, and everybody expressed the belief that the "get together" spirit was triumphant.

Under the active supervision of J. W. Binder, executive secretary, elaborate arrangements had been made for the handling of the crowd of diners, and there was no slip.

Mr. Binder was assisted in the more important details by Paul Gulick, of Universal, but the success of the event is laid to the fact that everybody in the Board of Trade lent a hand and helped to keep things moving.

The activity was not confined to any one branch of the trade, and even exhibitors from distant parts of the country were present and gave their hearty co-operation in the proceedings.

The dinner was given in the great banquet hall on the eleventh floor of the Biltmore. There were seventy-five tables besides the speakers' table on the rostrum, and at eight o'clock these were all filled. For the handling of so large a crowd on short notice, everything was in remarkable order.

At the speakers' table sat J. Stuart Blackton, the toastmaster; J. W. Binder, Walter W. Irwin, Dudley Field Malone, George Eastman, Nicholas Power, Roy Howard, Joseph W. Engel, Fire Commissioner Adamson, John R. Freuler, Hudson Maxim, W. Stephen Bush, Edwin Markham, Bartow S. Weeks, E. A. MacManus, Dr. Cyrus Townsend Brady, William F. McCombs, and Bainbridge Colby.

Later, when the President arrived, he and his party, which included Mayor Mitchel, Joseph P. Tumulty and Dr. Cary Grayson, occupied seats at the head of the table.

Reception Committee Meets President's Party

At half past ten o'clock, the reception committee, consisting of John R. Freuler, P. A. Powers, E. A. MacManus, W. Stephen Bush, William A. Johnston and J. W. Binder, met the Presidential party on the ground floor of the Biltmore, and conducted the distinguished guests to the banquet hall, where they were received with great enthusiasm.

The honors were divided between the President, and Mrs. Wilson, who with a small party of women friends, took a position on the balcony opposite the President and bowed her acknowledgments to the cheering men and women. She remained on the balcony until the President finished his address, and left the hall.

Before the President was introduced, Mr. Blackton read telegrams from Thomas A. Edison, Thomas Dixon, D. W. Griffith and Carl Laemmle, expressing their sympathy with the gathering, and their regrets that they could not be present.

President Wilson quickly sensed the fact that the gathering was strictly one of picture men, and adapted himself to it. His address was confined largely to his own contact with the industry.

"I wondered on my way here what would be expected of me," he said. "It occurred to me perhaps, that I would only be expected to go through the motions of a speech. And then I reflected that, never having seen myself speak, and generally having my thought concentrated upon what I had to say, I had not the least opinion of what my motions were when I made a speech.

"It had never occurred to me, in my simplicity, to make a speech before a mirror. If you will give me time I will rehearse this difficult task and return and perform it for you.

President Analyzes Personal Screen Movements

"I have sometimes been very much chagrined at seeing myself in a motion picture. I have often wondered if I really could be that kind of a guy. The extraordinary rapidity with which I walked, for example; the instantaneous and apparently automatic nature of my motions; the way in which I produce uncommon grimaces, and altogether, the extraordinary exhibition I make of myself sends me to bed very unhappy.

"And I often think to myself that although all the world's a stage, and men and women but actors upon it, after all, the external appearances of things are very superficial indeed.

"I am very much more interested in what my fellow men are thinking about than in the motions through which they are going, and while we unconsciously display a good deal of human nature in our visible actions there are some very deep waters which no picture can sound.

"The best way to silence any friend of yours whom you know to be a fool is to induce him to hire a hall. Nothing chills pretense like exposure; nothing will bear the tests of examination for a shorter length of time than pretense. At least so I try to persuade myself, and yet there are some humbugs that have been at large a long time.

"I suppose there is always a rising generation whom they can fool, but the older heads ought not to permit themselves to be fooled; and I should think that in a year like the year 1916, when there is to be a common reckoning for everybody, men would hurry up and begin to tell the truth.

"They are not hurrying about it; they are taking their time; but the American people are going to insist upon it before this year is over—that everybody comes up and is counted on the great questions of the day. They are not going to take any excuses; they are not going to take any pretenses; they are going to insist upon the goods delivered on the spot.

"Not What the Pictures Make Him"

"And anybody that declines to deliver them is going to go bankrupt, and ought to go bankrupt. Everybody ought to get what's coming to them. But I came here to say that I hoped you would not believe that I am what I appear to be in the pictures you make of me. I really am a pretty decent fellow, and I have a lot of emotions that do not show on the surface; and the things that I don't say would fill a library. The great cross of public life is that you are not allowed to say all the things that you think."

Mayor Mitchel's speech was a plea for preparedness in a military way, using as his text Mr. Blackton's previous references to what motion pictures have done and are doing to drive this lesson home.

Dudley Field Malone took the same angle, and referred to specific pictures and the work they have done. He made a strong plea for the upholding of the President's hands in his plans for adequate national defense.

Walter W. Irwin, the next speaker, confined himself to the gathering itself, and its meaning to the industry as a whole, as well as the principles for which the Board of Trade stands and the program it has outlined.

"This celebrates the amalgamation and the cooperation of each branch of the industry, for progression, protection and promotion," he said. "Progression in the creation and maintenance of proper business ethics among ourselves; progression in the development of the merit and the uplifting qualities of our product, so that we may be able to fully comply with our responsibility to an exacting public.

"Protection against malice and jealousy; protection against intolerance born of ignorance, as demonstrated by legalized censorship. There is only one form of censorship to which we will submit, the censorship of public opinion, the only censorship consistent with American freedom, without a reversal of the United States constitution.

"Confidence of Exhibitors Necessary"—Irwin

"We welcome and honor the confidence of the thinking and discerning public; we want the confidence of the exhibitors, we must have their confidence in full measure, for unless we possess it, we will not be able to obtain their co-operation, and without their co-operation much of our most important effort will come to naught.

"We seek their membership, we welcome them; through their membership we will obtain their co-operation not only for protection, but because they are the best people to furnish us with reliable information of the higher standards constantly demanded by an exacting public.

"This month in Washington, in opposing the un-American censorship bill, the large body of exhibitors present was of great assistance; at least equal to that furnished by any other branch of the industry. We are proud of our industry, proud of its success, proud of its moral standards.

"Our responsibility we must now feel to be the heavier by reason of the recognition and consideration which has been shown to us tonight by the Chief Magistrate of this country."

Edwin Markham told of some of his experiences with pictures and picture people, and then J. W. Binder, executive secretary of the Board of Trade spoke of the aims and ambitions of the organization. He said:

Binder Speaks on Past and Future of Industry

"I have a heart full of matter that I would like to talk to you about, about this great industry of ours, an industry which is so dear to me, its brilliant future, its brilliant past. I would like to stand here for an hour, and tell you some of the stories I have heard of the people who made this industry, who were responsible for its beginning; of their tremendous struggles against tremendous odds; how they triumphed over those odds and how they are today the honored heads of great institutions.

"Those stories must be told at the same time. And one of the things the Motion Picture Board of Trade is attempting to do today is to have that vast material—interesting human interest material—gathered up in a book of about four or five hundred pages to be written by one of the greatest writers in the country, to tell this wonderful story of the motion picture indusry.

"I simply want to say that this dinner, the first dinner of the Motion Picture Board of Trade of America, a lusty infant of only four months old, is a fair semblance of what will be in the future; because, ladies and gentlemen, this motion picture industry in which we are engaged and which we so dearly love, is but struggling to express itself at the present time."

"Speaking of That Board of Trade Banquet—"

Here Are a Few Side Lights on the Board of Trade Dinner Compiled by "Our Own Official Eye Witness" for the Edification of Those Whose Time Is So Precious That They Can Read Only When on the Run to Keep the Next Appointment

FOR putting itself on the map in such distinguished and decided manner, much credit goes to the Motion Picture Board of Trade. With the President of the United States, the First Lady of the Land, the Mayor of New York, the Chairman of the National Democratic Committee, the Collector of the Port of New York, the President's Secretary, the Fire Commissioner of New York, and writers, lawyers and others whose names are known from Fort Lee to Hollywood, present at the first annual dinner, there can be no argument as to the standing of the Motion Picture Board of Trade.

There may have been men who did not "recognize" the Board; they would have been hard to find the night of the dinner. Every prominent concern in pictures was represented, and elaborately represented, at that; in most cases the presidents of the companies were there. It says much for the Board, and for the whole industry at that, that such a dinner would not have been possible six months ago.

J. W. Binder, executive secretary, to whom must go the lion's share of the acclaim for the work done, neatly expressed the sudden growth of the idea of the dinner. It seems the idea was only about six days old when the event became a fact.

One of his first duties was to invite the President to attend. The President accepted so promptly that Mr. Binder was somewhat carried off his feet by the realization that he had a life-sized job even on his hands. We treat ourselves to the view that he realized it thoroughly and handled it accordingly.

Nor does one overlook the fact that Paul Gulick again demonstrated his ability to work twenty-six hours a day. He was one of those directly responsible for the arrangements. And seldom have such arrangements been more capably handled.

J. Stuart Blackton, in the course of his toastmasterful remarks, told one which puts the laugh on the censorship fans. "In one of the states a film of the Life of George Washington was censored, and the Battle of Bunker Hill was cut out. This was the report: 'British and American soldiers both were shown, using firearms in a careless and indiscriminate manner, and with intent to kill.' And so they cut out poor old Bunker Hill."

We have the best of authority for stating that President Wilson's remark that he had recently been talking to a lot of liars came, immediately after his exchange of salutations with the reception committee, merely as a coincidence. We hasten to repeat that it was a mere coincidence.

Good taste was evidenced on every hand. Possibly no greater instance can be cited than the prominent display of Arthur James' noted little monograph, "I Am the Motion Picture," in the reception rooms. Nor was the tablet presented with anybody's compliments, nor attempt to show what concern Mr. James is connected with. Good taste, it appears, is the unwritten motto of the Board of Trade.

It was an interesting sight that in the reception room before the march into the mangers began. "What, you here, Bill?" was a common form of salutation, and it always came with a note of real surprise. Nor was the surprise occasioned in many cases by Bill's presence. It takes us off our feet sometimes to have it forced upon our realization that our friends, also, have been able to get hold of dress suits.

We hear of one man who urged the seating committee to be sure and place him among men he knew. They did; he knew his neighbors so well that he got his nice new shirt all rumpled up in keeping his hand on his watch. We are not going to mention his name—not we; we think too much of Merritt to give him any such publicity as that.

There was something to be learned by everybody in the business at the dinner. For instance, the way Edwin Markham padded that one-reel story of the poet who came to see him out into a five-reel feature was an object lesson to every scenario writer present.

And speaking of scenario writers, Dr. Cyrus Townsend Brady has learned the lesson of quick, snappy action from his association with the production side. His speech consisted of "Ladies and Gentlemen: How do you do. Good night." (Loud Applause.)

What promises to rank as one of the great meetings in history was that between "Pop" Lubin and Edwin Thanhouser, who were brought together, gently and dexterously, by L. J. Rubenstein at the Thanhouser table. Those who stood within hearing report that Mr. Lubin's historical remark was "Mr. Thanhouser, I presume."

At this same Thanhouser table towered the only two hats visible in the whole room. One of them, a springy, flowery thing, measuring scarcely more than six feet in circumference, if that, shielded the face of Florence La Badie from the glare of the cooperhewitts overhead.

There is no use disputing the question of personal pulchritude. There have been a number of varying opinions expressed as to who was the most beatiful woman present, but we know where Lillian Walker can get one good full-sized vote. In fact, Miss Walker's portrayal of herself was one of the best things she has ever done; and, as usual, Wilfrid North was directing.

"Doc" Shallenberger, Mrs. Shallenberger and Roy McCardell were foregathered at the same table. There seems to be a bond of sympathy between those who have escaped from New Rochelle.

W. W. Hodkinson is credited with forming and giving utterance to a joke. Nothing from afar the crowds thronging the "swedish buffet" and impatiently demanding impossible things from the single waiter who was dispensing the appetizers, he is said to have remarked: "They also wait who only stand and serve."

Chester Beecroft denies that he was kept so late at the office that he had to dress in the shelter of the Worth monument in Madison square. We didn't believe it, anyhow.

"Jim" Corbett had the worst time of anyone at the dinner. He wasn't able to get there.

There was a little something for everybody in the toastmaster's speech. "We are gathered," he said, "for our Mutual (cheers from John R. Freuler) good. Progress, protection and promotion are the Paramount ('Hear, hear!' from W. W. Hodkinson) issues of the day.

"Let us make this our Universal (applause from Paul Gulick) aim. There is a most General (amen' from Commodore Blackton himself) tendency along the path (forced cheers from J. A. Berst) of progress, and we look for a most Equitable (we give you one guess) distribution of prosperity during the coming year."

KELLERMANN PICTURE HALF FINISHED BY BRENON FOR FOX

Herbert Brenon, director of the William Fox million dollar picture featuring Annette Kellermann, sends word from Kingston, Jamaica, where he has been since last August, that he has the picture half completed.

The length of time required so far was necessitated by the enormous amount of construction and reconstruction work that had to be accomplished before real work on the story could be started.

William E. Shay, Ricca Allen, Violet Horner, Violet Rockwell, Marcelle, Florence Deshon, Jane Lee and many others are assisting Miss Kellermann.

"SIS HOPKINS" FILMS RELEASED THROUGH GENERAL ON FRIDAYS

Rumors that the "Sis Hopkins" comedies would be made a special release were officially quieted this week by the Kalem company. The announcement is made that the "Sis Hopkins" subjects will all be released through the General Film Company, taking the Friday date on Kalem's release schedule.

There will thus be no extra charge for these subjects which exhibitors will be able to secure just as they book any other program release.

In addition to these plans to put the "Sis Hopkins" comedies at the command of all exhibitors the pictures will all be one-reel subjects.

Reports from the Kalem offices, where the early productions have been shown to the company's officials, are more than enthusiastic.

"We have something new," said an executive of the company last week.

"These 'Sis Hopkins' comedies can't be called 'slapstick' or any other term that is usually used.

"They actually have plots, the company is made up of real players, and the action verges from rapid-fire slapstick to the more refined comedy of characters.

"There is even an occasional touch of heart interest, built about the character of Sis."

"THE HORRORS OF WAR," PATHE, MAKES RECORD IN CINCINNATI

Pathé's "The Horrors of War" has proved to be one of the strongest bookers of the past twelve months. Exhibitors who booked it for one day have had to arrange for longer runs owing to the great interest it has aroused.

Manager Holah of Pathé's Cincinnati office, for instance, wires that the Alhambra, a large theatre in the downtown district of that city, has booked it for a two weeks' solid run after the management had personally inspected it.

Mr. Weigel, a Cincinnati exhibitor, booked it at once on review, and will advertise the picture heavily. Mr. Holah reports that the Cincinnati exhibitors are unanimous in saying that it is the greatest war picture ever shown in Cincinnati or its vicinity.

Morosco Theatre Forsakes Stock for Photodrama

Famous Theatrical Landmark, Last Stronghold of "Legitimate" in Los Angeles, Gives Triangle Two Houses Where Its Program Can Be Seen Each Week

Special to Motion Picture News.

Los Angeles, Jan. 29.

AN important event in local film circles was the opening of the former Morosco stock theatre as a Triangle photoplay house, on Saturday evening, January 22.

This marks the invasion of the films into the only theatre in the city which has not heretofore been conducted as a motion picture theatre, and gives to Triangle two houses where all its releases will be shown each week.

The Burbank Triangle theatre, like the Majestic on Broadway, is leased by a corporation headed by D. W. Griffith and Mack Sennett. The Burbank will be under the management of J. A. Barry, who originally served as secretary to Mr. Griffith, and later was his personal representative in New York.

Prior to the opening many important changes were made at the theatre with regard to the seating, there being added a number of boxes, each containing six seats, at the rear of the orchestra floor, to satisfy the demands of West Coast people, who believe the farther seats from the screen are the better.

The lobby and foyer of the house were redecorated, and other features added that make the theatre attractive.

The opening bill consisted of "The Flying Torpedo," a Fine Arts subject featuring John Emerson and Bessie Love, and two Keystones—"The Great Pearl Tangle," with Sam Bernard, and "A Movie Star," featuring Mack Swain.

A sixteen-piece orchestra under the direction of J. C. Peterson furnished the music, and programs will begin at eleven-thirty, two, four-thirty and eight-fifteen.

The opening night audience was made up to a great extent of motion picture people, and practically every studio was represented by from one to twenty or more players, directors and writers.

Miss Love, star of the Fine Arts subject, was given a very pretentious ovation and showered with flowers. The audience discovered her presence at an intermission following the subject in which she appeared, and the applause which caused her father to induce her to go to the front of the theatre, continued until the house was again darkened for another subject.

Varied Supply of Comedies and Dramas from "U"

King Baggot, Edna Hunter, Edythe Roberts, Mary Fuller, Clara Byers, and Other Favorites Will Be Seen in New Productions

KING BAGGOT and Edna Hunter have just finished producing an Imp-Universal two real drama, "Jim Slocan, No. 42393," an automobile story, scenario by Bob Hill.

"The Unconventional Girl" is the title of Bob Hill's Imp-Universal latest comedy-drama in two reels with Edyth Roberts playing the leads. As the unconventional girl Edyth does cut some capers.

Wallace Irwin's story "Thrown to the Lions" is being made into a five-reel Mary Fuller feature for the Red Feather program by Director Lucius Henderson.

Harry Benham has just finished a two-reel comedy with Edna Pendleton, directed by Jack Harvey, called "Held for Ransom." It has a dog and a millinery store in it, so you can imagine in what atmosphere the director was working in.

"Homing Pigeons" is the title of a two-reel Universal drama just completed by Director Kelley, with Clara Byers playing the leading role.

"Why Mrs. Kentworth Lied" is the title of a five-reel Universal produced by Matt Moore, in which he plays lead with Jane Gail.

PATON-LAWRENCE COMPANY BACK FROM WASHINGTON, D. C.

Stuart Paton, director of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, has just returned from Washington, D. C., where he has been taking pictures with his Florence Lawrence Company.

"The Elusive Isabel" is the title of this first Florence Lawrence production.

Paramount Leads a New Censorship Movement

Plan on Foot to Introduce a Measure Embodying Many of the Principles Contained in the Bill Suggested by Dr. Wilbur F. Crafts—Suggestions for Regulation of Motion Pictures Sent to House Committee on Education by Paramount, Famous Players, Lasky, World Film and Equitable

Special to Motion Picture News

WASHINGTON, D. C., January 31.—It is understood quite generally around the capitol that the Hughes bill will be discarded by the House Committee on Education and a new measure introduced into Congress embodying many of the principles contained in the bill suggested by Dr. Wilbur F. Crafts.

At the same time, consideration will also be given to the suggestions outlined in the following letter received during the week by Chairman Hughes from those interests in New York who have come out in favor of censorship:

"Sir:

"The undersigned representing substantial interests in the motion picture industry, viz., Paramount Pictures Corporation, The Famous Players Film Company, Jesse E. Lasky Feature Play Company, Inc., World Film Corporation, Equitable Motion Picture Corporation, submit herewith for your consideration a revision of the Smith-Hughes bill (Senate 2204-H. R. 456), which, while crude in form, covers practical points of great importance to the trade and will, we trust, serve as a working basis for a bill to be reported by your committee.

"While the idea of censorship of motion pictures is distasteful to our clients as well as to others in the business, our support of the principle of regulation embodied in the bill before you is due to our realization of unfavorable conditions in the industry which cannot be corrected by ordinary means nor by sporadic and occasional criminal prosecutions, procured by the better elements of the business or by individual or organized reformers.

"The motion picture business, now of vast financial importance, has had a mushroom growth and is not yet homogeneous and standardized. Too many persons engaged in the business look upon it as a temporary means of getting money instead of a permanent business, the continued profit of which is dependent upon the quality and character of the productions. They are like miners who quickly exhaust the high-grade ore and leave the low grade on the dump.

"They are get-rich-quick artists, looking for a quick 'clean-up and a get-away.' They find the opportunity for such methods in producing and exhibiting sensational productions which display scenes of lust and crime. Unfortunately, the public has not yet discriminated and goes to see both bad and good which are usually to be found upon the weekly program of the same theatre.

"Still more unfortunately the vicious picture brings the larger return to exhibitor and producer because it gets the money of the regular customer and the sensational also. This state of affairs constitutes a temptation hard to resist and, in fact, the production of vicious pictures is constantly increasing just because they are more profitable.

"If the industry is to endure, if decent people are to stay in the business, this cancer must be cut out. A Federal regulatory commission should prove a fearless surgeon and we therefore favor such a commission.

Three Divisions of the Business

"The motion picture business has three well-defined divisions: production, distribution and exhibition. The producer deals with authors and performers and makes the pictures. The distributor contracts with the producer for his product and through local offices, known as exchanges, places it in the hands of the exhibitor. The exhibitor deals with the public. All three divisions of the business would be affected adversely by an act providing for Federal regulation, which overlooked the practical needs of the business. In order that these needs may be served, we urge you to include in any bill, which you may report, provisions as follows:

"(1) Local offices for the commission in New York and Los Angeles so that the producers, most of whom operate in those cities or their vicinity, may have ready access to the supervising authority and prompt consideration of their product.

"(2) Authority to the commissioner or deputy in charge of a local office to grant or refuse licenses. This is necessary to procure prompt action on applications, which the producer requires in order to meet his engagements with the distributor, covering a constant and frequent supply of pictures, and which the distributor requires in order to enable the exchanges to supply to the exhibitors the daily and weekly changes covered by their contracts. Delay would certainly be costly and might be vital to the organized business.

"(3) A provision for condemnation of specific parts of a film, which, when the same are eliminated, shall become entitled to license.

"(4) A provision for review by the commission when the examiner refuses a license. As the determination of the question whether a film is entitled to license is not based upon exact standards, but is a matter of opinion only, it should not be possible for one man, in his discretion, to destroy the large investment represented by a modern photoplay.

Divest Commission of Supreme Power

"(5) A provision for an appeal to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia for a refusal to license. As the determination by the commission would be really arbitrary because of the absence of legal tests or recognized standards, it is of greatest importance that the commission should not be vested with supreme power. Where great property interests are involved, the citizen should always be afforded an opportunity for relief from the court, if he feels he has been treated unjustly.

"(6) A provision permitting the producer to transport films prior to application for license. The producer should be free to transport a film from its place of manufacture to his home office or other place where it will be cut and trimmed and otherwise prepared for exhibition.

"(7) A provision for substantial salaries for the commissioners, so that the President can secure the services of capable men, who will accept office as a career and not for the purpose of carrying out preconceived and perhaps prejudiced ideas as to the reform of the film industry.

"(8) An exemption from the operation of (a) films exhibited to the public prior to its enactment, and (b) films which do not contain any dramatic or fictional elements, such as pictures of current events, commonly known as news pictures and topical reviews, and pictures of places and peoples, geographical in nature and commonly known as travel pictures.

"(9) A provision granting discretion to the commission to issue a permit under which films may be exhibited pending revocation of the permit and an application for license. Such a provision would enable the commission to adjust the burden of temporarily accumulating applications, by granting permits (in effect, temporary licenses) to producers whose history and reputation entitle them to a presumption of complying with the law.

"As we are moved by the sincere purpose of co-operating with your committee in procuring a draft of an act which should prove effective and workable and at the same time afford to the decent people in the motion picture business, we respectfully request that when a bill is ready for action by the committee, a copy shall be sent to us and we shall be given an opportunity to appear before the committee and make such suggestions and criticisms as may occur to us.

"Dated New York, January 25, 1916.

(Signed) "Meyers and Clark, Attorneys for Paramount Pictures Corporation; E. J. Ludvigh, Ralph A. Kohn, Attorneys for Famous Players Film Company; Arthur S. Friend, Attorney for Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company, Inc., and Moritz Rosenthal, Attorney for World Film Corporation and Equitable Motion Pictures Corporation.

SPARTAN CITY LATEST PRODUCTION COMMUNITY NEAR CAPITAL

The Spartan Film Corporation, Inc., Washington, D. C., has just purchased twenty acres of land within three miles of the capital. Upon the land will be built a motion picture plant to be called "Spartan City."

A large and a small studio, permanent Indian tepees and western shacks, and an electric plant will be built. The value of the land is placed at $60,000.

The Spartan people are also arranging to take a four-story building at Church and Seventeenth streets, N. W., Washington, as a temporary studio. They also expect to engage several well-known screen players.

Beyfuss Returns West to Direct State Rights Plans

Vice-President and General Manager of California Motion Picture Company Will Inaugurate Campaign to Reach 10,000 Theatres Besides Exchangemen

THE announcement of the California Motion Picture Corporation to dispose of its product during this year on the state rights plan has been one of the subjects of comment in film circles in the past week.

Not that it is anything unusual to sell a feature picture by this method, but the ripple has been caused for the reason that the California concern is said to be the only one in the industry today which has always confined its activities to features of five or more reels and which has never before sold state rights.

Alex. E. Beyfuss, vice-president and general manager of the California Motion Picture Corporation, left for San Francisco on Tuesday to supervise the launching of the state rights campaign, which will include not only all exchange men but a list of at least ten thousand motion picture theatres throughout the country. Just before departure Beyfuss said:

"We want California productions in the hands of every exhibitor who demands better pictures regardless of program limitations, and this is the only way we can accomplish that object.

"A good deal of the time I have spent in New York has been concentrated on an advertising system of help for the state rights buyer and exhibitor.

"It is not enough, we believe, to make a good picture. We want the public to know that it is out of the ordinary and we want to make it easy for the exhibitor to tell it.

"We are therefore preparing an unusually comprehensive plan of advertising and all the material necessary will be at the exhibitor's beck and call.

"The same thing is true of the lithographs we are going to use. Instead of working from the still, we have prepared a series of exceptionally fine sketches, treated artistically in flat color, which are not only strong in advertising value, but have the 'punch' and action that the public love.

"We shall also make all positive prints at our own laboratories in San Rafael, because we are more interested than anyone in having them perfect in every way.

"We always insist on flawless negatives, regardless of expense in retakes, and our experience has taught us that the only way to insure prints that we will be satisfied to go to an exhibitor with the California trade mark is to turn them out under our own jealous supervision."

Telegrams, congratulatory letters and other missives, to be expected as a result of California's radical decision, were piled on Mr. Beyfuss' table and had been arriving in a constant stream.

To all of them was the reply that a trade showing of Beatriz Michelena in "The Unwritten Law" will be held at Wurlitzer Hall, New York City, on Thursday, February 24, at 10 A. M. and 2:30 P. M., and that territory would be then allotted.

"We want no one to decide by the trade paper reviews," continued the California official, "flattering though they were. It is our earnest intention that every California picture stand on its own feet and sell on merit only and we want the state rights buyers and exhibitors to see what they are buying and to decide for themselves the money earning qualities of each individual picture.

"We realize that we must place upon the market A No. 1 pictures in every respect to maintain our position of prominence in this industry and are consequently determined to spend whatever money and time are necessary to properly and adequately handle each picture subject engaged upon."

"Dumb Girl of Portici" Is Given Premiere in Chicago

Photo Spectacle Produced by Universal and Featuring Mme. Pavlowa Is Seen at the Colonial by Many Exchangemen, Society People, Carl Laemmle and the Star Herself

Chicago, Jan. 31.

"THE DUMB GIRL OF PORTICI," the photo spectacle produced by Universal, starring Anna Pavlowa, opened at the Colonial theatre here last night. The premiere performance was attended by many prominent actors, exchange men and society people of Chicago, as well as Carl Laemmle and Mme. Pavlowa herself, who arrived in Chicago especially for the occasion.

The danseuse was spotted by the crowd who watched the picture and she was called to her feet many times by the applause of the audience.

The play itself is a gigantic spectacle of the seventeenth century. Scenes that alternate between peasant and palace life make a most effective contrast. The entire production has been done on a lavish scale, the costumes and properties are remarkable for their richness and fidelity to the period, while the sheer magnificence of the scenes and the well-drilled armies of supernumeraries caused frequent applause.

Pavlowa's own ballet appears in several dances and tableaux, and as was expected, the star's dancing is marvelous, but she is a proven pantomimist and runs on the gamut of human emotions from joy to deepest tragedy, while her grace controls a revelation of mood interpretation. Her striking personality causes her many scenes to register with unusual force.

The direction was excellent, particularly in regard to the handling of the mob scenes, and there were many novel and pleasing photographic effects.

Rupert Julian, Douglass Gerrard and Wadsworth Harris stand out in the supporting cast. A symphony orchestra of forty accompanies the picture.

LINICK AND MELCHIOR ORGANIZES PROGRAM FOR INDEPENDENT MANUFACTURERS

Special to Motion Picture News

Chicago, Jan. 29.

Linick and Melchior, 5 South Wabash avenue, Chicago, is organizing a new program which it invites all independent manufacturers to join. The company guarantees the selling of the entire output of the manufacturer and will relieve him of all the details of distribution, making of posters, advertising and other matters. It has already secured the output of several manufacturers for this program, which it hopes to be able to launch in the near future.

MERMAIDS POSING FOR THE NEW ANNETTE KELLERMANN FEATURE BEING PRODUCED IN JAMAICA BY WILLIAM FOX

The Press, Press Representative and the Picture—XVIII

"Exhibitor of a Motion Picture Is a Merchant," Is Declaration of General Manager Walter W. Irwin of V-L-S-E. "and His Commodity Is Entertainment—Film Section in Newspapers Increases Circulation—More People Interested in Motion Pictures Than in Sports"

"THE two deadest things in the world are summer resorts in the winter time, and newspapers that refuse to cooperate with their local merchants," says General Manager Walter W. Irwin of V-L-S-E, quoting L. L. Pancoast in the Chicago Tribune.

"The exihibitor of a motion picture is a merchant. His commodity is entertainment, whether that entertainment instructs, inspires, or simply amuses," says Mr. Irwin, commenting on the statement. "His problems are merchandising problems. To the sale of his seats he must apply the same sound business principles that apply to the marketing of shoes, soap or any other staple.

"With the right kind of merchandising assistance from the manufacturers and with the right kind of co-operation from the newspapers of his town, he should be not only one of the leading merchants in his community, but he should be one of the largest advertisers in that community.

"The manufacturers—at least the most representative of them—are giving him advanced merchandising service—service that compares favorably with any of the foremost commercial concerns.

"It remains but for the newspapers to complete this co-operative triangle to the end that they, the exhibitor and the manufacturer will benefit.

Newspapers Realizing Needs of Co-operation

"Newspapers are awakening to the realization of the profit which they may gain from such co-operation. It has been a slow awakening for the reason that the motion picture until recently has been regarded as the illegitimate child of the stage, and the skepticism with which the theatrical press agent has been viewed has always been inherited by the motion picture interests.

"That this is a false construction to place upon the motion picture is self-evident when consideration is given to the scope of the public's interest in moving pictures, and to the fact that the motion picture theatre is a consistent and persistent advertising prospect. In other words, it is open 365 days in the year whereas the so-called legitimate theatre operates only a few months during the year.

"Entirely outside, for a minute however, from the material advantages accruing from the proper co-operation on the part of a newspaper with its local exhibitors, a newspaper fails in its function as a news distributor unless it provides its readers with the news of the motion picture industry.

"In the statistics of the motion picture industry compiled by the Harriman National Bank of New York City recently, it is shown that this business occupies fifth place among American industries in point of volume, and represents more than $500,000,000 of invested capital.

"It is estimated that it gives employment to more than 100,000 people and that there are more than 18,000 motion picture theatres throughout the country. The attendance is figured at 15,000,000 persons daily. Approximately $1,000,000 per day is paid for admissions, giving the total admission figure of $360,000,000 for the year.

Must Recognize Force of Screen

"In other words here is a tremendous force, the interest creating qualities of which must be reckoned with by the newspapers. Its possibilities from a circulation building standpoint are almost limitless.

"The newspaper which prints automobile news, baseball comment, society gossip, commercial reports and similar specialized departments, and ignores the screen, is flying in the face of what its readers want, because more people attend motion picture theatres in one day, than there are who attend professional baseball games—to which such liberal space is given—in an entire season, or who own automobiles, move in society, or are interested in the stock market.

"As an illustration of what one paper has done in capitalizing upon the widespread appeal of the silent drama, let me refer you to the Cleveland Plain Dealer. Recently this publication ran a moving picture contest which polled 76,000,000 votes, and which increased the circulation of the Cleveland Plain Dealer from 135,000 copies daily to 201,000 copies.

"That this is not an exceptional instance of the power of moving picture features to increase a publication, is evidenced by the experiences of scores of other newspapers.

"In 1913, a monthly magazine printed a serial photoplay at its conclusion and the publication conceded that its circulation had been increased by more than 300,000 copies per month.

Helped Circulation of Chicago "Tribune"

"In February, 1914, the Chicago Tribune ran a similar serial. In the words of the business manager of this widely known paper, this serial 'piled on 58,000 readers to our circulation, and since then the motion picture department which we have started has swelled this figure to 150,000—and we are not through yet.'

"Braune Hood, of the Montgomery Journal, Montgomery, Ala., in commenting upon the influence of a motion picture department in his publication recently said: 'We find this page an attractive feature for the Journal, and an unusual circulation builder.'

"The New York Evening Mail, on the day of the first issue of its moving picture supplement, printed the largest edition for four years past.

"The Mail freely and frankly credited the unusual sale to the moving picture supplement, by making this statement in its editorial columns: 'This profitable growth came from the remarkable, sudden but expected success of the Motion Picture Mail.'

"The circulation manager of the Atlanta Georgian and Hearst's Sunday American, states: 'The motion picture pages are of more value as circulation builders than sports, society and commerce combined.'

"Film Fun, an inexpensively edited magazine, started last July, has gained 75,000 readers since its first issue and its owners have refused an offer of $45,000 for its good will.

"Pick Their Own Pockets"

"These are but a few illustrations of a great array which might be compiled. The point of it all is that the papers which fail to listen to the click of the camera, not only do not live up to their functions as news distributers, as has been pointed out, but deliberately pick their own pocket of the profits which might be made by supplying their readers with that in which they are so vitally interested.

"Furthermore, such a paper is making its columns more valuable to its advertisers in general, for notwithstanding the impression which has come down from the days of the old nickelodeon, the motion picture clientele today is the highest average purchasing power which a newspaper can offer.

"Compare the representatives of the audiences of the Strand, in New York; the Metropolitan in Cleveland; Shea's Hippodrome, in Buffalo; the Portola, in San Francisco; the Majestic, in Detroit; the Willis-Wood, in Kansas City, and the Queen theatre, in Dallas, with any other gathering you might name.

"Go into these houses and see the number of people you will find in evening clothes. Compute the number of automobiles in front of them. Measure the cost of the production shown in these theatres, the calibre of the talent employed in them, and the character of the surroundings in which they are displayed, and weigh these features with those of the average stage production.

"So much for the right of moving pictures to space in the newspaper, and for the newspaper's duty to recognize this influence."

(This article will be concluded in the issue of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, February 19.)

PITTSBURGH EXHIBITORS ENTHUSIASTIC OVER 2 BLUE BIRDS SHOWN

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Pittsburg, Pa., Jan 29.

A large number of exhibitors were present at a private showing of the latest Blue Bird releases at the Columbia theatre on Sunday and the consensus of opinion was that the pictures would make good in this city.

Sarah Bernhardt in "Jeanne Dore" and Helen Ware in "Undine," were the two pictures run, and they were most pleasing to the men who will in the future run these pictures. The gathering was loud in its praise of the two big features, and the local management received loud praise.

GRANDON IS LATEST ADDITION TO METRO STAFF

Francis J. Grandon, who has just completed his first Metro picture, "The Lure of Heart's Desire," with Edmund Breese, is the latest addition to the Metro directing staff. Mr. Grandon's next feature will be "The Soul Market," by Aaron Hoffman, in which Mme. Petrova will be starred.

F. J. GRANDON

Before joining Metro, Grandon was with Triangle, his most recent productions for that corporation being "Cross Currents," "The Bread Line," and "Fathers and Sons." He has also been associated with Biograph, Lubin and Selig.

Virtus Scott, until recently on the Famous Players' directing staff, goes to Metro as Grandon's assistant.

JOHN W. GREY LEAVES VITAGRAPH FOR NEW CONNECTION

John W. Grey, for several years connected with the film industry, tendered his resignation to the Vitagraph Company of America on Monday, January 24.

Mr. Grey, for the past nine months, has been assistant to Albert E. Smith, president of the V-L-S-E, formerly treasurer of the General Film Company and treasurer and general manager of the Vitagraph Company.

Mr. Grey's severance of his connection comes in the nature of surprise to those in the industry, and it is understood that his plans have been definitely made.

During his employ in the Vitagraph Company Mr. Grey was personally responsible for the sales plans, sales manuals, posters, the new form of press sheet, the present efficient state of the Vitagraph monthly bulletin, and the trade paper as well as general advertising. Mr. Grey also instituted a follow-up system between the Vitagraph Company and the various V-L-S-E and General Film exchanges, which has been productive of results.

It is intimated that Mr. Grey's new connection will be announced in a very short time.

Paramount to Release 4 Films from Famous in March

List Headed with "Poor Little Pappina," Followed by "Man Who Found Himself," "The Longest Way Round," and "Audrey," with Pauline Frederick in Title Role

FOR the first time since the formation of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, the Famous Players Film Company will release through that distributing company during the month of March a seven-reel production, "Poor Little Peppina," in which Mary Pickford is starred.

This subject also marks the first film in which Miss Pickford has appeared since the organization of the Famous Players-Mary Pickford Company in the productions of which she retains a half interest.

In addition to this seven-reel subject, the Famous Players will release three other photoplays, "The Man Who Found Himself," starring Jack Barrymore; "The Longest Way Round," starring Hazel Dawn, and "Audrey," in which Pauline Frederick appears in the title role.

"The Man Who Found Himself," which is scheduled for release on March 19, was written by Willard Mack, author of "Kick In." It is the story of an eminently respectable young man who, after being hit on the head, turns burglar. The story is full of action, the incidents following one after the other in quick succession.

"The Longest Way Round," which will be released on March 23, will show Hazel Dawn in the role of a young girl whose father is bitterly disposed toward his next door neighbor. In fact, they are enemies.

The latter has a son whom the girl has never seen. They meet and fall in love in the country, neither suspecting the identity of the other.

But that is only the beginning of trouble for the lovers, as their stubborn parents become infuriated when they learn of the attachment.

"Audrey" is an adaptation of the celebrated novel by Mary Johnston, in the stage version of which Maggie Mitchell starred. Pauline Frederick will present it to the motion picture public March 26.

"Audrey" is a story of the early nineteenth century which is full of romance, and contains a great deal of comedy and no little drama.

"Audrey" is a far different type from anything which Pauline Frederick has done on the screen.

"Poor Little Peppina" is scheduled for release on the Paramount Program on March 2 but it is to be especially presented before that date in several of the largest cities. The story was written especially for Mary Pickford by Kate Jordon.

"Poor Little Peppina" was directed by Sidney Olcott; "Audrey," by Robert Vignola, and "The Man Who Found Himself," by James Kirkwood.

Claridge Films, Inc., Will Release a Film a Month

Corporation of Which Mrs. Cobb Is Vice-President and General Manager, Plans to Sell on State Rights, Though Offers Have Been Received from Program Companies

THE Claridge Films, Inc., with offices in the Longacre Building, Forty-second street and Broadway, New York City, began business the early part of last week with the announcement of the forthcoming sale of their first two productions "The Birth of Character," and "The Heart of New York," in which Robert T. Haines makes his film debut, which is a sequel to the sensation of four years ago, "Traffic in Souls."

"The Birth of Character" has for its star William Courtleigh, whose work in this, his latest effort, is said to be of exceptional standard. The story in itself allows Mr. Courtleigh ample opportunity to display the ability he established in the successful serial.

"The Heart of New York" was written and produced at the Claridge studios by Walter McNamara himself and is staged and directed along lines parallel with his other big success.

Claridge Films, Inc., will dispose of its productions through the medium of franchise or state rights sales, and none but carefully chosen features of clean and strongly dramatic pictures with well-known stars and good interesting stories will be offered.

This company was formed by men of experience and judgment in the film business with a thorough knowledge of the demands of the state rights buyers throughout the country. Quality of product will be the basis of the business policy of this company, of which Mrs. Agnes Egan Cobb is the vice-president and general manager.

Mrs. Cobb needs no introduction nor identification, having been in constant touch with the state rights buyers and exhibitors all over the country. She has been studying the conditions and wants of the state rights buyers for a number of years.

During the past few days, there have been so many offers received, that Mrs. Cobb is taking under consideration and using her best efforts as to which of the state rights buyers can properly handle to the best advantage, the products of this company for the coming year. The policy will be to release one picture a month. Mrs. Cobb has some large offers for the first two releases, by various of the program companies but as the object of this company is to develop a state rights business, none of these alluring offers attempt Mrs. Cobb to deviate from the original policy of the company as yet.

"FINAL CURTAIN," FORMERLY CALLED "OUR LADY OF LAUGHTER," READY FEBRUARY 2

"The Final Curtain," a story of business and the theatre, formerly announced as "Our Lady of Laughter," has been set for release on the Kleine-Edison Program as the initial February production scheduled for February 2.

"The Final Curtain" features Arthur Hoops and Alma Hanlon. The central theme is the inevitable clash that occurs when the "artistic temperament" meets so-called "solid respectability," through the marriage of a dainty Broadway star to a magnate of the wool trust.

GEORGE LE GUERE INJURED IN SCENE FOR METRO

George Le Guere, Metro juvenile actor, who is playing a prominent role in "The Blindness of Love," in which Julius Steger is starred, was severely injured in Jacksonville, Fla., during the staging of a scene which proved too realistic.

The scene was a raid on a bank, and more than four hundred persons were used. When Le Guere tried to fight his way through the crowd, they stampeded, and he fell to the ground, where several men stepped upon him.

The mob was not paying any heed to the action of any individual, and only listened to the words of Director Charles Horan, who kept shouting for them to continue and press forward. La Guere was attended by a physician, and was able to proceed with his work in two days.

Horsley's Plan for Checking Local Censorship

Centaur President Advocates Affiliations of Exhibitors with Business Organization in Their Cities—One Man in Chamber of Commerce or Board of Trade Can Wage Effective Fight

DAVID HORSLEY, one of the motion picture manufacturers active at the recent Los Angeles meeting, where the manufacturers, the boards of censorship of Los Angeles and Pasadena, and the chief of the Los Angeles police, reached a better understanding on the censorship question in the Los Angeles district, believes exhibitors can effectively wage their local anti-censorship fights through business organizations.

Mr. Horsley thinks this plan should be taken up in a national way. He explains it as follows:

"Exhibitors in some places now maintain an organization of their own to fight harmful measures.

"In such places where censorship is exercised, however, the organization has very little, if any, influence on the officials of a city.

"This is due to the fact that little interest is taken in the censorship question except by the first or second run men.

"The thirty, sixty and ninety-day men can sit back and reap the benefits of the fight to get a picture through that the early run exhibitors must put up, and as a consequence assume the attitude:

"'Well, I should worry. Those fellows have got to get the pictures through or close their show and once they get them through I get them.

"'If they don't get them through there are plenty of pictures that do get through to keep me going.' So the burden is thrown on the early exhibitors.

"Even if the organization comprises practically all the exhibitors of the town, it is numerically of little consequences from a political standpoint, as the average official is a politician who considers only voting strength.

"Now, then, with only the first and second run exhibitors fighting censorship with little or no backing from a none too large organization, it can readily be seen how little good can be accomplished in this direction.

"Therefore to make better progress, I suggest that the exhibitors join the Chamber of Commerce or Board of Trade in their city.

"Then they would get sufficient numerical strength besides the voting strength, the interest, the influence and the power of the entire business community.

"One active exhibitor in a Chamber of Commerce or Board of Trade can do more good with the backing of such an organization that he could by having every exhibitor in his city enrolled in a separate organization and helping him.

"An exhibitors' organization, too, is costly to maintain and in the way of eradicating censorship produces very little, if any, results."

Los Angeles Sees 12 Reel Version of "Spoilers"

Clune's Auditorium Gets First Showing of Remade Selig Story, with Many Additions Which Strengthen the Picture—"The Ne'er-Do-Well," Another Selig, Has Long Run

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Los Angeles, Jan. 29.

CLUNE'S Auditorium, Los Angeles, is now under the management of Will C. Wheeler, who has been with the McClune interests for the past five years, and served during the past year as manager of one of the "Birth of a Nation" attractions in California.

The first showing of "The Ne'er-Do-Well," filmed by the Selig company under the direction of Colin Campbell in Panama last winter, was given at Clune's Auditorium, Los Angeles, and the engagement continued for three weeks with very excellent business which closely bordered on records for attendance.

The United States rights for this film have been purchased by Sol Lesser of San Francisco, and the deal is said to have been made as the result of the business at this theatre which lead all to believe that it will be as popular as the other Selig-Rex Beach story, "The Spoilers."

The re-made twelve-reel adaptation of the Rex Beach Alaskan story, "The Spoilers," produced by Colin Campbell, of the Selig Polyscope Company, was last week given its first public showing at Clune's Auditorium, Los Angeles, which was to serve more as an experiment to judge the drawing power of this subject.

The attendance at the theater which seats twenty-eight hundred, has been exceptionally good all week despite very unpleasant weather conditions for Los Angeles and its suburbs.

It is hard to decide just what has been added to this subject to lengthen it from nine to twelve reels, but seeing it convinces that the story has been materially built up and numerous incidents shown in this remade version impossible in the original release.

An introduction of characters has been added which ends with the showing of the author, Rex Beach, in his study.

This is said to be Mr. Beach's first, last, and only appearance before the camera, and he demonstrates that he was not lens broke.

Throughout the entire production there are more scenes that tend to build up the Alaskan atmosphere than were originally used, and the additions have materially strengthened the subject.

There is not a scene in the long film where interest lags, and the showing here has brought out the fact that this picture will no doubt be as popular, if not more so, than the original production, which, of course, has been a notable success.

H. H. Bosley, formerly manager and owner of a Los Angeles theater, has purchased an interest in the Miller Hill street theater, Los Angeles, formerly the Alhambra, and is in charge of the management. He has introduced a number of attractive features, including the installation of an American Fotoplayer. The house is using second run Fox films.

STUDIO DIRECTORY NUMBER AN EXHIBITOR AID

The following letter is representative of expressions received from exhibitors with regard to the Studio Directory issue of Motion Picture News:

William A. Johnston,
Motion Picture News,
220 West Forty-Second St.,
New York City.

Dear Sir:

The January 29 issue of your paper deserves the appreciation of every one connected with the motion picture business, and I for one would like to thank you for the "Studio Directory Section." It is simply great.

I have just taken hold of this theatre, and I know Motion Picture News will be one of my great helps, in the future as it has been in the past.

Again thanking you for the help I shall receive from the vast amount of knowledge and information embodied in yours of January 29, 1916, I am

Respectfully yours,
HARRY V. SIDL,
Manager New Lyndale Theatre.

MONTREAL MEN FORM COMPANY TO HANDLE METRO IN CANADA

Vancouver, B. C., Jan. 29.

Metro Star Films, Limited, is the name of a new company which has been formed by Montreal men to handle the Metro program in Canada, and the following officers have been elected: President, A. N. Brodeur; vice-president, Paul Gahbert; secretary-treasurer, Hal MacBrown; managing director, Herbert Lubin.

Less Kauffman has been appointed general Western manager, and has already established an office in Winnipeg, with branches in Calgary and Vancouver promised for the near future.

Winnipeg headquarters are at present at 116 Phoenix Block, and first run on the Metro productions has been secured by Manager C. P. Walker of the Walker Theatre, who is putting on the features on a big scale, at prices ranging from ten to fifty cents.

"Poor Little Peppina" a 7-Reel Mary Pickford

First Subject Produced by Famous Players—Mary Pickford Company, from the Pen of Kate Jordan and Directed by Sidney Olcott, Is Scheduled for Release on March 2

FOR the first time in her screen career Mary Pickford is to appear in a seven-reel production, "Poor Little Peppina," produced by the Famous Players Film Company under the direction of Sidney Olcott from the script written especially for the star by Kate Jordan.

Though the features will be placed on the Paramount Program, it will be given special presentations in New York and several other large cities before the day of release, which has been fixed upon as March 2.

"Poor Little Peppina" derives especial interest from the fact that it marks Miss Pickford's first appearance on the screen since the formation of the Famous Players-Mary Pickford Company, in the productions of which she retains a half interest.

The picture will present the star in novel garb—the corduroy trousers and coarse flannel shirt of the Italian peasant youth. As the stowaway on ship board, Peppina dresses in boy's clothes in order to avoid molestation, and she continues the disguise when she reaches New York because she finds it easier to find employment when she is clothed in male attire.

Through force of circumstances she becomes a bootblack, telegraph messenger and the general scapegoat of a band of counterfeiters who prove to be the very band who kidnapped her as a baby.

Later, after her rescue from the kidnappers, she goes to school to learn the niceties of society. A district attorney, who figured in her rescue, is attracted by the romance of her adventures, and marries her.

Because of the importance of the production, the Famous Players Company has arranged special advertising for "Poor Little Peppina" and is issuing a twenty-four sheet in addition to the regular line of sixes, threes and ones, there being three styles of the last named division of lithographs.

A distinctive cut-out for throw-away purposes has also been prepared and can be obtained from the various Paramount exchanges.

Appearing in support of Miss Pickford are Edwin Mordant, Eugene O'Brien, Antonio Maiori, Ernesto Torti, Cesare Gravina, W. T. Carelton, and Jack Pickford, in addition to a number of other well-known screen players.

"MUTUAL WEEKLY" SHOWN IN FOUR LARGE THEATRES

Four theatres of importance have recently begun showing the "Mutual Weekly."

The first of these was the Palace, New York, the leading vaudeville house of America. "The Mutual Weekly" has also gone into a Broadway theatre controlled by S. L. Rothapfel, who recently toured the country under Mutual auspices.

These news pictures have also been installed in Keith's Royal Theatre, in the Bronx, and in the Market Street theatre, San Francisco.

Breach in Ranks of Boston Exhibitor League Closed

Threatened Split Over with Re-election of Horstman as President—Is Healed, Both Factions Being Represented in New Roster of Officers

Special to Motion Picture News

Boston, Jan. 29.

THE well known dove of peace, which flitted away from Mr. Bryan some time ago and found that the Ford party was also a cold place for it to stay, has finally found a comfortable resting place within the ranks of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of Massachusetts.

Previous to the recent annual meeting of the league there had been rumblings and grumblings, and actual intentions of the party of several dissatisfied members to form an opposition league of their own.

This dissatisfaction was caused by the usual suspicions of those in power, with large sums of money at their disposal, as to just what in every instance had become of every cent of that money.

And the suspicions have attained the point where one officer of the league was about to resign to assume a similar office for the new league.

"About to" is right. For he's back in the fold now, and "there ain't goin' to be no second league." Unity wins by a nose. The dove of peace perches in its old place.

The change was brought about at the recent annual meeting, which turned out to be a feature film of comedy drama in six reels at least. The insurgents had not kept their plans too obscure.

Hence a meeting in an exchange office on Piedmont street previous to the big show in Rathbone Hall. The discussion at this meeting, involving ways and means of restoring harmony in the ranks, would make interesting reading for which space is too small.

Suffice it to say, when things began to move in the big meeting you could hardly hold the "administration" men in their seats, so anxious were they to nominate insurgents for office.

E. H. Horstman, who has been most efficient in acting as president for the past year, first refused the office for another term. And it was one of these very insurgents who had been nominated to be an officer with him who helped to persuade him to re-election.

So Mr. Horstman is president again, working with this list of officers, some of whom were insurgents:

First vice-president, R. W. Drown; second vice-president, P. F. Lydon; treasurer, H. A. Gilman, and secretary, H. Wasserman. The other directors who were elected as such and then chose the officers were: G. M. Clark, L. Dadmun, F. J. Howard, Col. Kincaide, J. Lourie.

Incidentally, reports show that the league was never in better financial condition. But this is not the story. The main thing is that harmony has been restored. May no one try to break the dove's neck again.

Leslie H. Allen.

GYPSY O'BRIEN MAKES DEBUT IN "SOUL MARKET"

Gypsy O'Brien, who has a leading role in support of Mme. Petrova, in "The Soul Market," a forthcoming Metro wonderplay, makes her screen debut in this feature.

It has been found from parts of the picture which have been run off at the Popular Plays and Players' studio, that Miss O'Brien screens exceedingly well. She is a young woman noted for her singular beauty and Titian hair.

FLOODS HOLD UP NEGATIVE FILM SUPPLY

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Los Angeles, Jan. 29.

Floods caused by the heavy rains in the past ten days or more, caused numerous washouts of railroad bridges, cutting Los Angeles mail and express service almost entirely off. This badly crippled the producing organizations here, insomuch that in several instances they were entirely out of negative film.

The Signal Company was one of the first to suffer, and three employees, including H. E. Law, in charge of publicity, attempted to drive to Pomona, California, in an automobile as messenger for the American and Wells Fargo Express companies, to bring film that was being held by trains that could not continue their run.

It required a trip of about one hundred and fifty miles around the flooded district to go to Pomona, and because of the heavy roads this trip required a day's time.

The automobile was fitted with block, tackle and derrick to insure that they would get out of any bad places in the road. Once reaching Pomona they found a way of returning, mileage of which was but forty-eight miles.

An electric railway company refused their offer of five hundred dollars to cross a bridge. The others in the party besides Mr. Law were Charles Wells and C. E. Horn.

WORK BEGUN ON BILLIE BURKE SUBJECT FOR KLEINE

Work has just begun on a motion picture novel by Rupert Hughes in which Billie Burke and Henry Kolker will be featured.

The films are being produced by George Kleine and will be distributed through the Kleine-Edison Feature Service throughout America.

The novelized version will be released to leading newspapers throughout America through the Syndicate Department of the Chicago Tribune.

The entire production is under the supervision of James M. Sheldon, who supervised "The Million Dollar Mystery."

Peerless Plant Somewhat Deserted These Days

But That's Only Because Three Producing Companies for World Film Have Been Sent South, Two Going to Florida and the Third Sailing for "Tropical Annex" in Cuba

THE Peerless plant of the World Film Corporation at Fort Lee, N. J., presents a fairly deserted appearance these days owing to the fact that three of this organization's biggest producing companies have been sent to Southern climes to work on new pictures.

Two companies have gone to Jacksonville, Fla., and a third to the World Film's newly acquired property in Cuba, where construction work on the corporation's Tropical Annex is in full swing.

The departure for Jacksonville of Edwin August and company marks the beginning of Mr. August's new picture, an adaptation of that famous play "The Social Highwayman." The story concerns a man, well situated socially, who decided to do something personally toward a more just division of worldly goods between the poor and the rich. He becomes a society thief, stealing from the wealthy and turning the proceeds over to the poor. Mr. August will be supported by Ormi Hawley, who has been with the Lubin Company.

The remaindner of the east includes John Sainpolis and Macy Harlem. The company numbers more than thirty people and traveled south in two special cars with two baggage cars containing personal and scenic effects.

Director Barry O'Neil and a large company headed by the star Holbrook Blinn have also gone to Jacksonville pending the completion of the World Film's Tropical Annex in Cuba.

While in the South Mr. O'Neil will finish the Holbrook Blinn feature "The Unpardonable Sin," the interiors of which were completed at the Peerless Studio last week.

As soon as work on this picture is over Director O'Neil and the Blinn company will start on the exteriors of a feature temporarily called "The New South."

The third World Film company to seek the balmier sun of the tropics is the Clara Kimball Young organization.

The exodus of directors and players from the World Film's New Jersey plant leaves that corporation's veteran director Emile Chautard temporarily holding the fort alone. Chautard has started work on a picture in which Robert Warwick will appear as the star and Frances Nelson will be featured in his support at the head of an exceptional company.

This picture is at present entitled "Velma" and is from an original scenario written by Emmett Campbell Hall, who so cleverly adapted for the screen Jules Eckert Goodman's play "The Point of View," in which Miss Nelson is starred and which will be the World Film release next week.

"Velma" brings Warwick and Miss Nelson together on the screen for the first time since "The Sins of Society."

Director Chautard is expected to complete the interiors of "Velma" and prepare for Jacksonville to make the exteriors at about the same time that Director August returns to the Peerless studio to make the interiors of "A Social Highwayman."

It is the purpose of Studio Manager M. E. Hoffman to so schedule the comings and goings of his various companies as to give as often as possible each director the full use of the Peerless plant.

At the big Paragon studio Director Maurice Tourneur is in full swing in the production of "The Hand of Peril," the Arthur Stringer play in which House Peters will be seen for the first time as a World Film star.

SIXTEEN JITNEY CARS FOR UNIVERSAL LATE WORKERS

Special to MOTION PICTURE NEWS

Los Angeles, Jan. 29

Inadequate transportation facilities have caused the Universal Company to put in a jitney buss line of its own. Two sixteen-passenger enclosed cars have been purchased and will operate between Universal City and Hollywood every evening between six and one A. M. to transport those who may have occasion to work at the studio at night.

BALTIMORE BRANCH MEETING IN FEBRUARY

Special to Motion Picture News

Baltimore, Jan. 27.

A meeting will probably be held by the members of the Maryland branch, Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, the early part of next month at which a number of matters will be taken up.

President Guy L. Wonders, who attended the meetings of motion picture interests held a few weeks ago in Washington to protest against federal censorship, will probably tell the members of the league what was done.

The work of the committee on country store and other phases of the picture business will also be taken up.

The Baltimore members of the league are now holding luncheons and get-together gatherings every Wednesday at noon. Only the most pressing business is taken up at these meetings as it is purely of a social nature.

The meetings have been very largely attended, however, and have been very beneficial in promoting a closer relationship between the exhibitors of this city.

Metro Was Never in Favor of Federal Censorship

Company Favors Federal Regulation, a Stand Fully in Accord with the Position Maintained by the Motion Picture Board of Trade

THE Metro Pictures Corporation is not and never has been for federal censorship of motion pictures. Its position is exactly what it always has been and Metro resents any suggestion that it has made a change of front in the Federal censorship fight.

This, in brief, is the announcement made at the offices of the Metro Pictures Corporation in the Longacre Building, following publication in several of the trade papers devoted to the industry, that Metro had broken away from its associates in the censorship fight. Metro's full statement is as follows:

"On Tuesday of last week, Mr. Hodkinson, of the Paramount Pictures Corporation, requested that Metro give a written statement of its view on the matter of federal censorship and Metro readily responded with the following, which it was understood was to be taken by Mr. Hodkinson with him to Washington:

We have been opposed to the spirit and essence of censorship because it places on the few the responsibility of judging for the many, because censorship is often construed as an invitation to censoriousness and because in operation it bears fruit in rulings that are hampering, petty and needless. Such a condition makes against progress in any art.

On the other hand we welcome regulation, not censorship, that will protect the producer of clean and entertaining pictures from the competition of salacious pictures.

In our opinion such regulation should in plan and operation be broad, sympathetic and designed solely for the protection of the public and the manufacturer against pictures that are indecent, obscene or inciting to crime.

The regulation should be free from the influence of the professionally virtuous, free from the whims of politics and operative in so hard-headed and sensible a manner as to solve the problem for the entire country.

We hope that this makes our position clear on the subject

METRO PICTURES CORPORATION,
Richard A. Rowland, President.

Metro definitely stated that it was not for censorship, but that it did favor federal regulation, and this view is in full accord with the position taken by the Board of Trade and other opponents of the Hughes bill.

Apparently Metro's very definite letter was misconstrued, because in the published reports Metro was lined up with those favoring federal censorship.

This was diametrically opposite to Metro's position, as is shown by the following letter written to W. W. Hodkinson in answer to a request to sign a statement addressed to Chairman Hughes, of the committee on education, which statement favored federal censorship:

Confirming our telephone conversation of this afternoon we beg to advise, that after a careful reading of the letter addressed to the Hon. D. M. Hughes, chairman of the committee on education, House of Representatives, Washington, D. C., we find ourselves opposed to its contents and therefore unable to sign it.

Metro Pictures Corporation stands by its previous expression in favor of regulation, not censorship, and believes the proposed amendment to the penal code, which includes motion pictures in the same class with and amenable to the laws governing magazines and newspapers, fully solves the problem nationally.

Metro Pictures Corporation regrets that it is forced to differ with the point of view of Paramount Pictures Corporation in this matter, but it cannot undertake to assume responsibility against its convictions in a matter of such vital importance to the welfare of the motion picture industry.

METRO PICTURES CORPORATION,
Richard A. Rowland, President.

Metro's attitude has been so firmly against the idea of federal censorship that it is making these letters public in justice to itself and its associates in the film industry.

"Love Pirates" Changed to "Social Pirates"

No Other Variation in Picture Will Be Introduced, the Series by George Bronson-Howard for Kalem Still Retaining Marin Sais and Ollie Kirkby as Principals in the Cast

"THE LOVE PIRATES" have been rechristened. Marin Sais and Ollie Kirkby, who were to have shared honors in the new George Bronson-Howard series of that name will be "The Social Pirates' instead.

The change of title is the only variation made, otherwise the series will remain as before.

George Bronson-Howard is writing it, Kalem is the producer, and Marin Sais and Ollie Kirkby will remain the same two clever girls using sharp wits and clever wiles at the expense of wealthy and sophisticated idlers.

The decision to change the title of the George Bronson-Howard series was reached after long consideration. Kalem officials are of the belief that "The Social Pirates" will mark a new type of screen production and have the greatest of expectations for the series.

An official of the company explained this point last week. "George Bronson-Howard," he states, "has written 'The Social Pirates' in his best vein, which means that while there is no lack of dramatic interest there is also a delightful touch of satire running throughout.

"It is the style that made his 'Snobs' such a successful play. This blend of satirical comedy and dramatic action makes a production that will please all classes, but most of all, because of its welcome novelty, the picture-goers who demand intelligence and rebel at the crude and obvious thrillers that are forced on them so much.

"Of course, it requires direction of the highest type and players of better than ordinary calibre to handle a production of this class, but after a view of the first production received from the studios we are more confident than ever of the ability of those entrusted with making the production.

"Marin Sais and Ollie Kirkby have always been known as players of unusual versatility, since in their work for Kalem both stars have gained favor in roles verying from farce comedy to highly emotional parts.

"This is true in no less degree of the other members of the company which includes True Boardman, Paul C. Hurst, Thomas Lingham and Frank Jonasson.

DAVIS GIVES DINNER IN HONOR OF LAEMMLE AT "U" CITY

Special to Motion Picture News

Los Angeles, Jan. 29.

General Manager H. O. Davis of Universal City, was host at a dinner given the heads of the various departments of the city one evening during the past week in honor of President Carl Laemmle on his birthday anniversary.

It was the first time that the head of the Universal organization had been with the co-workers of the studio, and it was made a very pleasant event. Two delightful features of the evening were the singing by Myrtle Stedman, of Morosco-Pallas stock company, wife of Marshall Stedman, manager of production at Universal City, and the dancing of eight-year-old Lena Baskette.

Besides Mr. Laemmle and Mr. Davis, those present were: George E. Kann, Charles Rankin, H. H. Barter, Frank D. Ormston, H. R. Hough, Marshall Stedman, John M. Nickolaus, E. G. Patterson, Otis Turner, Allen Curtis, Joseph De Grasse, William C. Dowlan, Francis Ford, Jay Hunt, Jacques Jaccard, Rupert Julian, L. B. Carleton, Robert Leonard, Lynn Reynolds, Phillips Smalley, William Worthington, Richard Stanton, Roy Clements, Henry McRae, E. J. LeSaint, and M. G. Jonas.

"BIOSCOPE" IS IMPRESSED WITH "NEWS" CHRISTMAS NUMBER

The Bioscope, one of the leading British film trade journals, printed the following editorial note by Howard King in its issue of Jan. 6:

"Hearty congratulations to the American MOTION PICTURE NEWS and its exceedingly able editor, Mr. William A. Johnston, on the wonderful Christmas issue, just to hand. Under Mr. Johnston's guidance, our contemporary has come right to the front rank, and I can quite understand its claim to the quality circulation of the trade. All its issues are good, but the Christmas number is the very best I've seen."

LIVE WIRE EXHIBITORS

EDITOR'S NOTE.—It is the desire of "Motion Picture News" to include under this heading novel advertising ideas, successful schemes in the management, decoration and equipment of the theatre—everything, in fact, done by the exhibitor to stimulate his trade. We invite every exhibitor to write us about any new enterprise he has; also to come to us for advice or information along any line. Address: Editor, "Motion Picture News," 220 West Forty-second Street, New York City

ENLISTS TELEGRAPH COMPANY IN GILT EDGE THEATRE-EXCHANGE ADVERTISING STUNT

ENTER Tom North, manager of the Seattle V-L-S-E exchange, with another live wire winner. Strictly speaking, this is an exchange stunt, but it is so good that we want exhibitors to be sure to know about it, so we run our notice of it in this department.

All we have to do by way of explaining it is to print the following letter sent out by the general manager of the Western Union Telegraph Company, northwestern district, to his managers in the principal cities in the territory covered by the Seattle V-L-S-E exchange:

"THE WESTERN UNION TELEGRAPH COMPANY,
"Manager's Office.
"Seattle, Wash., Jan. 7, 1916.

"MANAGERS:

"The Coliseum, Seattle's newest moving picture palace, is to be opened Saturday the 8th, at 2 p. m. The theatre is proclaimed to be the most beautiful and costliest structure in the United States devoted to the exhibition of moving pictures.

"The opening of this magnificent theatre is an event in which, no doubt, owners of the leading moving picture theatres of your city will desire to share by sending congratulatory telegrams to Jensen & Von Herberg, the owners of this theatre; these partners also own the Mission, Liberty, and Alhambra theatres of this city.

"In interviewing your party, please refer to the V-L-S-E Pals copy which I am sending you herewith, and if consistent, drop the suggestion that they include in their message some reference to the notice of the opening of the Coliseum appearing in the V-L-S-E Pals.

"Yours truly,
"WILLIAM J. SMITH,
"Manager."

Of course, the value of such advertising to the exchange is perfectly evident. We don't know what use the Coliseum made of the messages, but they offer distinct live wire possibilities. For instance, one or two could be run in the Coliseum's newspaper ads at intervals to show Seattle picturegoers that the theatre is known and appreciated in other cities, and by other exhibitors. The messages could also be included in the house organ, or lettered on large cards for lobby display.

There is a neat bit of advertising psychology involved in letting patrons know that your theatre is more than a local affair. Make your patrons see that your theatre is important enough to receive outside recognition, and you have heightened their interest immediately. We should like to know what use the Coliseum made of its opportunities in this case. Meanwhile, our congratulations to Mr. North on a gilt-edged exchange stunt.

IOWA HOUSE SELLS SEASON TICKETS TO "GIRL AND THE GAME"

This may be an old story in some parts of the country, but, in the Middle West, Saul & Son, proprietors of The Star Photo theatre at Carroll, Ia., sprung a new one when they began selling season tickets to a serial, "The Girl and the Game." The serial was to run fifteen weeks. With a mailing list and an up-to-the-minute connection with the Carroll newspapers, Messrs. Saul put the proposition up to their patrons—offering the season tickets at a cheaper price than they would cost individually—and the response was excellent.

The project was advertised by mail, in the papers and on the theatre's screen for weeks in advance, and the tickets were on sale at the window.

CHICAGO DAILY NEWS ORIGINATES CLEVER LIVE WIRE SCHEME

Once more the Chicago Daily News comes to the front as a live wire newspaper. As before, it is co-operating with motion picture theatres.

The scheme is this: Each Monday every woman and child attending any of the outlying theatres advertised in the Daily News Motion Picture Directory is presented with a duotone reproduction of a photograph of a leading motion picture star. Under each picture is a short biography.

Picture fans who wish to preserve these photos may secure from the theatre or the Daily News a memory book, costing 25 cents. These books have space for the insertion of the photo on one page, and on the one opposite a diary for entering the names of the pictures, the theatre and the dates.

To make the plan completely effective, the Daily News runs large display ads explaining it. For example: "If you are a 'movie fan,' turn to the Daily News Motion Picture Directory and see what outlying theatre nearest your home is advertised there. Then go to this theatre and get the first photo tonight—it will cost you nothing."

PARAMOUNT PROGRESS GIVES HINTS ON AD TYPOGRAPHY

Paramount Progress is printing a series of talks on advertising for exhibitors. They deserve commendation for their clear phrasing, excellent ideas and general common sense.

In the most recent of these, C. C. Burr, the writer, gives a few simple rules which exhibitors would do well to heed in laying out their newspaper ads:

"Do not use all capital letters or too black face (bold type). Cheltenham is a good advertising face, and can be almost universally used. It is made in all sizes and widths and even in extra wide and condensed letters. From black face, called Cheltenham bold, to light italics, this makes a good type in which to specify that your advertisement be set.

"The reason for this is plain. Lighter face type gives a more pleasing and artistic appearance and is more easily read—as are upper and lower case letters—which is the way the printer specifies capital and small letters."

MADERA, CAL., EXHIBITORS RUN FULL PAGE NEWSPAPER AD

Exhibitors are coming more and more to recognize the value of newspaper advertising. The most recent example is furnished by the Madera Opera House, Madera, Cal., operated by A. C. H. and J. L. H. Chamberlin.

The theatre recently reduced its admission prices to five and ten cents, and to inaugurate the new policy ran a full-page ad in the Madera Daily Tribune. This live wire stunt is one of the most effective possible, and Motion Picture News is glad to commend the Messrs. Chamberlin for their enterprise.

THREE DETROIT THEATRES SHOWING TRIANGLE FILMS

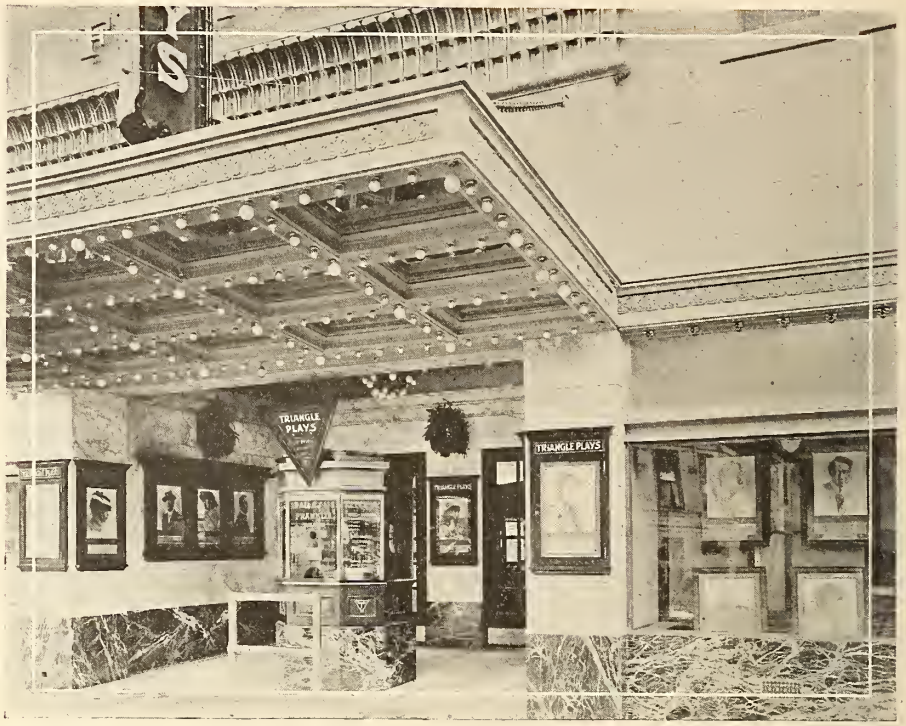
Triangle films are now being exhibited in three Detroit theatres on Woodward avenue, all showing them first-run, and Triangle pictures exclusively. These houses are the Duplex, Grand Boulevard, near Woodward; Forest, Woodward, near Forest, and the new Triangle theatre, Woodward and Jefferson, in which P. P. Craft (who owns the Detroit rights) is the lessee.

The features are being highly spoken of by picture goers and the attendance is reported increasing weekly.

THE WEEK'S BEST LIVE WIRE STUNT

The Coliseum Theatre, Seattle, built at a cost of $350,000 and one of the largest and handsomest in this country, was opened the other day. The Coliseum management has already demonstrated that it is going to do things on a large scale.

One of the reasons we know this is because The Coliseum has set aside an appropriation of $10,000 to be spent exclusively for newspaper advertising during the next year. The advertising will be placed with The Seattle Daily and Sunday Times.



THE ELEVEN PORTRAITS OF PLAYERS DISPLAYED IN THE LOBBY AND SIX IN THE SHOW WINDOW OF THE FRANKLIN THEATRE, OAKLAND, CAL., ARE PHOTOGRAPHIC ENLARGEMENTS FROM ORIGINAL NEGATIVES. THEY ADD A DIGNIFIED TONE TO THE THEATRE FRONT, AS THE CUT SHOWS

ELIMINATING "BUNK" FROM EXHIBITOR ADVERTISING; HOW ONE THEATRE OWNER DID IT

We quote from the house organ of the Empress theatre, Owensboro, Ky:

"No attempt is made in this little bulletin to 'play up' the several attractions in lurid terms. It is merely to post you in a general way on what is in store for you during the week. And why a lot of 'piffle,' anyhow?"

When we read those few sentences, we felt like getting up out of our chair and giving a long cheer for the Empress theatre. Here, we said, is an exhibitor who has learned a great lesson in advertising; he eliminates "bunk."

A good many exhibitors will have to learn this lesson. They still believe in flowery adjectives, high-flown descriptions of pictures, extravagant promises which go unfulfilled. The picturegoer is weary of all this. He is tired of being told th t every picture is better than every other picture which preceded it. Too many exhibitors advertise a film as the "greatest ever produced." If every picture is the greatest, how can there be any degrees of comparison?

Besides, exaggeration in advertising is not good advertising. It defeats its own ends. The exhibitor should remember that his business is dependent upon good-will, primarily; and he cannot keep the goodwill of his community if he makes a lot of promises he can't keep.

Again we say: The only effective way to advertise a film is to get down to brass tacks, and tell something about the picture as an individual picture. To illustrate: here is the Empress's description of "The Great Divide," to which a page of its house organ (the issue before us) is given:

"Photographed in the Grand Canyon, 'The Great Divide,' the play scheduled above, presents some of the most beautiful natural scenery ever presented on a screen. The grandeur of it all is said to be awe-inspiring. This play, by the way, will revive memories of Henry Miller and Margaret Anglin, as it was their starring vehicle. No stage could ever present 'The Great Divide' as does the screen, however."

We don't know whether this description is taken from manufacturer publicity, or is original with the Empress. However that may be, the point is this: When the picturegoer reads that description he knows something about this picture as distinguished from scores of other pictures he has seen. Furthermore, every statement made in the description is true. We happen to know that because we saw the picture ourselves.

The Empress bulletin has not, as yet, divested itself of all adjectives, but it is proceeding along the right road—a road which all exhibitors will have to travel sooner or later. The use of "bunk" is a losing game.

The sooner exhibitors learn this fact, the better for the whole industry. The manufacturers have had to learn it—though some of them have only begun to learn it.

CHILDREN'S PLAYROOM FEATURE OF NEW SEATTLE THEATRE

One of the attractive features of the new Coliseum theatre, Seattle, is a children's playroom, decorated in characters from Mother Goose rhymes, with miniature furniture suited to the size of its little patrons.

AMONG THE EXCHANGES

INTER-MOUNTAIN AIR IS NOT TOO RAREFIED TO MAKE DENVER EXCHANGES GET AFTER BUSINESS

THE Blue Bird Exchange of Denver, reports that Manager Carl Stearn has booked the Blue Bird attractions at the Tabor Grand Opera House. The Tabor Grand is one of the most up-to-date theatres in the city and under the management of Cliff Boyd is expected to break all records with Blue Bird Features.

The Universal Exchange of Denver has installed a projection room in the basement of its offices and has extended invitations to all exhibitors in the inter-mountain territory to be present on Thursday afternoons when the new releases will be shown. Manager Louis Goldstein also reports that business has had an enormous increase since the first of the year. Goldstein is one of the most aggressive exchange managers in the territory, and from the looks of things he knows how to get the business.

Manager Cohn, of the Paramount Exchange of Denver, had a pleasant surprise on Thursday of last week when his brother Martin Cohn, of New York City, dropped off in Denver to say hello. Cohn says he is making every inducement possible to keep brother Martin in Denver.

The exchanges of Denver were honored by visits from several prominent exhibitors during the Western Stock Show, week of January 16. Among them were J. A. Segerburg, manager of the Opera House at Telluride, Col.; Frank Kelly, manager of the Photoplay theatre of Salida, Col.; A. A. Kelly, manager of the Isis theatre of Ouray, Col., and several more of the live-wire exhibitors of the Inter-mountain territory.

Manager Charles R. Gilmore, of the World Film Exchange of Denver, reports that the "Sales Reel," a new idea for the roadman, is proving a good business stimulator.

The Klein-Edison Exchange of Denver, under the management of H. H. Buckwalter, reports business conditions with their exhibitors as improving. Manager Buckwalter received a telegram from his roadman, H. E. Schlerf, one day last week stating that he was tied up in a snow storm between Durango and Alamosa.

In reply to Schlerf's telegram, Buckwalter wired back "Walk in." About four days later Buckwalter received a letter from Schlerf stating that it took the train three days to travel twelve miles, the distance between Durango, Col., and Alamosa, Col.

Manager L. D. Purdy, of the United Film Service of Denver, has appointed R. C. Gardner, formerly of the Friedman Film Service of Denver, as manager of the United Film Service office at Salt Lake City.

"Metro Joe" has at last fallen for the wedding bell serenade, and Manager A. S. Bailey, of the Metro Exchange has taken it upon himself to explain the mystery. "Metro Joe" is a fair young lady of nineteen summers and is known to every exhibitor and exchange man in Colorado.

It seems that on New Year's Day a certain young man answering to the name of "Joy Carter" and "Metro Joe" (Josephine Duffy) were married secretly but, now that Bailey has unveiled the mystery we want the world to know that "Metro Joe" has taken the fatal plunge.

Bailey claims that it was a Reel Film Romance. It is claimed that Miss Josephine is real wise as she is still doing the chief inspecting for the Metro Exchange. We all wish the newlyweds the best of luck and happiness galore.

The Mutual Film Exchange of Denver, reports "The Girl and the Game" going big, and that the booking continues to pour in. Manager Scott is in receipt of a letter from G. I. Keel, manager of the Moving Picture Show at Chama, New Mexico, stating that his theatre was completely demolished by the terrible snow storm that swept New Mexico during the week of January 9.

PATHE OPENS ITS NEW OFFICES IN ALBANY, N. Y.

Pathe Exchange has opened its new office at 398 Broadway, Albany, New York, closing its Syracuse Branch. The Albany office has two floors and the exchange is modeled after the arrangement existing at the Twenty-third Street New York branch of the Pathe.

The arrangements cover the last word in exchange construction, and Mr. Epstein promises that the exhibitors will get the benefit of the very best service that has yet been devised.

Mr. Epstein states that the new Albany branch will cover all the state of New York east of Oswego, Syracuse and Binghamton, south as far as Poughkeepsie and Pennsylvania and north to Canada. Also Vermont and Berkshire County, Mass.

C. E. Briggs will continue to represent the company on the road in the state of New York. A. Sachs will cover the state of Vermont and western Massachusetts, while Duncan Guilfoil will represent the company in Syracuse and surrounding towns.

FOX, IN SYRACUSE, N. Y., CHANGES LOCATION

Picture Playhouse Film Company, the Fox Film Corporation and General Film Company of Syracuse, New York, moved February 1 to 445 South Warren Street, in the building formerly occupied by the Pathe Exchange.

V-L-S-E SALES FORCE UNDER PARTRIDGE HOLD CONVENTION

THE entire sales organization of the Big Four's New York branch, under the management of Joseph Partridge, were called at the home office Sunday, January 23, for a discussion of the distributive policies which the V-L-S-E is promoting in the interest of their exhibitors.

As in the case of the convention held of the Eastern representatives on the preceding Sunday, this discussion had to do principally with the "minimum and maximum" price rating, the "open booking" policy and the proper grading of the box office value of films.

Particular stress was laid upon the fact that not only should exhibitors be permitted to pick those pictures which in their estimation are best suited to their patronage, and they should pay for those features on the basis of each one's individual merit rather than on a flat rate.

At the same time the sales force, it is understood, must take into consideration the exhibitor's limitations as well as his possibilities—in other words, his drawing capacity—and then see to it that he is charged a price that he can afford to pay.

The convention was attended by General Manager Walter W. Irwin, Assistant General Manager A. W. Goff, L. J. Bamberger, manager of the Sales Promotion Department; Joseph Partridge, manager New York branch; F. F. Hartich, assistant manager New York branch, E. L. Masters, advertising and publicity director; V. M. Shapiro, assistant advertising and publicity director; A. M. Webster, manager Syracuse sub-branch; George Balsdon, Jr., booker New York branch, and salesmen Erickson, Farber, Clark, Allen, Reardon, Sherry and Bradner.

SHEEHAN RETURNS TO NEW YORK FROM COAST

General Manager W. R. Sheehan, who went to the Coast with the Fox Film Corporation producing company, has returned East. He was accompanied by Harry Leonhardt, district manager of the mountain and Coast states, who will spend a short time there.

ALL PHILADELPHIA EXCHANGES FEEL IMPETUS OF GENERAL BUSINESS CONDITIONS

AT the Pathé exchange, H. G. Atwood although exhausted from an all day bout with the censors, was more enthusiastic than ever over Gold Roosters. "Yes," said he, "they crow louder every day and with just cause.

"We now have thirty-two theatres in Philadelphia showing Gold Roosters regularly. Here is the list: Regent, Logan Auditorium, Century, Plaza, Rialto, Apollo, Baltimore, New Broadway, Savoy, Market Street, Orient, Belmont, Fifty-second Street, Eureka, Fairmount, Globe, Bartram, Star, Imperial, Lincoln, York Palace, Columbia, Franklin, Mammoth, Drury, Ridge, Lehigh Palace, Rittenhouse, Ontario, Liberty and the Orpheum. The Regent, at Seventeenth and Market, has first runs.

"Madam X," with Dorothy Donnelly, is going big. To cite one of many cases, Manager Hausman, of the Hippodrome in Pottsville, Pa., a town of only 20,000, showed this feature to 3,800 in one day, and so wired immediately for a rebooking the following week.

Large advance bookings are held for "The Horrors of War," a Pathé three reeler of real happenings around the Baltic.

"The Love Trail" is the picture the censors condemned in toto, but after the aforementioned all-day arguments of Mr. Atwood, reversed their decision, so that Pennsylvanians can see it, minus a few scenes.

Metro managers find Metro program improving, and business in consequence taking rapid strides upwards. Francis Bushman's "Man and His Soul" shows the high water mark of Metro progress, thinks Treasurer Bethell.

The fly in the ointment at Metro is also censorship. Manager Clark was famished because all day at the censor headquarters over "A Debt of Honor" had prevented his getting any luncheon. The fate of the picture still hangs in the balance. "Black Fear," which was turned down at first, in the end came through, and is now showing in the state.

Joseph Speiro, at one time manager of the Greater New York Rental Company in Philadelphia, is now managing the Universal part of the Interstate Film Company. With Speiro in the Universal branch and Robert Lynch at the Fairmount Feature end, V. C. Carrick as general manager of Interstate has two able assistants at his elbow.

On account of the absorption of the Greater New York Film Rental Company by the General Film Company, the Philadelphia offices of the former are also non est. Karl Kinzler, the last of the Greater New York's managers, has returned to New York. Austin Interrante, who also was a former manager, has become General Film representative. On Saturday last the move was made bag and baggage to the General's exchange at 130-8 Vine street.

H. H. Buxbaum, the newly elected manager for the General Exchange, is bound to be popular with Philadelphians. Already a new spirit is manifest in the office. Small wonder that the Minneapolis exhibitors presented him with a handsome loving cup on his departure from the Twin Cities. Mr. Buxbaum was born in Nashville, Tenn., and shows his Southern origin by his cordiality and courtesy.

The offices have been remodeled, the changes adding to the efficiency as well as the comfort of the force. Several changes have been made in the personnel of the employees. In the three weeks since Mr. Buxbaum's installation, a marked increase in the business of the Philadelphia branch has been manifest. Now that all service will come from the one office, a still greater increase is looked for within a short period.

"The Strange Case of Mary Page," an Essanay serial on the General program, is at once attaining much popularity in Philadelphia. Its first showing is given every week at the Victoria, one of the Central Market Company's big theatres at Ninth and Market streets.

DEMBOW CALLS MEETING OF FOX SOUTHERN MANAGERS

Following his return from New York, where he attended an important meeting of his company, Sam Dembow, Jr., Southern division manager of the Fox Film Corporation, called a meeting of Fox managers in the Southern territory at New Orleans on Sunday, January 23.

The meeting was called by Mr. Dembow because by a coincidence the managers of the New Orleans, Atlanta, and Dallas Fox exchanges happened to be in the Crescent City on that day.

Those in attendance included William M. Byrd, Dallas; O. P. Hall, Atlanta; R. E. Barron, New Orleans, and Mr. Dembow.

Mr. Dembow addressed his managers and discussed plans for efficient salesmanship and shipping of Fox films. He advised them that Southern headquarters had been shifted from Atlanta to New Orleans.

Mr. Dembow promised co-operation, which he said would be an important subject in Fox matters.

V-L-S-E SALES PLAN MEETS WITH SUCCESS; MANY ADDITIONS MADE TO FORCE

THE operation of the "minimum and maximum" price rating and the "open booking" policy by the Big Four, has resulted in such substantial increases in business that the sales force of the company has had to be materially augmented in practically all of the branches throughout the country.

D. F. Heenan, formerly shipping clerk of the Philadelphia branch, has been promoted to the sales force. His advancement has made possible the promotion of Edward H. Freiberger, of that office, who was formerly an inspector, to the position of shipping clerk.

I. Van Ronkel in Chicago, has added several men to his staff. These include Marnmaduke McCaffrey, who specialized in publicity and sales development work, and who will travel Iowa and part of Illinois; Philip Dunas, formerly with Schiller's Film Company; Frank W. Redfield, formerly of the Fox Film Corporation and the General Film Company; Owen C. Devine, formerly of Robert Stevenson Company, wholesale druggists, and Harry A. O'Brien, formerly of the Famous Players.

Four of these salesmen will work out of Chicago, and the other four in the city.

In Cincinnati, C. E. Shurtleff has added J. A. Conant, recently of the Metro Exchange in Des Moines, to his office, and also James R. Beale, formerly of the Mutual Film Corporation. Mr. Conant will represent the Big Four on the firing line, and Mr. Beale will remain in the Cincinnati office.

Mr. Shurtleff has divided his territory into blocks with the result that P. B. Elliott, of that office, will be responsible for Indiana and Ohio; Mr. Conant, for Ohio and West Virginia, and Mr. Beale, for part of Kentucky and the city of Cincinnati.

J. E. Huey, who has been the booker of the V-L-S-E Dallas office, has been advanced by Branch Manager C. A. Meade, of that office, to the sales force, taking the position made vacant by R. K. Evans, manager of the New Orleans sub-office.

The booking department has been placed in charge of F. J. Murphy, who was previously the shipping clerk in Dallas office. Edward Fogham, who was his assistant, has been promoted to shipping clerk.

In this same office another change has been made, involving the withdrawal of J. B. Dugger from the sales force to the position of assistant branch manager.

Mr. Dugger will also have charge of the advertising and publicity departments of that office.

Fred Solomon, formerly of the V-L-S-E Denver office, will represent that organization in Kansas City hereafter.

In Pittsburgh two new salesmen have been put on, Edward C. Brown and C. D. Roche.

There have been a number of additions to the clerical forces in all of the offices.

TAYLOR OF GENERAL IN OMAHA IS MARRIED

When C. W. Taylor, manager of the General exchange in Omaha, first arrived in that city he was desirous of bettering his reputation as an exchange manager. He had not even a thought of getting married.

But on Sunday, January 16, at the parsonage of All Saints Episcopal Church in Omaha he and Gertrude Bell were married. They are now at home at the Linwood apartments, 218 South Sweetwood avenue. Miss Bell is an Omaha girl, with a wide acquaintance in her home city.

Manager Ph. Goldstone of the World exchange in Omaha, partly to take a rest and partly to celebrate the close of the best year he ever enjoyed as manager, has gone for a trip East. He will visit New York.

FRISCO BOARD OF TRADE ELECTS MARKOWITZ PRESIDENT

The annual meeting of the Film Exchange Board of Trade of San Francisco was held last week in the headquarters of the organization in the Merchants National Bank Building on Market street, officers being chosen as follows: President, M. L. Markowitz, manager of the California Film Exchange; vice-president, X. K. Stout, manager of the Frisco branch of the Mutual Film Company; secretary, L. D. Netter, manager of the All Star Feature Distributors; treasurer, Harry W. Oviatt, manager of the Frisco branch of the Pathé Exchange, Inc.

The board of directors consists of Harry W. Oviatt, M. L. Markowitz, X. K. Stout, Louis Reichert, manager of the Frisco branch of the Metro Pictures, and I. H. Lichenstein, head of the Globe Film Exchange.

A membership committee was appointed, consisting of Fred W. Voigt, manager of the Board of Trade; R. E. Stebbins, department manager of the Progressive Motion Picture Company, and D. Tompkins, manager of the local branch of the United Film Service.

The finance committee appointed consists of J. W. Allen, of the Progressive Motion Picture Company; Louis Reichert and I. H. Lichenstein.

This organization of film men has been in existence for more than a year and during this time it has brought about many changes in the handling of film accounts, with the result that losses from bad accounts have been reduced to a minimum and exhibitors have been spared much competition from irresponsible parties.

EXHIBITORS USE CARDS INSTEAD OF HERALDS FURNISHED BY EXCHANGES

Does it pay to have cards printed instead of buying the heralds furnished by the exchange?

Exhibitors throughout the Middle West have been trying the plan of cards in numerous cases and have found it paid. North Platte, Neb., has quite a few college people in it, so when R. A. Gorman, of the Keith theatre, had "A College Orphan" there he issued cards with this legend on them:

Keith! Keith! Rah! Rah!
What? What? Rah! Rah!
Who Ray! Who Rah!
College Orphan!
Rah! Rah! Rah!

He secured the services of two spruce college men to go about the streets, the school campus and the residence section, giving the yell and distributing the aforesaid cards.

The cards individualize the theatre and its proprietor, emphasizing the town and the community rather than the film manufacturer or distributor, say the exhibitors using them.

In many cases the cards are the size of postals, and in other instances they are the size of regular calling cards.

They will be put in the pocket and kept, instead of being thrown away after being glanced at once, is another argument the exhibitors use in favor of them.

PRICES RAISED IN CRESCENT CITY TERRITORY WITHOUT COMPLAINT FROM PUBLIC

INTEREST of the week in New Orleans centered upon the appointment of a new Fox Film manager in New Orleans, R. E. Barron, of New York. He succeeds S. T. Stephens, who recently resigned to become manager of the Mutual Exchange in that city.

With the return of R. F. Verleye, manager of the Southern Paramount Pictures Corporation, from a two weeks' tour of the Gulf States, announcement was made that an important rearrangement of the Paramount southern territory will at once go into effect.

The New Orleans territory now embraces so many first run houses, that the New Orleans exchange will in the future serve several cities heretofore handled from adjoining Paramount exchanges. Mr. Verleye reports that he installed Paramount service in Biloxi, Pass Christian and Gulfport, for the first time.

This section of the Gulf States is Mr. Verleye's old territory. He traveled it for many months several years ago for another company. He was given a warm welcome by exhibitors through Louisiana and Mississippi.

"Medium sized cities adjacent to New Orleans have seen the value of putting on fifteen-day run services," Mr. Verleye said, "showing that the trend of the public's taste is for brand new releases.

"Exhibitors throughout the territory I visited tell me that they can raise their prices without fear of a resultant loss of patronage, when they offer their patrons new and high-class feature films."

C. E. Tandy, Southern division manager of Paramount, with offices in Atlanta, writes that there has been a great increase in Paramount business for January. He declares that the Bray cartoons, which have made such a hit in New Orleans, are very much in demand throughout the Gulf States.

E. C. Kirkpatrick, until recently manager of the Southern Paramount Pictures Corporation in New Orleans, has been named special representative, handling "The Strange Case of Mary Page" out of that city.

Exchange men in New Orleans heard with interest this week that the new motion picture theatre planned for the two hundred block in Baronne street, New Orleans, now is an assured fact.

The Newman interests of New Orleans, with the addition of Eastern capital, are backing the project. Interesting announcements are expected before next week.

Pathé has rented one of the largest electrically-lighted signs in the city to announce weekly the showing of Gold Rooster Plays. The sign is at Napoleon avenue and St. Charles street, a prominent suburban location of the city.

Gradual but sure strengthening of their regular programs and features, with competition stronger each day, seems to be revolutionizing the New Orleans exchanges.

Nowadays the public clamor is for pictures of the first order, and it is up to the exchanges to furnish the exhibitors the right kind of film.

Two years ago New Orleans was glad to get an occasional good film. At the present time theatres in the Crescent city are billing the best obtainable.

NEW ENGLAND IS GOOD FIELD FOR FILM; SEGAL AFTER 200 THEATRES

RUSHING business is reported by the Boston exchange of the New Film Corporation. The office is managed by H. G. Segal and is located at 16 Piedmont street, next door to the George Kleine exchange and two doors from the Fox film office.

Mr. Segal was formerly manager of the World film exchange in New York and assistant to L. J. Selznick. He has been in charge of the Boston office but three weeks, and already he has booked up nearly sixty theatres throughout New England.

"The New England exhibitor," says Mr. Segal, "is a most pleasant man with whom to have business dealings. Once he finds that you will treat him on the square, he will do business with you continually. But you must treat him square.

"No flim-flam game goes. As a newcomer to this field I find the business flourishing everywhere I look. Already I am booked up to February. There are about 1,100 exhibitors in New England.

"If a man, with good features back of him, can't gather in at least two hundred of these exhibitors, he is no good as an exchange manager. I'm out after the two hundred. If I keep on getting twenty a week, I'll get 'em."

Mr. Segal has three men on the road. H. Fine, formerly connected with the World exchange in Boston, covers New Hampshire and Vermont.

R. W. Cobem, formerly with the Picture Playhouse exchange and with the United Film Service, travels in Connecticut, Rhode Island and Massachusetts. Dave Selznick, a brother of L. J. Selznick, is on the road through part of Massachusetts and Maine.

V-L-S-E TORONTO OFFICE LOCATED AT 15 WILTON AVENUE

The main quarters of the Big Four recently opened in Canada, are located at 15 Wilton avenue, Toronto. A large suite of offices has been obtained at this address and a complete sales and clerical organization established. Although the Big Four has been operated only three weeks across the border, it has had a most encouraging reception.

Many of its big features such as "The Juggernaut," "The Rosary," "The Great Divide," "Graustark" and others, have been booked for long runs in a large number of Dominion cities and are meeting with popular favor.

W. C. Gookin, who is in charge of the interests of the V-L-S-E in that territory, has placed local men on the sales force to represent the Big Four there. These men will cover Canada

DEMBOW RETURNS TO NEW ORLEANS FOR FOX; WORLD FILM ENTERS ANOTHER BUSY PERIOD

AN announcement of importance to the New Orleans territory has been made with the return from New York of Sam Dembow, Jr., Southern division manager of the Fox Film Corporation.

Mr. Dembow brings word that Fox Film has shifted its Southern headquarters from Atlanta to New Orleans, and that he will maintain offices in New Orleans at 832 Common street.

Elaborate preparations are being made to greatly enlarge the Fox New Orleans office. The big headquarters in Common street will be entirely remodelled in keeping with the importance of being headquarters for the entire Southern division.

Fox is the second big film company to shift Southern headquarters from Atlanta to New Orleans. This means that the Crescent City offers one of the biggest advantages in the exchange business—location. Besides being the largest city South, New Orleans has many other advantages, and one is that it is easy to export and import film from that port.

"The Southern territory for Fox will hereafter consist of Dallas, New Orleans and Atlanta," Mr. Dembow said, "Washington, D. C., having been placed in the Eastern division only a week ago."

R. E. Barron, formerly assistant manager of Fox at the Los Angeles office, has been at the New Orleans helm for two weeks, and is rapidly working out the details of the shift with Mr. Dembow. Mr. Barron's appointment was in keeping with the Fox idea of advancing old employees. In keeping with this idea, Mr. Dembow made the following advancements at the New Orleans office:

Walter Pons, from booker to roadman and Charles Gondolfo from shipping clerk to booker.

Ross Hardenbrook, at the World office, told the NEWS representative last week that his exchange was entering an especially busy period, and this is true also of the other New Orleans exchanges.

H. R. Thayer, formerly in this territory for Pathè, is a new man with the World travelling staff.

Maurice F. Barr, New Orleans manager of Bluebirds, Inc., has broken into print. The occasion was a trip to Pine Bluff, Ark., last week, when Mr. Barr spoke to several score exhibitors assembled in that city.

His subject was "Preparedness," and Mr. Barr declared that Uncle Sam could have 50,000 men out of the exhibition branch of the industry alone any time he needed them.

But with preparedness and pleasure Mr. Barr mixed business, and in Pine Bluff closed with J. B. Simon, manager of the Best theatre, for an exclusive Bluebird program.

E. P. Harris, a New Orleans youngster just breaking into the film business, has been named assistant manager to Mr. Barr at the Bluebird office in Gravier street.

"We can't keep up with the demand." The speaker was A. G. Pirolle, manager of the United Film Service. He referred to the official French War Films, which were booked in New Orleans by Paul L. Ford through arrangement with the New Orleans Times-Picayune and the New York World.

The film was shown to splendid patronage at the Tudor theatre, in Canal street, recently, and is making a tour of the surrounding country.

On January 24, work of consolidating the Greater New York Film Rental Company with the General Film Company was accomplished under the direction of H. G. Morrow, the local manager. A. F. Bozman, New Orleans manager for the Greater New York, will remain with General Film, it was announced.

E. J. Farrell, Southern division manager of General, paid a flying visit to the Crescent City during the week.

"Jeanne Dore," with Sarah Bernhardt in the leading role, a recent Blue Bird release, played to capacity houses at the Dreamworld theatre last week.

Prominent visitors on Exchange Row this week included Fred Abbley, owner of the Dixie theatre, in Gulfport, Miss., who was in town to renew his Fox contract.

Nearly a score of local exhibitors, exchange men and newspaper men were guests of Sam Dembow at a private showing of Theda Bara in "The Serpent." The picture will be run at the Alamo theatre.

GOLDBURG MADE CHIEF BOOKER AT "U" IN LOS ANGELES

J. H. Goldburg, who has been connected with the Los Angeles Universal Exchange for the past four years, has been promoted to the position of chief booker and salesman.

V-L-S-E OPENS OFFICE IN SYRACUSE, NEW YORK

The constantly increasing demand for V-L-S-E features throughout New York state, which has been given even an added impetus during the past few months by the active operation of the Big Four's "minimum and maximum" price policy, and its "open booking" methods, has necessitated that organization's opening an office in Syracuse.

This will be a sub-office under the management of Joseph Partridge, the branch manager of the New York territory, and directly in charge of A. M. Webster, who has been representing the Big Four in the western and central parts of the state since last July.

The Syracuse office will serve Buffalo, Rochester, Ithaca and all of the towns in that territory. Several additional salesmen have been added to the New York branch office of the Big Four, and these will travel directly out of Syracuse. All the salesmen will be routed by the "block" system.

McMAHAN AND JACKSON HAVE FIVE KELLERMANN PRINTS WORKING

McMahan and Jackson, of Cincinnati, who hold the state rights for Indiana, Kentucky and Ohio on "Neptune's Daughter," state that their five prints have been working continuously since they purchased them and several of the towns in that section have repeated three and four times.

They have a number of bids in on big features for that territory and hope to secure some other pictures that equal in popularity "Neptune's Daughter."

FRISCO FIRE DEPARTMENT MAY FORM RULES FOR STORAGE OF FILMS

A CAREFUL survey of film storage practice in San Francisco is being made by the fire department of the city and it is being noised about that within a short time an ordinance designed to regulate the storage of motion picture film and to designate the class of buildings in which film exchanges may be located will be introduced before the board of supervisors.

At the present time the regulations for the storage of film are very lax and film exchanges may be located in any building, regardless of its condition.

During the past year a number of the most important exchanges have installed fireproof storage vaults for the safety of their property and to prevent the passage of measures that might jeopardize the industry through being too stringent.

But few exchanges are located in strictly fireproof buildings and not a few are still storing their stock of film on open racks, although all film is kept in metal containers.

The investigation of the fire department is being watched with considerable interest and any new ordinance that is introduced will be carefully scrutinized.

One prominent exchange has already commenced work on a fire-proof building to house its business and another is looking for an available site.

The buildings on Golden Gate avenue, where no less than a dozen film exchanges are now located in one block, are not fireproof structures, but are of the slow-burning type and are occupied almost exclusively by film concerns, so that it is unlikely that there will be any objection made to their continued use.

BARON, FOX, GOES TO NEW ORLEANS FROM LOS ANGELES

R. E. Baron, who has been assistant to manager S. N. Robinson of the Los Angeles Fox Film Corporation branch, has been named manager of the New Orleans exchange at 826 Common street, and left for that city last week.

Mr. Baron will be succeeded at the Los Angeles office by Guy Gunnerson, formerly of the local Pathé exchange.

SITTERLY BUYS THE BLACKWELL EXCHANGE IN BUFFALO

Harry Marcy and John N. Sitterly, owners of the Popular Film Exchange of Buffalo, New York, have bought out the interests of the M. H. Blackwell Film Exchange in the Chapin Block, Buffalo, N. Y., and moved their present office to the newly acquired exchange.

Looking Ahead With The Producers

USSELL PLAYS IN VARSITY FOOTBALL TEAM FOR A SCENE IN "THE CRAVING," AN AMERICAN

E AMERICAN'S FOOTBALL TEAM IN "THE CRAVING" AND THE MEDIAEVAL CASTLE BUILT FOR "THE WHITE ROSETTE"

THERE will be no fake about the foot- ball scenes in "The Craving," a drama college and of western life by William rker, which is being produced at the nerican studios at Santa Barbara.

When Director Charles Bartlett reached se scenes he put all of his principals on train and took them to Pasadena, Cali- nia, where the Washington State Col- e team played the Brown University even on New Year's day.

The company arrived the day before the me and after Bartlett had talked with one Star" Deitz, the Washington coach, football wizard agreed to allow Wil- m Russell, who has the lead in "The Caving," to go through practice with the m before the camera.

As a result Bartlett was able to film me of the speediest football that has er been "shot."

The picture people stayed over to see e game the next day and rooted enthu- stically while their college friends de- feted the husky Brown gridiron warriors the first time that a team from the ex- me west has overcome one from the treme east in a championship football ntest.

The construction of a portion of a dieval castle for what is essentially a dern drama was the course taken re- ntly at the American studios at Santa rbara.

The story is "The White Rosette," by rothy Rochfort, and although it deals inly with "big business" and love in dern times, one of the effects is ob- ined by a suggestion of reincarnation.

In those scenes all of the principal char- ers are shown in a medieval intrigue ich closely parallels the problem they e in the modern struggle.

The castle was surrounded by a moat and had a draw-bridge and portcullis, creating an atmosphere that was reminiscent of Sir Walter Scott.

The main roles in "The White Rosette" are taken by E. Forrest Taylor, Helene Rosson, Eugenie Forde and Harry Von Meter. While the castle scenes were being "shot," the cast, with Director Donald Macdonald and the author, was snapped by a camera which was not supposed to be on the ground.

ROBERT EDESON WILL STAR IN PATHE'S "BIG JIM GARRITY"

The cast in Pathé's "Big Jim Garrity," adapted from the A. H. Woods play of the same name, has been selected by George Fitzmaurice, the producer.

It comprises Robert Edeson, Carl Harbaugh, Lyster Chambers and Eleanor Woodruff. Mr. Edeson has just finished with another Gold Rooster play, "The Light That Failed."

Carl Harbaugh used to appear in Pathé productions when that concern had a stock company in Jersey City. Lyster Chambers played the villain in "At Bay" and Eleanor Woodruff starred in Pathé pictures two years ago.

CONSTANCE COLLIER IN HER SECOND MOROSCO SUBJECT

Following her screen debut in "The Tongues of Men," a Morosco-Paramount production, Constance Collier has begun work on her second picture for Morosco, "The Code of Marcia Gray," written for her by Frank Lloyd, the Morosco director.

The chief support to the star is offered by Forrest Stanley, and Harry DeVere. Under Director Lloyd's supervision, several magnificent interiors have been built for the Collier film, it is announced.

SINGLE REEL KALEM COMEDY FOR WEDNESDAY RELEASE INSTEAD OF TWO-REEL DRAMA

The Kalem company announces a new Wednesday release on the General Film Company program. The space on the program hitherto occupied by a two-reel drama will on February 16 be taken by a single reel comedy release.

The subjects will feature Ethel Teare, who has been seen to such advantage for the past year in "Ham and Bud" comedies. Miss Teare has gained a large following among picture fans, and evidences of her popularity with exhibitors and fans which reached the Kalem company caused the officials to inaugurate the new line of comedies.

A capable comedy company will support Miss Teare in the new subjects, with Jack MacDermott among the well known Kalem fun-makers who will be seen.

"A Molar Mix Up," is the subject which will start the new line on February 16. In this initial release Bud Duncan is also prominent.

The story is one of mixed couples and jealousies, with a dentist's home the seat of the trouble.

"UNFORGIVABLE SIN" NEXT BLINN VEHICLE FOR WORLD

Holbrook Blinn, under the direction of Barry O'Neil, is working on a new World Film feature temporarily entitled "The Unforgivable Sin," in which Mr Blinn will have the stellar role.

A QUINTET OF FEBRUARY VITAGRAPHS. Left to right: "THE SURPRISES OF AN EMPTY HOTEL," "FROM OUT OF THE PAST," "BETTY, THE BOY AND THE BIRD," "A CRIPPLE CREEK CINDERELLA," AND "FREDDY'S LAST BEAN"

FIFTEEN REELS OF DRAMA AND COMEDY SET FOR RELEASE BY VITAGRAPH WEEK OF FEB. 7

FIFTEEN reels of drama and comedy will be released by the Vitagraph in the week of Monday, February 7. They comprise a five-part Blue Ribbon Feature, "The Crown Prince's Double"; a four-part drama, "The Surprises of an Empty Hotel;" a three-part Broadway Star Feature, "From Out of the Past," and three one-reelers, "A Cripple Creek Cinderella," "Betty, the Boy and the Bird," and "Freddy's Last Bean."

"The Crown Prince's Double," released on Monday, February 7, features Maurice Costello in a romantic drama that has its climax in his refusal to relinquish the true love of an American girl, for a mere kingdom in Europe.

He plays the character of the Prince and that of a young American who is hired to assume the Prince's identity. Costello is supported by an all-star cast of Vitagraphers, including Anders Randolf, Thomas Mills, Howard Hall, Anna Laughlin and others.

"The Surprises of an Empty Hotel" is a four-reel drama written by Archibald Clavering Gunter, produced by Theodore Marston, picturized by Jasper E. Brady and released on February 7.

The 100-foot yacht Wayward, formerly the luxurious plaything of a New York millionaire, was blown to pieces in Raritan Bay to furnish a climax for the mystery that the play tells of.

Charles Richman and Arline Pretty in the leading roles are assisted by William Dunn, Leo Delaney, Robert Gaillard, Ethel Corcoran and Charles Eldridge.

In a lock reel with this film is a one-part comedy-drama from the Coast players of the Vitagraph, entitled "A Cripple Creek Cinderella."

William Duncan, Alfred Vosburgh, Carleton Weatherby and others portray the principal roles.

The girl in the play is a dance hall beauty who loses her slipper. That article is found by a miner who uses it to mark a claim with and when the mine develops a rich lead, he determines to wed its owner.

He is shocked to find that the girl works in the dance-hall, but when she saves his life he decides that she is good enough for him.

Another Monday release is "Betty, the Boy and the Bird," showing Zena Keefe in a comedy by Wilfrid North, produced by Tefft Johnson. Gerald Gordon, a new face among Vitagraphers, makes his bow to the motion picture public.

"Freddy's Last Bean," a one-part comedy produced by Frank Currier, written by Agnes C. Johnston, serves to show William Dangman in a new type. Dangman played Freddie the Ferrett in "The Goddess."

An all-star cast of Vitagraphers is seen in the Broadway Star Feature, "From Out of the Past," written by Ruth Handforth and produced by William Humphrey.

The latter, Belle Bruce, Harry Northrup, Charles Wellesley, Garry McGarry, Bobby Connelly, Carolyn Birch, Eulalie Jensen and Lillian Burns are seen in the film.

The story tells of the double life led by a wealthy man and the subsequent meeting of his daughter and a youth believed to be his son. It is released on Saturday, February 12.

RIVALRY BETWEEN TWO TOWNS THEME OF HENRY McRAE FILM

The tale of rivalry between two small towns entitled "Rival Towns," is being produced by Henry McRae at Universal City, from scenario by Frank M. Wiltermood. This is of a highly melodramatic nature, in which the dynamiting of a dam of an artificial reservoir causes a flood which is intended to wipe out one city, but destroyed the other.

The plotters are all killed, and the hero, of course, saves the heroine. Edwin N. Wallock plays the lead part, that of the founder and builder of one city. Lee Hill is appearing as the juvenile lead; Orra Carew, Jack Curtis, and H. Barrington make up the remainedr of the cast.

"LONESOME PINE," WITH CHARLOTTE WALKER, A LASKY, READY FEBRUARY 14

Produced by Cecil B. De Mille, "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," with Charlotte Walker as the star, in the role in which she achieved her greatest success on the dramatic stage, will be released by the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Company on the Paramount Program on February 14.

The photoplay written by Mr. De Mille, is based on the dramatic version by Eugene Walter from the novel by John Fox, Jr.

"The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" is a romance of the Cumberland mountains. Before Miss Walker appeared in the stage version under the direction of Klaw and Erlanger she spent some time in the locale of the play.

In the cast of Lasky players who appear in support of Miss Walker are Theodore Roberts, Thomas Meighan, and Earl Fox.

"BEHIND CLOSED DOORS," EQUITABLE, CHANGED TO "LOVE'S CROSS ROADS"

"Behind Closed Doors," the Equitable production which was to have been released Monday, January 31, and in which Marie Empress and Wright Huntington co-star, will make its screen bow under an entirely new title.

The picture is to be known as "Love's Cross Roads," and will go over the Equitable program as the regular release and with no change other than the title.

The change in title was made necessary by reason of the releasing two weeks ago by another producing company, of a feature which parallels the story, in a way, and which bore a title rather similar.

"Behind Closed Doors" consequently will be known as "Love's Cross Roads."

MISS NILSSON CAST FOR "TO HIM THAT HATH"

Anna Q. Nilsson, who will be remembered for her work in "Regeneration," has been cast to play opposite Robert Warwick in "To Him That Hath," for the Premo Company.

NANCE O'NEIL GOING SOUTH FOR "FIRES OF ST. JOHN"

Messrs. Singhi and Lowry, of the Lubin company, have chartered a special train to take Nance O'Neil together with Director Edgar Lewis and the company of 35 people to Thomasville, Ga., where the exterior scenes for the "Fires of St. John," in which Miss O'Neil will shortly be seen, can be made without having to flounder through snow drifts knee high.

Miss O'Neil will be remembered for her portrayal of the leading character in "The Fires of St. John," in the late McKee Rankin's company with whom she co-starred during the later years of Rankin's life.

The screen version of "The Fires of St. John" was made by Alfred Hickman. The special train consisting of four Pullmans, a dining car and baggage car will leave Philadelphia Saturday evening and proceed directly to Thomasville.

"Fires of St. John" will be released immediately upon its completion on the V-L-S-E program, date of which will be announced later.

FIRST MIDDLETON MASTERPICTURE FOR GAUMONT IS "THE SORCERESS"

The first Mutual Masterpicture Edwin Middleton will direct for the Gaumont company at Jacksonville, Fla., is "The Sorceress," a five-reel feature from the pen of O. A. Nelson.

Mr. Nelson is the author of many popular Gaumont successes, including two of the favorite photodramas which are now on the screen, "The Acc of Death" and "As a Woman Sows."

Mr. Middleton has been directing at the Flushing studios of the Gaumont Company, but he will spend the rest of the season at the Jacksonville headquarters.

"MARTYRDOM OF PHILIP STRONG," EDISON, RELEASED FEB. 9

"The Martyrdom of Philip Strong," an Edison feature, founded on the Rev. Charles M. Sheldon's famous work, "The Crucifixion of Philip Strong," scheduled for release through Kleine-Edison Features, February 9, is, in the opinion of the George Kleine forces, one of the best productions the Edison Company has ever made.

It was reviewed last week at the Kleine studios before a representative audience of Kleine branch managers and prominent New York exhibitors. The subject features Robert Conness and Mabel Trunnelle in the respective roles of the minister and his wife.

Lovers of Sheldon's story will remember the many situations offering a wealth of opportunity for strong dramatic work. The death of the minister's child, his renunciation of a life of luxury and all hope of material reward in his chosen calling, his battle against the organized forces of riches and vice, and his final defeat at the hands of death itself, are the outstanding elements of the drama.

MISS YOUNG CAST FOR "THE YELLOW PASSPORT," RELEASED FEB. 7

The next feature of the World Film Corporation starring Clara Kimball Young is announced for release on February 7. It has now been definitely decided to call the picture, directed by Edwin August, "The Yellow Passport."

The cast in support of Miss Young is worthy of mention, including as it does, Edwin August, John Stinpolis, Mrs. Ed. Kimball, Florence Hackett, Nicholas Dunaew, Ed Kimball, Robert Cummings, Alec B. Francis, Adolph Lestina, John Boyle and other players said to be quite as well known.

CLAIRE WHITNEY AND SHAY FINISH "RULING PASSION"

Claire Whitney and William E. Shay have completed work in the William Fox photoplay, "The Ruling Passion," which was made at the Fox studios in Kingston, Jamaica. The picture has an Oriental coloring and deals with the power of an Indian prince who is skilled in the art of the Eastern mystics.

"SILAS MARNER" FINISHED BY WARDE FOR THANHOUSER

Ernest Warde, Thanhouser director, has finished "Silas Marner," in which his distinguished father, Frederick Warde, is starred.

The cast includes almost all of the Thanhouser stars, among them Mlle. Valkyrien, the Baroness Dewitz.

CITY OFFICIALS TO SEE "V'S" "WRITING ON THE WALL"

At a time when so many disastrous fires are causing loss of life through inadequacy of protection against fire, the latest feature film of the Vitagraph Company, just completed, comes at an opportune time. The officials of the Vitagraph Company plan to give a press exhibition in the near future at which Fire Commissioner Adamson and other city officials will be invited.

"The Writing on the Wall" bases its theme on the matter of fire protection. In filming the production, Director Tefft Johnson constructed two one-story stores in the lot opposite the Vitagraph studios in Flatbush, equipped them thoroughly as a paint shop and a clothing store and then proceeded to burn them up.

He staged a scene with three hundred school children running panic-stricken from the suffocating fume of the smoke and portrayed a scene that differs little from almost daily occurrences in this city.

Joseph Kilgour appears with Naomi Childers, Virginia Pearson, Bobby Connelly, Charles Wellesley and others. "The Writing on the Wall" is a Blue Ribbon Feature, written by William J. Hurlburt, picturized by Marguerite Bertsch and is released as a five part drama on Monday, February 14.

"MARBLE HEART" SENT FROM JAMAICA FOR FOX

The last boat from Kingston, Jamaica, brought William Fox a new picture entitled "The Marble Heart," in which a long cast of photoplay stars appear, including Walter McCullough, Rhy Alexander, Henry Armetta, Mrs. Louise Rial, Violet Horner, Harry Burkhardt, Walter Miller, Hal De Forrest, Mlle. Marcelle, Mark Price, Sr., and Arthur Leslie.

GARRICK DIRECTS "ACCORDING TO LAW" FOR GAUMONT

Richard Garrick, supervising director of Gaumont stock companies, will himself direct "According to the Law." In this five-reel feature which will be released as a Mutual Masterpicture, de luxe edition, Howard Hall will be starred. The scenario was written by Paul M. Bryan and Joseph H. Trant.

TRIANGLE RELEASES FOR FEBRUARY PRESENT ARRAY OF STARS, INCLUDING BILLIE BURKE

EIGHT Griffith and Ince dramatic features, together with the usual quota of Keystone comedies from the Mack Sennett studios, are announced by the Triangle Film Corporation for release to exhibitors during the month of February.

Of prime importance are the general film debuts of Billie Burke and De Wolf Hopper. Both stars have been shown in New York and "Don Quixote" and "Peggy" have received metropolitan approval.

Douglas Fairbanks is due for his third Triangle release. Also in prospect is the first screen appearance of William Collier.

For the week of February 6, "Acquitted," with Wilfred Lucas, and Orrin Johnson in "D'Artagnan," a film adaptation of "The Three Musketeers" of Dumas, will be released.

Griffith has provided a typical Fine Arts cast in support of Lucas, who in "Acquitted" is rewarded for his good work with Lillian Gish and Rozsika Dolly in "The Lily and the Rose" and with Marie Doro in "The Wood Nymph" by big type honors.

"His Picture in the Papers," the new Fairbanks comedy, and "Honor's Altar" follow. In the latter drama from Inceville Bessie Barriscale and Walter Edwards are featured with Lewis S. Stone, the well known leading man in Broadway productions.

Fairbanks made "His Picture in the Papers" under the direction of John Emerson in and aronnd New York.

The week of February 20 brings the Billie Burke picture, "Peggy."

Thomas H. Ince spared no expense to obtain this favorite legitimate star, was extravagant in his staging of the play and assembled a cast headed by the veteran character actor, William H. Thompson, which included Charles Ray, William Desmond and Gertrude Claire.

The Griffith contribution for that week is Lillian Gish in "Daphne." The French atmosphere of this piece is in marked contrast to the Scotch settings of "Peggy."

Right on the heels of this combination of star features is the general release of De Wolf Hopper in the picture play version of the "Don Quixote" of Cervantes.

Interest in "Don Quixote" is doubled by the appearance of the big comedian and the first pictorial presentation of the Spanish classic. The popular William S. Hart is joined with Hopper in the closing February releases.

A western play called "Hell's Hinges" is the medium in which this actor is presented. Real spectacle is provided by the burning of an entire town which was built especially for this picture.

ESSANAY GETS LOWLIFE TYPES FOR "VULTURES OF SOCIETY"

Work now is well under way for Essanay's five-act feature, "Vultures of Society," which will be released in February through the V-L-S-E. This photoplay, written by Richard Goodall, deals with a problem of the present day.

It treats of two angles of the social problem; with the men well established in society, who hunt down young girls in the lower walks of life, and with those who have gained entrance to society through false letters or shady means in order to prey on the wealthy victims at whose homes they are guests.

Types of the underworld, from the cocaine fiend to the genial colored porter, are being chosen by Director E. H. Calvert. Mr. Calvert has been combing the slum districts of Chicago to find the types he wants.

Many of these have proved so undependable that Mr. Calvert has corralled those needed to appear from day to day and placed over them a guardian, who accompanies them to and from their hotels and sees that they do not escape nor get more than their rightful and rational share of the cup that cheers.

The play will feature Lillian Drew, Marguerite Clayton, E. H. Calvert and Ernest Maupain.

THREE ONE REELERS READY FROM K & R

The K. & R. Film Company announces its first releases of all star, one reel productions as follows:

Violet Horner in "At the End of the Rainbow"; Clara Joel in "A Naval Tragedy," and Ivy Payne in "The Arabian Dancing Girl."

CODY CAST FOR "HOUSES OF MYSTERY"

Lewis J. Cody, who has had a long and successful stage career, will be seen in a current release of the Knickerbocker Star Features. He is especially remembered for his work in "Pierre of the Plains," "The Virginian" and "Jimmie Valentine." One of his most successful screen dramas was "The Mating," in which he starred with Bessie Barriscale.

In "The Houses of Mystery," released January 21 on the General Film Program, Mr. Cody plays the part of the young prosecuting attorney, whose "butterfly wife," easily lured into the way of the bright lights by a wayward brother of the attorney, find themselves in a mesh of circumstances which result in crime.

The innocent, in the grip of circumstantial evidence, pays the penalty for the crime of another, while the wife of the wronged man, metes out justice to the guilty, while the attorney, haunted by the memory of men he has sent to their deaths, awakens to realize the dangers of circumstantial evidence, in cases of murder, and becomes an advocate for its abolition.

NIGH SEARCHES FOR "RUSSIAN SETS" NEAR NEW YORK FOR A METRO

Four special automobiles have been chartered for use in making the exterior scenes for "The Kiss of Hate," the Metro subject in which Ethel Barrymore will be starred.

The feature has just been put in production under the direction of William Nigh, who produced "A Yellow Streak," "Emmy of Stork's Nest," "Her Debt of Honor," and other Metro pictures.

Many of the exterior scenes must be photographed in surroundings covered with snow, as the story is laid in Russia. Mr. Nigh has experienced considerable difficulty finding locations with a proper Russian atmosphere around New York City.

It would be easy to find a suitable location in the Maine or Canadian woods, but since Miss Barrymore is playing a stage engagement at the Lyceum theatre, New York City, starring in "Our Mrs. McChesney," it will be impossible for her to be very far from the city.

EXHIBITOR MAKES TEST CASE OF SUNDAY OPENING

An organized effort was made by the motion picture theatre proprietors of Lafayette, Ind., Sunday, January 23, to give Sunday shows, and the Orpheum theatre, owned by John M. Chamberlin, was opened to make a test case.

The doors had been opened but an hour when five policemen swooped down on the place and arrested Misha Rubinoff, of Chicago, who had the theatre rented for the day, and Arthur Lyday, the picture machine operator, who lives in Indianapolis.

The two men were taken to police headquarters, where they gave bond in the sum of one hundred dollars. They then returned to the theatre and continued to run pictures. They were arrested the second time, gave bond again and went back and continued the picture show.

The police then went to the theatre, without making any affidavits against the two men and took them before Judge Fred Prass, of the city court. The latter refused them bail. They were taken to jail and remained there two hours.

Daniel P. Flanagan, attorney for the theatre, had Judge H. H. Vinton called to the Tippecanoe County court room and had issued a writ of habeas corpus on Sheriff Slayback. Judge Vinton granted the petition for habeas corpus and the two men were released. He said the men were not given time to obtain bail.

Hundreds of people assembled in front of the theatre during the raid by the police and great excitement prevailed. The picture men say they have won a victory, and the case was to be tried the Wednesday following.

For some time an effort has been made to have the film theatres open on Sunday, but the city administration has opposed the Sunday shows.

POLICE IN PITTSBURGH SHOW UNDUE ACTIVITY IN DISCHARGING THEIR DUTIES

Onee more the Pittsburgh police department has become active against motion picture theatres, and plain clothes men are seen scattered through the audiences on the lookout for things to cause trouble either on the screen or in the audience.

There is little if any tact shown by the officers in making arrests in the theatres, and several times persons have been placed under arrest and dragged through the audiences instead of waiting until the person walked to the rear of the theatre.

CENSOR BOARD OF NASHVILLE CALLS MEETING TO ACT ON WRENNE RESIGNATION

A MEETING of the board of censorship of Nashville, Tenn., will be called in the next few days by Mayor Ewing to consider the many matters that come under the jurisdiction of the board.

It has been several months since the last meeting of the board, and it is understood that many complaints and protests on moving pictures, amusements and public performances have arisen both before the commission and members of the board that warrant their attention.

One of the principal matters that will be brought before the board of censorship is the resignation of David P. Wrenne from that body. This resignation was placed in the hands of the mayor several weeks ago, but on account of the many other matters occupying the mayor's attention has never been acted upon.

Mr. Wrenne's chief reason in resigning was his opinion that the board had little opportunity to protect itself from unjust criticism.

It is his belief that most of the censure directed at the board of censorship comes after a moving picture has been shown in Nashville and too late for any steps to be taken on the part of the board.

He also is of the opinion that most of the members of the board are too busy to give the time and attention to the amusements of the city that they should in order to properly regulate them.

Another question which is likely to force itself upon the attention of the meeting of the board of censorship is that of passing upon "The Birth of a Nation," announced for exhibition in Nashville at the Vendome during the week of January 24.

This picture has been opposed in many of the cities in which it has been shown, and there is said to be a movement on foot to prohibit its display in Nashville.

It is based on "The Clansman," a play that the city commission forbade showing at a Nashville playhouse, but that held its performance by enjoining the commission from interference.

The board of censorship, which was appointed by the members of the former commission, is as follows: Charles Cohn, chairman; W. J. Wallace, E. C. Faircloth, David P. Wrenne and George W. Brandon.

The resignation of Mr. Wrenne will be considered at the meeting to be called by the mayor.

THIRTY-TWO BILLS AFFECTING MOTION PICTURES INTRODUCED IN BAY STATE LEGISLATURE

WITH thirty-two bills filed at the Massachusetts state house in the mad rush to legislate for and against motion pictures, the state exhibitors' league has its work cut out for itself in the present session of the legislature.

There is no doubt but that one or two, or maybe a half dozen of those bills, call for state censorship of films, but they have not been printed yet.

It has been discovered that the bill, already mentioned in these columns, which would prohibit any film from running longer than thirty minutes without the introduction of some other form of entertainment, is sponsored by the vaudeville interests.

Now, on the face of things, putting aside the contention that this bill is promoted simply to relieve the optics of the film audiences, it is evident that it is the little fellow in the small town who would be hardest hit if the measure became a law.

His big brother in the city would not find it so hard to fill in those intermissions; but the little man in the small place would face a real hardship if his features were cut down.

But the exhibitors league has got busy on this bill already. At the last moment it filed a bill to bring the vaudeville booking agencies under the classification of employment agencies.

As such they would have to pay the usual employment agency fee. The exhibitors, fully awakened now by the experiences of last session, will not stand idly by and see their rights infringed.

WINNIPEG PUTS BAN ON TEN REELS IN DECEMBER

During December, the number of motion picture reels condemned by the Winnipeg censorship commitee of three, was ten. Five hundred and eleven were passed.

Pieces to the number of 139 were eut out of the reels for various reasons, such as murder displays, robbery, burglary, suicide, indeeency, suggestive scenes and objectionable sub-titles.

CENSORS FINE FILM MEN IN WESTERN PENNSYLVANIA

Information has been received in Harrisburg, Pa., that the Pennsylvania State Board of Motion Picture Censors, whose headquarters are in that city, is continuing its aggressive campaign of prosecuting motion exhibitors and exchange men in western Pennsylvania.

Fines aggregating $1,020 were imposed this afternoon by Alderman Louis Alpern, in Pittsburgh, upon thirteen managers of motion picture theatres or film exchanges, on charges that films that were not approved by the censors was shown.

In a single case the fines totaled $325.

The information was given by Mrs. E. C. Niver, one of the three members of the censorship board, and by Florence Wrenshall, an inspector employed by the board. The cases were disposed of as follows:

Joseph Skirboll, Metro Film Service, $50; J. Casper, Regent theatre, Penn avenue, $10 (two charges); C. W. Eckhard, Fox Film Corporation, $50; F. Flynn, Eureka Film Exchange, $10 (two charges); Jacob Glowcki, Palonia theatre, 1209 Carson street, South Side, $20 (two charges); B. F. Lyon, Pathé Exchange, $25; C. C. McKibbon, Triangle Film Corporation, $50 (two charges); A. McClelland, New Film Company, $325 (three charges); W. T. Kinson, Mutual Film Corporation, $30 (two charges); L. Snitzer, Greater New York Film Rental Company, $75 (two charges); M. F. Gibbons, George Kleine, $100 (two charges); J. S. Behan, J. Frank Hatch Film Company, $25; Charles Schwerin, World Film Corporation, $250 (three charges).

LOUISVILLE PICTURE MEN PROTEST AGAINST FEDERAL CENSORSHIP

Members of the Louisville Photoplay Association and exhibitors from various sections of Kentucky have sent letters to the Kentucky representatives in Congress urging them to vote against the proposed bill providing for government censorship for motion pictures.

The Kentucky exhibitors take the ground that such a law is unnecessary and a curtailment of American rights. A copy of the letter is as follows:

"I, the undersigned, do hereby enter my protest against the proposed Federal censorship of motion pictures. I consider it un-American and entirely unnecessary. I believe that the laws on the statute books of the United States and the various sovereign states are ample to deal with such motion pictures as offend against public decency.

"This is a well proven fact. Motion pictures are a medium of expression like the newspaper. The newspaper is free but subject to the law for an abuse of its liberty. We ask the same enfranchisement for the motion picture."

OCEAN FILM TAKES "LIFE WITHOUT SOUL" TO COURT AFTER PENNSYLVANIA CENSORS ACT

NOTIFICATION that the Pennsylvania State Board of Censors have condemned "Life Without Soul," the initial release of the Ocean Film Corporation, was received by that company, having been forwarded through the Electric Theatre Supply Company, who hold the franchise for the control of the Ocean Film productions for eastern Pennsylvania.

The notification merely stated that the production was "condemned in accordance with section 6 of the act. See Standards 1, 6, and 15."

Mr. Goldburg, the vice-president and general manager of the Ocean Film Corporation, immediately filed a protest with the Board of Censors, and a re-hearing and a re-review was had last Tuesday, at which review Mr. Goldburg was present.

The production was run, and although but two members of the committee reviewed the production at that time, at a consultation had with other members of the committee it was again voted to condemn the production.

The company endeavored to ascertain the particular reason or reasons for this condemnation, but got no satisfaction.

The directors of the Ocean Film Corporation have determined to press the matter, and have instructed their council in Philadelphia to institute legal proceedings.

"NEWS" FILM DIRECTORY ONLY RELIABLE ONE IN EXISTENCE

From the Photoplay Department of the Cleveland Plain Dealer:

"The studio directory section of the current issue of Motion Picture News is the best photoplay 'Who's Who' yet published. It is the only complete and reliable directory in existence.

"Ridiculous prices have been asked in the past for motion picture directories that have been notoriously unreliable and incomplete. The Motion Picture News directory is part of the regular issue of the paper for January 29 and costs the buyer nothing extra.

"This big section is the most serviceable contribution to photoplay data yet published. The compilers are to be congratulated on their worth while effort."

SEATTLE DAILY "TIMES" REPRINTS "NEWS" EDITORIAL

The Seattle Daily Times, in its issue of January 20, devoted three-quarters of a column to an editorial which recently appeared in Motion Picture News. The Times reprinted this editorial under the following head:

"Editor Condemns False Advertising—Head of Motion Picture News Denounces House Managers Who Convey Wrong Ideas in Paid Announcements."

The editorial itself was introduced as follows:

"William A. Johnston, president and editor of Motion Picture News, the foremost motion picture trade paper, has an editorial in the last issue of the 'News' which is of great interest."

JUST TO MAKE TALK

By LONGACRE

FROM sources outside the regular channels, we have it that at 9:27 o'clock on the morning of January 22, 1916, Mary Miles Minter fell into a barrel of flour in the Rolfe-Metro studios.

The flour had been placed there for use in a comedy kitchen scene, and was for the use of other comedians besides Mary. But she was showing what she could do while the camera was being set, and tumbled over into the flour.

The punch of the story lies in this: Mary rushed out to wash the flour from her face, but only succeeded in turning it into a good stiff batter, most of which sought refuge in her hair. It was baked into small loaves before it could be removed.

This week's issue of Reel Life, the regular publication issued by the Mutual offices, is entitled "Censorship Number." We have examined it thoroughly and find little in it to comfort the censorship advocates.

President John R. Freuler devotes several pages to a careful and thorough study of the subject, and makes clear his attitude in opposition to the federal censorship bill. There is no doubt as to where he stands, or why he stands there.
